PUBLISHER'S NOTE I to noithe

THE Upanisads are the culmination of the Vedas. Therefore they are known as the Vedanta. The religious message given by Svāmī Vivekānanda was based on the Vedanta. The Svamījī urged his followers to popularise the thoughts treasured in the Upanisads at home and abroad. Bearing this idea in mind the second president of this Math started the Upanisad Series thirty-five years ago. Each Upanisad belonging to this Series contains the text in bold Devanāgarī type, word-by-word meaning, translation based on tradition, Introduction briefly summarizing the subject matter, and elaborate Notes. About a dozen Upanisads were specially illuminated by the superb Commentary of S'rī S'ankarācārya, who lived over one thousand years ago. They are the most anthoritative Upanisads; and eleven of them are now made available in this Series. Most of them have undergone many editions and reprints, and have gained popularity in several parts of the world. Heartened by this wide welcome given to the Unanisad Series, we now publish the Mahānārāyanopanisad which, as far as we know, has not yet been translated into English fully and with complete explanation.

The special importance of this text, which is counted as part of the Kṛṣṇayajurveda, to the religious Hindu is perhaps unequalled by any other work of its class. We have therefore endeavoured to bring out a suitable edition of this abstruse text with aids for understanding its traditional import. An interpretation of the text in easy Sanskrit is a new feature of this publication. This is specially added with a view to help those readers who know only Sanskrit and not English. It will also render the received meaning clearer to those users of the translation who possess some knowledge of Sanskrit.

Much religious material has been digested into the critical and explanatory Notes. This is intented to meet the needs of those who value this sacred text particularly for its spiritual and devotional use. The practice of putting notes on words indicated by superior figures was the custom in the preceding members of the Series. It has been given up here in order to make the reading of the explanatory Notes smooth and continuous. This Upanişad together with its preceding Prapāthaka—divided into S'ikṣā-Ānanda-Bhṛgu-Vallīs—is chanted solemnly on special religious occasions. So the text is given here with accent marks in order to facilitate its recital. This will be welcomed by those who have no long training in the customary Vedic recitation.

MODERN investigations have revealed that the 2600 million people on this globe speak 2796 different languages and dialects belonging to different families of speech. Of these, those that have a long literary past and are still influencing the thought of millions of people are not very many. The collection of hymns, litanies and prayers, under the comprehensive term Vedas, transmitted by oral tradition for several centuries before the introduction of writing, is accepted as the oldest literature available for the purpose of studying the religious thoughts exercising a considerable influence over the people of a significant part of Asia for many millenniums. Those languages which have preserved past thoughts in literary form, either as written records or oral traditions, alone have been a recognizable power in the evolution of the intellectual, moral and spiritual life of mankind. The scattered splinter-speech communities have not produced any literary heirloom devolving to succeeding generations to reflect upon, adopt, and exemplify; and, consequently, they have not made any deep impression on human civilization. The dialects which have sustained the intercourse of many small groups of people have changed and even disappeared without a vestige. The literature preserved in the Vedas through the religious fervour of a highly sensitive people who paid the greatest attention to the careful training of the ear for sound, for rhythm, speech melody, and precision of grammar uncontaminated by local idioms, stands almost unique in the history of human culture. Today the study of the Vedas has, therefore, attracted the attention and interest of people in various parts of the world.

An account of the nature and division of the Vedas will be found in the Introduction to the Isavasyopanisad included in the Upanisad Series published by the Ramakrishna Math. This publication is the twelfth in the Series. In the collection of One-hundred-andeight Upanisads, published several times from Bombay and other places, two works are included with the title Nārāyanopanisad. Of these the longer one includes a variety of subjects of great importance in the daily observances of a religious Hindu. It is accepted as a part of the Kṛṣṇayajurveda and is distinguished generally by the designation Mahānārāyanopanişad. The same Upanisad is known also as Yājñikī-upanişad on the ground that Yajñātmā Nārāyaņa is considered to be the seer of this part of the Veda. Like the other Vedas the Yajurveda is divided into samhita and brāhmaṇa. The Taittirīya recension of it has the Taittirīyāranyaka as an extension of the brāhmana. The Tattirīyāranyaka according to Sāyanācārya has ten prapāthakas of which this Upanisad forms the last one. Bhattabhaskara who wrote a Commentary on the whole of Yajurveda, anterior to Sayana, substitutes the term prasma for the division heading prapāṭhaka, and calls this as the last pras'na. Both the exegetists accept the name $Y\bar{a}j\bar{n}ikyupanisad$.

In preparing the present edition the following printed books have been consulted: 1. Taittirīyāranyaka with Bhaṭṭabhāskara's Commentary, published from Mysore in the Bibliotheca Samskrita Series. 2. Taittirīyāranyaka with the Commentary of Sāyaṇācārya in two parts, published in the Ānandāsrama Sanskrit Series. 3. Mahānārāyaṇopaniṣad, published in the Bombay Sanskrit Series, edited by Col. G. A. Jacob, with the Dīpikāṭīkā. 4. Yājūikyupaniṣad brought out in the Adyar Library Series.

The text presented in all these four books is not precisely the same. Apart from the difference in the length of the text, differences of reading, additions and omissions of passages and transposition of textual units are also observed. The oldest commentator, Bhattabhāskara, has noticed a text having only sixty-four Sections. This is generally designated as the drāvidapātha. Sāyanācārya also has written the Commentary on this text. The works mentioned as (3) and (4) above also are based on the short text of Bhattabhāskara and Sāyana. The Ānandās'rama edition contains a parisista reproducing the tenth prapathaka under the subtitle Narayanopanisad-This is the longer version generally known as the Andhrapātha in eighty Sections—together with the Commentary of an untraced author which closely resembles the Commentary of Sāyaṇa in respect of those passages which are common with the shorter version.

The tenth prapathaka of the Taittirīyāranyaka is considered khila (i.e., supplementary) even by Bhattabhāskara and Sayana. The supplementary nature of this part is also clear from its structural organization. It is an assemblage of passages used in various ritualistic contexts, and there is the general lack of unity in the treatment of the subject-matter. The presence of many significant and well-known Brahmavidyā and upāsanā passages, either quoted from other parts of the Vedas or found only here, in a style closely resembling that of the other Brāhmaņas and the Upanisads, gives this work an authority above that of many other minor Upanisads. S'rī S'ankarācārya has not written any Commentary on this Upanisad; but still he refers to statements contained in it in the course of his Commentary on the Brahmasūtras III. 3. 24 and III. 4. 20. Whatever was left over to be mentioned in respect of karma. upāsanā, and jñāna, after the recital of the samhitā and brāhmana, says Sāyanācārya, is brought together in this miscellaneous (prakīrna) work. The same Commentator points out also that the commencement of the work with the description of Paramatman and the conclusion of it eulogizing sannyasa which is said to be the means of the knowledge of Brahman entitles it to the name of an Upanisad. The text, however, abounds in passages commonly sused in connection with religious acts of worship and, therefore, the epithet Yāiñikī is particularly appropriate. The existence of a recension with ininety Sections among some people in the Karnāṭaka has been noticed by Sāyaṇācārya.

The motive which prompted me to take up the preparation of this work for the Upanisad Series published by the Math being purely religious, I have presented here a text which has been made exhaustive and eclectic as far as it was possible. The simple Sanskrit interpretation given immediately below the text is meant to facilitate the understanding of the archaic text in classical Sanskrit form. For this the old Commentaries mentioned above have been laid under a deep debt. This is followed by word-for-word meaning given in the Sanskrit order of syntax. In order to bring out the received meaning fully the translation has been made somewhat free and explanatory. The running Notes, besides being critical and expository, aim also at giving the religious background of the passages. In interpreting the passages, the method followed is the one propounded by Mīmāmsā, namely, by tackling the tatparya or the main purport of the text, and reading into every unit a contextual meaning which is in harmony with it. The philological translations of texts like this, based on historical principle (though valuable for students of anthropology) cannot be of much help to religious persons who turn to this and similar texts for spiritual light. So the traditional method is followed.

In a book of this type the use of capitals and italics is seldom completely uniform. In the Notes usually the longer extracts and technical words are printed in Devanāgarī. Textual words are italicized so that they may be easily detected. Smaller extracts and technical Sanskrit words are printed in Roman with or without capitalized beginning. The English plural sign s, added to untranslated Sanskrit words, is hyphenated at places to show that it is not elemental to the word. This must guide in other places also. I have not given a summary of the subject-matter of this Upanisad. The table of Analytical Contents which follows will serve its purpose in a better way. Innumerable individuals use some text or other of this Upanisad in connection with their personal religion. I hope the apparatus presented here will aid the understanding of them in some measure.

Before closing this Introduction I take pleasure to mention here the names of Svāmī S'uddhasattvānanda who arranged for the printing of this work and Svāmī Mrdānanda who relieved me of some ocular strain. Svāmī Mṛḍānanda took down the translation and the Notes at dictation, copied the draft for printing and partly scanned the proofsheets. I am especially thankful to the Vasanta Press, Adyar, for the clean typesetting and expeditious and attractive printing of the work from the hand-written draft heavily revised in proof.

May Mitra, Varuna, Aryaman, Indra, Brhaspati, and all-pervading Viṣṇu be propitious to us and grant us welfare and bliss. I bow down to Brahman in reverence. O Vāyu, I bow down to Thee in adoration. Thou verily art perceptible Brahman. I shall declare: Thou art right. Thou art the true and the good. May that—the Supreme Being adored as Vāyu—preserve me. May He preserve the teacher. Me, may He protect; My teacher, may He protect.

May He protect us both together; may He nourish us both together; may we work conjointly with great energy; may our study be vigorous and effective; may we not mutually dispute (or may we not hate any). Let there be peace, and peace, and peace in me, in my environment and in the forces that act on me.

मथमोऽनुवाकः SECTION ONE

अम्भेन्यपारे भुवनस्य मध्ये नाकेन्य पृष्ठे मंहतो महीयान् । शुक्रेण ज्योती ६ वि समनुप्रविष्टः प्रनापितिश्चरति गर्भे अन्तः ॥१॥

अपारे अम्भित in the shoreless waters भुवनस्य मध्ये on the earth नाकस्य पृष्ठे on the surface of heaven (च and व्यात: pervading) महत: महीयान् greater than the great प्रजापति: Lord of creatures गुक्रेण by the seed ज्योती एपि the lights समनुप्रविष्ट: who has entered गर्भे अन्त: inside the foetus चरति acts.

1. The Lord of creation, who is present in the shoreless waters, on the earth and above the heaven and who is greater than the great, having entered the shining intelligences of creatures in seed form, acts in the foetus (which grows into the living being that is born).

[The Upanisads name the ultimate Principle of religion and philosophy as Paramatman or Parabrahman; the first word emphasizes the immanence and the second the transcendence of that Principle. Parabrahman, when described as the cause of the universe, is called Parames'vara or Prajāpati. Prajāpati and Parabrahman are, therefore, one and the same Reality described from two stand-points. A person is not called a father before his marriage and the birth of a child. He becomes a father after these events. The person, however, remains the same. Parabrahman conditioned by the adjunct of the universe is Prajāpati, from whom the universe is born and in whom it has its existence and absorn-The stanza points out that the same Prajapati. who sustains vast oceans, boundless worlds, and the highest heaven, enters as a seed or a spark into the shining intellect of living creatures and becomes the iīva or the acting and enjoying agent on the earth. Man is developed from an embryo. The embryo is animated by the internal instrument which is rendered efficient by the reflection or impregnation of the Spirit or Paramatman, here designated as Prajāpati. S'ukra in the text stands for the Paramatman who enters the creatures as the seed and becomes their innermost Self. Jyotīmsi stands for the transmigrating Souls, identifying themselves with the internal organ and the instruments of know-Paramatman ensouling the ledge and action. universe is called Virāt and dwelling in the body is called jīva. The last foot of this verse is the same as the first line of the Atharvaveda X. 4. 2. 13 and the Taittirīyāranyaka III. 13. 3.]

यस्मिनिद्र सं च वि चैति सर्वे यस्मिन् देवा अधि विश्वे निषेदुः। तदेव भूतं तदु भव्यंमा इदं तदक्षरे पर्मे व्योमन् ॥ २ ॥

इदं सर्वम् all this यहिमन् in whom समेति comes together च and ब्येति dissolves च and विश्वं all देवा: gods यहिमन् in whom अधिनिषेदु: remain with their lordly powers, तत् That एव alone भूतम् what is gone तत् that उ verily मन्यम् what is to come आ: (आसीत्) was. इदम् This (cause of the universe, Prajāpati) तदक्षरे in that imperishable परमे absolute ब्योमन् in the ether (प्रति-तिष्ठिति remains).

2. That in which all this universe exists together and into which it dissolves, That in which all the gods remain enjoying their respective powers—That certainly is whatever that has been in the past and whatever indeed is to come in the future. This cause of the universe, Prajāpati, is supported by His own imperishable nature described as absolute ether.

[In the previous stanza it was stated that Prajapati or Parames'vara dwells in creatures as Kartā (doer) and Bhoktā (enjoyer). This stanza asserts that He is not only the Antaryamin (God dwelling in creatures) but also the support and final cause of all. Parabrahman alone is the one cause of everything else and there is no other cause for His existence. The word vyoman in the text means ākāsa or ether. This ākāsa is a constituent element of the universe. It is the cause of the other four elements—air, fire. water, and earth. Akāsa itself is produced from Paramātman according to the Upanisads; and therefore it cannot be the self-supporting final cause. parama vyoman here is the Aksara Brahman which has no other cause or support. Hence it is stated here that this Reality alone constitutes the worlds which have been in the past and which are to be in the future. The world which we experience at present receives its existence and self-evidence from It alone. The various gods and powers functioning in the universe and in man have their glory by delegation from Parabrahman. The syllable आ in the third line may be taken as an exclamation of wonder, or restored to the vocable সা: which is a Vedic variant of आसीत्. The word vyoman in the last line is in the locative case according to Vedic grammar.]

येनांवृतं खं च दिवं महीं च येनांदित्यस्तर्पति तेजसा आजेसा च। यमन्तः संपुद्धे क्वयो वर्यन्ति यद्क्षरे पर्मे प्रजाः॥ ३॥ येन जगत्कारणभूतेन परमात्मना भूम्यन्तिरक्षिद्युलोकं समाच्छादितं, येन अनुग्रहीतः तपनः औष्ण्येन प्रकाशेन च युक्तः तपित, तत्त्वविदः मेधाविनः यं शरीरमध्यावकाशे ध्यानतन्तुना वधनित, तिस्मन् आधारभूते अक्षरशब्द-वाच्ये नित्ये परवस्तुनि सर्वाः अपि प्रजाः वर्तन्ते ॥

येन by whom खम् space between heaven and earth च and दिवम् heaven महीम् (मही) earth च and आवृतम् (are) enveloped, येन by whom आदित्य: sun तेजसा by heat भ्राजसा by light च and तपति burns, यम् whom कवय: sages अन्त: समुद्रे inside the ākāsa of (their) mind चयन्ति weave, bind यदक्षरे in which imperishable परमे Supreme (Brahman) प्रजा: creatures (वर्तन्ते abide).

3. He by whom the space between heaven and earth as well as the heaven and the earth are enveloped, He by whom the sun burns with heat and gives light, and He whom the sages bind in the ether of their hearts (with the string of meditation), in whom—The Imperishable One—all creatures abide;

[The above translation is based on the Commentary of Bhaṭṭabhāskara who takes antah samudra to mean ether of the mind and completes the last line by supplying the verb vartante (abide). Samudra in the Vedas has the sense of ether (akāsa) as well as the ocean; the phrase antah samudra, therefore, gives the same meaning as the hṛdayākāsa. Sāyaṇācārya explains that Brahman, the self-supporting Reality, creates the universe ever remaining changeless in Its own glory. This explanation is made possible by completing the last line with the verb 'create' in the place of abide (srjanti for vartante). To agree with this meaning Sāyana takes samudra to mean synecdochically the whole world. Just as the clay out of which various vessels are made envelopes those articles that are produced form clay, so also the entire universe is enveloped by Paramatman. Sages who know this Reality realize the Paramatman in the entire universe as people see the thread woven into the cloth. Vayanti in the text means also 'they weave'. The word may be split also as avayanti as some have done, in which case it means 'they understand or realize'. According to Sāyaṇa, tejas stands for the solar orb and bhrājas for the rays of the light emitted therefrom. Grammatically divam and mahim should be construed as nominative singulars to agree with avrtam.]

4-5. From whom the creatrix of the world, Prakrti, was born, who created in the world creatures out of elements such as water, who entered beings consisting of herbs, quadrupeds and men as the inner controller, who is greater than the greatest, who is one without a second, who is imperceptible, who is of unlimited forms, who is the universe, who is ancient, who remains beyond darkness or Prakṛti and who is higher than the highest—nothing else exists other than, or subtler than, Him.

[These two stanzas are connected syntactically. Prasūtī and vyacasarja are Vedic forms for prasūtiķ and vyasasarja. Sāyaṇa adopts the peculiar reading vyacasarja which is explained as vyasasarja. Again, anīyasam and mahāntam are Vedic peculiarities to be rendered into the usual aniyah and mahat respectively. The creation of the world from Brahman through avyakta has been described generally in the previous stanzas. Here some details are given in the order of evolution, namely, Prakrti, the five elements consisting of water and the rest, the terrestrial region, plants, animals and men. Paramātman dwells as the innermost Spirit of all creatures. It is asserted that in spite of the transformation of the Paramatman into the gross universe and His residence within the smallest of created beings, He is still greater than the greatest, higher than the highest, subtler than the subtlest and older than the oldest. Though he has become the manifold universe of variety and multiplicity, yet He remains one and undivided. He is beyond the taint of darkness and sensuous knowledge.]

6. Sages declare: That alone is right and That alone is true. That alone is the venerable Brahman contemplated by the wise. Acts of worship and social utility also are that Reality. That alone being the navel of the universe, sustains manifoldly the universe which arose in the past and which springs to existence at present.

[Paramātman described in the previous stanzas as the cause of the universe is the one existence, and apart from Him nothing else can be presumed. So He is not only present in every atom of the universe but also in every quality, action, and relation. This is the truth illustrated in the present stanza. Rtam and Satyam rendered as right and true are two important terms in the Vedas. The first term stands for the physical, moral, and spiritual laws or the order of things evident everywhere, and the second one denotes individual and social acts of truthfulness. Bhatta-bhāskara explains rta as mānasayajña and satya as vācikayajña. Sāyaṇa explains rta as right thought and satya as right speech. Brahman in the first hemistich means the Vedas which are venerable, being the highest authority. The simile of the nave of a wheel supporting the spokes is common in the Veda. Hence Brahman is spoken of as the navel or support of the universe.]

7. That alone is Fire; That is Air; That is Sun; That verily is Moon; That alone is shining Stars and Ambrosia. That is Food; That is Water and He is the Lord of creatures.

[Two views of the ultimate Divine Reality are presented in the Veda. One of them is that Paramātman or Parabrahman is Pure Being beyond all relations, attributes, and particularizations. The other view is the one which takes into consideration all the differences, relations, attributes, and qualities, noticed in the universe as embedded in that Reality. These are not two categories, but one and the same Reality as seen through $vidy\bar{a}$ and $avidy\bar{a}$. Brahman is realized as pure Sat through nirgunavidyā or pure jñāna. The same is contemplated as adhyātma, adhibūta, and adhidaiva universe, so long as one is in the condition of avidyā. But the objects contemplated in the state of avidyā also have their support and reality in the unchanging and all-comprehending Being which is Parabrahman. Just as a gold statue is gold in every part of it, so also Paramātman is in every part of the universe, whether it be sun, moon, and stars, or fire, air, and water, and all their pro-The phrase sukramamrtam is taken together ducts. also and explained as the parental seed which gives rise to progeny which is immortality; for the parents live through their offsprings endlessly. Brahma is interpreted as food or Divinity embodying universal knowledge and action called Hiranyagarbha. Prajāpati may be Virāṭ embodied as the universe or the first progenitor. Stanzas 1 to 6 are in Triṣṭup metre. The present one is in Anuṣṭup with irregular pādas. Grammatical gender of Sanskrit words is purely conventional and have no biological significance. Therefore the Divine Reality, beyond sex distinction, is denoted by a noun or pronoun in any gender. In this stanza neuter and masculine pronouns point to the same Reality.]

प्रदुवे milked, अन्तरिक्षम् firmament अथो also, सुव: heaven इमे उमे these two (प्रदुवे milked).

8-9. All nimeṣas, kalās, muhūrtas, kāṣṭhās, days, half-months, months, and seasons, were born from the self-luminous Person. The year also was born from Him. He milked water and also these two, the firmament and the heaven.

[The Vedas teach a single Reality as the source and support of the universe. Some of the traditional systems of philosophy hold that nature, time and the like are also eternal and independent sources of the universe. Here it is emphasized that they are all derived from Paramātman and so cannot be eternal and independent. Divisions of time have no existence separate from Paramatman. They are born from Him. The magnitude of the divisions of time is graded thus: eighteen nimesas make one kāsthā, thirteen kāsthās make one kalā, thirty kalās make one kṣaṇa, twelve kṣaṇas make one muhūrta, thirty muhūrtas make day and night, fifteen days and nights make one paksa or halfmonth, two paksas make one month, two months make one season, and six seasons make one year. Sarve and sarvasah imply those divisions of time not mentioned in the text, but enumerated just now. The term nimesa denotes the time required for the winking of the eyes. The word kalpantām in the second pāda of the ninth verse is the reading accepted by the older commentator. Samvatsara in the text being in the singular, some have silently corrected the verb into kalpatām. The plural verb has somehow to be justified by taking samvatsara as a generic plural denoting the cycle of sixty years. Bhattabhāskara construes the time divisions with verb adhijajnire and explains kalpantam separately as 'स्वकार्ये समर्थो भवत इति वेदात्मा आशासते 'i.e., the Veda wishes that the time may be efficacious to bring about its proper ends. Milking of the water, firmament and heaven, implies the production of the necessary sustenance and enjoyment for the transmigrating souls through the agency of time on the earth and in the firmament and heaven. Bhattabhāskara takes pradughe as an adjective qualifying ime and explains thus: प्रकर्षण कामान् दोग्ध्यौ द्यावा-पृथिव्यौ | Based on Sayana, I have translated the term as a verb.]

10. No person ever grasped by his understanding the upward limit of this Paramātman, nor His limit across, nor His middle portion. His name is 'great glory' for no one limits His nature by definition.

[In the previous stanzas Paramātman was described as the material and efficient cause of the universe. The world and its content are essentially Paramatman alone. If God has become the universe it is easy for one to perceive Him in the manifold objects presented before the senses. But seeing the world is not grasping God. If it were so, one could easily understand the length, breadth, and central part of God. It is said here that man cannot grasp like that by his understanding. Even if we accept the verdict of modern science and conceive the circumference of the universe to be of the order of 6000 million light years (Light travels 186,000 miles a second. A light year is the distance it travels in a year.), still the Veda holds that it is only an imaginable part of Paramatman who extends limitlessly beyond. Therefore it is said none can grasp Him by thought. Yasas translated as glory means permanent renown received from all without any exception. Those who have dominion over others and have the freedom to exercise power, enjoy renown in the world. Those who have only limited dominion and power, therefore, have only limited glory. Paramatman whose power and dominion cannot be grasped even by the exceptional understanding of man is alone worthy of being called 'the Great Glory'. For the use of the term यशस् as an epithet of Paramātman see Chāndogya Upanişad VIII. 14. 1. It may be noted that the gender of words. as it has been stated in the note to stanza 7, which point to the Paramatman are overlooked in the translation. The Reality denoted as Paramātman is neither masculine nor feminine nor neuter. 'He' or 'It' is used in this translation if context does not particularly demand 'She'. Parijagrabhat is a Vedic form and should be rendered by the usual parigrhnāti and īse the perfect by the present īste.]

11. His form is not to be beheld; none whosoever beholds Him with the eye. Those who meditate on Him with their minds undistracted and fixed in the heart know Him; they become immortal.

Paramatman cannot be perceived with the eyes or mind like a cow or a tree standing before a person. At best, objects of the universe act only as symbols of the Divine Reality. Though absolutely transcendent and indescribable, ignorance is not the sole refuge in respect of Paramatman. With the help of proper scriptures and a preceptor one may realize Him by the practice of Yoga. This requires the control of mind and concentration of thought in the heart accompanied by appropriate emotions and feelings. Those who succeed in realizing Paramatman by this method become immortal. unconditioned form of Brahman and Its conditioned form realized through worship and meditation are described in this stanza. The same passage occurs in Katha and S'vetās vatara Upanisads also with slight variations.

[In the immediately preceding stanza, attainment of immortality was declared to be the fruit of realizing Paramātman in the heart through appropriate discipline. This is emphasized by the reproduction of Uttaranārāyanānuvāka given in Taittirīyāranyaka III. 13 (which according to Āpastamba is recited during the worship of the Sun—ādityopasthāna) and Paramātmasūkta or Hiranyagarbhasūkta appearing in the Yajurvedasamhitā with which this Upaniṣad is connected. Though the received text gives only the pratīka or the index words of these two sūktas as अद्भयः समूतो हिएयगर्भ इत्यष्टी, they are reprinted below in their entirety with a Sanskrit paraphrase and English rendering only for the convenience of those who make use of this publication.

2. I know this Great Person who is beyond ignorance and darkness and whose splendour is comparable to that of the sun. Knowing Him thus in this life itself, one transcends death. There is no other path leading to the attainment of liberation.

3. The Sun who is the Lord of creatures moves about in the space between heaven and earth causing day and night. Although He is unborn, being the Self of all, He manifests Himself as the manifold universe. Wise men realize the source of the universe, the allpervading Paramātman. Prajāpatis, the first patriarchs, sought the position, which Marīci and other sages attained.

6. O Sun, Hrī and Lakṣmī are Thy consorts, Thyself being Brahmā, Viṣṇu and S'iva. Day and night are Thy two sides. Asterisms in the sky are Thine own form. The Asvins are Thy mouth. Being such, grant me whatever I desire, spiritual illumination, happiness here and other objects of desire.

[The above six passages known as the $Uttaran\bar{a}r\bar{a}-yan\bar{a}nuv\bar{a}ka$ are employed in connection with various acts of worship. There are slight recensional differences, of which $S'r\bar{\imath}$ used in the place of $Hr\bar{\imath}$ is the most significant one.]

The following hymn to Hiranyagarbha in the tristubh metre 'seen' by the son of Prajāpati who is also called Hiranyagarbha, has for its Deity Prajāpati designated as the indeterminate pronoun Kah. Prajāpati here is called Hiranyagarbha because the universe which is like a golden egg is conceived as His body and also because He is the Highest Self dwelling in all as Sūtrātman. The purpose of quoting this hymn here is to stress the necessity of knowing and worshipping Him for the attainment of earthly welfare and immortality. The hymn quoted here from Taittirīyasamhitā IV. 1.8 has minor deviations from the same hymn as found in the Rgveda.

1. The resplendent Prajāpati was born at the beginning of creation from the Supreme potent with the power of Māyā. Having been born He became the one sustainer and nourisher of all beings. The same Paramātman, here designated as Hiranyagarbha, supports the earth as well as heaven. May we worship that shining One with offerings—who is of the nature of bliss or whose characteristic nature cannot be interrogated.

एष हि देवः प्रदिशोऽनु सर्वाः

पूर्वी हि जातः स उ गर्भे अन्तः।

स विजायमानः स जनिष्यमाणः

मुत्यङ्मुखाँस्तिष्ठति विश्वतौमुखः ॥ १२ ॥

एषः विश्वाधिकः स्वप्रकाशः परमात्मा सर्वाः प्रधानदिशः विदिशश्च लक्ष्यीकृत्य सर्वत्र अनुगतः भवति । हिरण्यगर्भरूपेण प्रागेव जातः श्रुति-प्रसिद्धः सः एव ब्रह्माण्डरूपस्य गर्भस्य मध्ये जनकभावेन जन्यत्वेन च सर्वस्य सुरासुरनरनिकरस्य बुद्धीन्द्रियदेहानां अध्यक्षो भूत्वा सर्वतः रूपाद्यु-पल्लिधद्वारयुक्तः सन् अन्तर्यामिभावेन तिष्ठति ॥

एष: this हि well-known देव: Self-luminous Lord सर्वा: all प्रदिश: quarters of heaven अनु (pervades) towards; पूर्व: in the beginning जात: born (as Hiranyagarbha) स: He हि indeed उ only गर्मे अन्त: in (the universe represented as) the womb; स: He विजायमानः is being created variously स: He जनिष्यमाण: going to be born in future विश्वतोमुख: having face everywhere प्रत्यङ् as the innermost Self मुखा: as the Lord तिष्ठति remains.

12. This Self-luminous Lord renowned in the scriptures pervades all the quarters of heaven. Having been born as Hiranyagarbha in the beginning He indeed is inside the universe represented as the womb. He alone is the manifold world of creation now springing into existence and causing the birth of the world of creation yet to come. As one having face everywhere, He dwells also as the innermost Self leading all creatures.

The stanzas beginning with this one describe the glory of Paramatman. The manifested world and every item in it point to His power. Not only the Hiranyagarbha embodying the universe in its totality, but every being in the world is a representative of Paramatman. He is immanent in all. He is the Master and Ruler of every intellect. All the senses are door-ways for Him serving as channels of communication. As cause and effect, He connects successive generations of creation. The last line offers a textual problem. The attempt made to avoid a verbal redundancy by changing visvatomukhah into sarvatomukhah is not significant. The actual reading is pratyaimukhāstisthati. Bhattabhāskara assumes mukhāt tisthati on the ground of Vedic variation and explains mukhāt upakramāt i.e., pervading from the beginning to the end of the effected universe. Sāyaṇa ignores the plural case-ending and interprets mukhā as mukhya or primary Being, the Ruler of the body, the senses and the mind. The reading mukhah in the singular may be a conjectural correction of some copyist. The same stanza, perhaps in an improved form, appears as verse 16 in chapter 2 of S'vetās vatara Upanisad where we get the variant reading sa eva jātah for sa vijāyamānah and pratyanjanāḥ for pratyanmukhāḥ. Janāḥ in this case is either taken as an address or as the indwelling Soul of all beings.]

विश्वतंश्चश्चरुत विश्वतोंमुखो विश्वतोंहस्त उत विश्वतंस्पात्। सं बाहुस्यां नमंति सं पतंत्वैद्यावीपृथिवी जनयन् देव एकः॥१३॥

दिवं च पृथिवीं च एक एव सन् परिनरपेक्षं संजनयन् अर्थात् उत्पाद-यन् स्वयं प्रकाशमानः देवः सर्वतः व्याप्तचक्षुः सर्वतोमुखः सर्वतोहस्तः सर्वतःपादश्च सन् बाहुसहशाभ्यां धर्माधर्माभ्यां वासनाख्यैः पतत्रैः च जगत् सर्वं संनमति अर्थात् वशीकरोति ॥

द्यावापृथिवी heaven and earth संजनयन् one who creates एक: one without a second देव: self-luminous विश्वतश्रक्ष: having eyes everywhere उत and विश्वतोमुख: having faces everywhere विश्वतोहस्त: having hands everywhere उत and विश्वतस्पात् having feet everywhere (स: He) वाहुम्याम् by the hands पतन: by the legs च and संनमति controls, joins.

13. The Self-luminous Reality is one without a second and is the creator of heaven and earth. (Having created the universe by Himself and out of Himself) He became the possessor of the eyes, faces, hands and feet of all creatures in every part of the universe. He controls all of them by dharma and adharma (merit and demerit) represented as His two hands and the constituent elements of the universe which have supplied the Souls with the material embodiment represented as patatra or legs.

This stanza tells us that the Paramatman is both the operative and the material cause of the universe. besides being the ruler and guide of all creatures and the user of their limbs, actions and senses as His instruments. It is quoted here from Taittirīuasam hitā IV. 6. 24. It is also found with slight alterations in Atharvaveda XIII. 2. 26 and S'vetāsvatara Upanisad III. 3. where visvatobāhu appears in the place of visvatohasta and dhamati for namati. Upanisadbrahmayogin interprets patatra as pāda. According to Sayana bāhu represents merits and demerits of creatures on the grounds of which God shapes the world and patatra symbolically represents the moving material elements which constitute the world. The second half of the stanza is cryptic and some symbolic interpretation as given above alone renders it comprehensible.]

यत्र in which विश्वम् the universe एकनीडम् united in one place of rest or support भवति is तत् that परयन् he who sees विश्वा (विश्वाने) all भुवनानि worlds विद्वान् he who knows वेन: Vena नाम named गन्धर्व: a gandharva अमृतम् immortal तत् that विद्वान् knowing प्र वोचे (for ऊचे without संप्रसारणम्) declared न verily. यस्मिन् in whom इदम् this सम् (एति comes) together, gets absorbed च and वि (एति) rises, originates च and (य: who) प्रजासु in creatures ओत: प्रोत: च (exists as) warp and woof (येन by whom) गुहासु in the hidden places (of the heart of creatures) त्रीणि three पदा (पदानि) states निहिता (निहितानि) are fixed, appointed य: he who एकम् one विभु: all-pervasive तत् that वेद knows स: he सवितु: of one's father पिता father सत् becomes.

14-15. He in whom this universe originates and into whom it is absorbed; He who exists as the warp and woof in all created beings; He by whom the three states (of waking, dream and deep sleep) are appointed in the intellects hidden in creatures; He in whom the universe finds a single place of rest—having seen that Paramātman, the Gandharva named Vena became a true knower of all the worlds and proclaimed (to his disciples for the first time) that Reality as immortal. He who knows that all-pervasive One becomes worthy of receiving the honour due to a father even from his own natural father.

[In order to inspire greater confidence in the doctrine of Paramātman taught here the authority of Vena is cited in this passage. Commenting on the word Vena in Taittirīyasamhitā IV. 10. 1. 1, Sāyaṇa states that it is derived from चिन कान्ती and that it means dear or abhīṣta. According to Yāska the term Vena is applied to Indra, Sun, Prajāpati and a Gandharva. The commentators accept the sense of the Gandharva or Prajāpati in this context. Bhaṭṭa-bhāskara, interpreting etymologically, makes out Vena to be the Lord who willed the creation of the universe and gandharva as the Divine Principle in whom expressions remain as mystic sound. Venr is taken as a root expressing desire and gandharva is explained as gām dhārayati iti i.e., nādātmakadeva. Two impressive metaphors make these stanzas significant as high poetry and philosophy. The term $n\bar{\imath}da$ in Sanskrit has the sense of a resting-place, a bird's nest in which the young ones live together, or the inside of a vehicle where the occupants remain together. The idea of safety and togetherness are implied in these meanings. The whole universe of beings has its safety resort in the Paramatman and derives its existence and intelligence from Him. The second metaphor is about the warp and woof in a woven fabric without which it cannot be. creation has no existence apart from its divine cause; and knowledge of the Divine Reality alone gives one a true knowledge about the perceptible universe. He who knows God in the world and the world as not different from the cause of its origin, support and final goal, realizes immortality. It is mentioned by the commentator that Vena is one of those who realized this truth first and proclaimed it to others. In the last line divine knowledge is extolled. The Vedic seers recognized the spiritual father's superiority to the natural father and even asserted that a son who has become enlightened in divine wisdom may be honoured by his own biological father. Guhā in the text literally means a cave or a hiding place. It represents here the buddhi or intellect which is the medium through which the Spirit or Atman manifests Itself. It is also the seat of waking, dream and sleep. The three padas are taken to be para, pasyantī and madhyamā stages of vāk also, on the authority of Rgveda 1. 164. 45. The word savituḥ in the last line is also found as sa pituḥ in some texts. Bhaṭṭabhāskara takes the first of these stanzas as a description of rūpaprapaūca and the second as that of nāmaprapaūca. Verses 14 to 18 are originally found in Atharvaveda II. 1. 1-5 with some variation and transposition.]

स नो बन्धुर्जिनिता स विधाता धामानि वेद सुवनानि विश्वा । यत्रं देवा अस्तमानशानास्तृतीये धामान्यभ्येरयन्त ॥ १६ ॥

. यत्र where तृतीय in the third (world called दुलोक) अमृतम् immortality आनशानाः those who have attained देवाः gods धामानि excellent places अम्यैरयन्त attained (according to merit and divine dispensation) सः that Lord नः our वन्धः benefactor and friend जनिता creator विधाता ordainer (च and) सः He धामानि proper places वेद knows (यतः for) विश्वा (विश्वानि) all भुवनानि created beings (वेद He knows).

16. Through whose power the Gods who have attained immortality in the third region of heaven got allotted their respective places, He is our friend, father and ordainer. He knows the proper places of each because He understands all created beings.

[In this stanza the Divine Providence is described as the benefactor of all creatures. He is the father, brother, friend and true judge conferring upon all individual beings position, function and enjoyment according to the merits of the deeds done by them. The fruits of actions come from Him.]

परि द्यावांपृथिवी यंन्ति सुद्यः परि लोकान् परि दिशः परि सुर्वः। ऋतस्य तन्तुं विततं विचृत्य तदंपश्यत् तदंभवत् प्रजासुं॥ १०॥

सद्य: immediately द्यावापृथिवी heaven and earth परियन्ति they spread over, लोकान् the worlds परि (यन्ति) spread over, दिश: the quarters of heaven परि (यन्ति) spread over, सुव: the heavenly region परि (यन्ति) spread over. (य: he who) प्रजासु in the created beings ऋतस्य of the Supreme Reality named Rta तन्तुम् (like) the thread विततम् spread out विचृत्य having decided in mind तत्

that (Brahman) अपश्यत् sees (lit., saw) (स: he) तत् that अभवत् becomes (lit., became).

17. They (i.e., those who have realized their identity with the Highest Lord) immediately spread over heaven and earth. They pervade other worlds, the quarters of heaven and the heavenly region called Suvarloka. Whosoever among created beings sees that Brahman named Rta or 'the True', unintermittently pervading the creation like the thread of a cloth, by contemplation in mind, truly becomes That.

[Having described Divine Providence and Grace leading to welfare in the embodied stage and final release from worldly existence, the text by this stanza sets forth the nature of a liberated soul. The moment an aspirant who has reached maturity attains perfect knowledge, he realizes his oneness with all that exists. The term vicrtya is taken in the sense of niscitya (having settled in mind) in the translation, following Sāyaṇa. Bhatṭabhāskara explains it as chitvā (having cut asunder). According to him the third line means 'having cut asunder the extended fruits of works of sacrifices and so on.' The term Rta evidently stands for sacrifices accordingly.]

18. Having pervaded the worlds and the created beings and all the quarters and intermediate quarters, the first-born of Brahman known as Prajāpati or Hiraņyagarbha became by His own nature as Paramātman, the ruler and protector of individual souls.

I. 23. 9, with a variant বিধায় for परीत्य. It concludes the description or definition of the ultimate Reality, Parabrahman or Paramātman, commencing with the opening stanza. We learn from the foregone passages these important doctrines: The Paramam Brahma of the Vedic seers is called Rtam and Satyam. There is nothing subtler or higher than this one Reality which is beyond perceptual knowledge as well as ignorance and darkness. It is the one Reality in which the visible and imaginable universe has its origination, sustentation and retraction. This immortal, self-luminous, ineffable Reality is realized in the hearts of self-disciplined sages, who have thereby attained liberation. As the cause of the universe, He is within the comprehension of all in general. He is Prajāpati, the father of all created beings, who has assigned to each individual according to his deserts, objects, means and places for experiencing the results of his thoughts and deeds. He is again called Hiranyagarbha for the reason that he is pervading the universe inside and outside by His power of knowledge and action. In this aspect He is expressed more or less through the sun, the moon and the stars, fire, water and air, men, animals and plants, days, months and seasons. None ever equals or surpasses Him in glory. As the parent, friend and benefactor of all creatures, it is to Him all should turn for refuge from fear, security in welfare and guidance to knowledge. Finally, with His grace and by the knowledge of Him man attains release from samsāra and gains ultimate beatitude. Those sages who have attained this goal declare this truth to others and become honoured guides and exemplars to common humanity seeking light and succour in the world. Concluding this grand theme the present passage informs us that the same Reality embodied in the entire universe, for all time, dwells in each one of us as the dual principle—the individual self and the Highest Self-the two companion birds with golden plumage perching on the self-same tree mentioned in other Upanisads. The unconditioned Brahman cannot be considered the cause of the universe as It can be regarded only as the negation of all assertions. Hence the cause of the universe is traced to Hiranyagarbha or Is'vara who is conceived as the first-born, although He is never born or in reality. different from Brahman. The term abhisambabhūva in the text is explained as mithunībhāva by Bhaṭṭabhāskara implying the relationship of a couple between Paramatman and jīvātman. The remaining part of this Upanisad mostly deals with holy utterances prescribed for facilitating meditation and other religious acts connected with worship intended to lead an aspirant to the Divine Reality described above.] some sloven and at a shell dady at knowing इन्द्रस्य of god Indra or one's own Self प्रियम् dear काम्यम् covetable अद्भुतम् marvellously excellent मेधाम् intellectual powers सनिम् giver, worthy of reverence सदसस्पतिम् the Lord of the unmanifest in which creation exists potentially अयासिषम् I pray I may attain.

19. I pray I may attain to the marvellously excellent Lord of the unmanifest cause of the universe who is dear to Indra and my own Self, who is covetable, who is worthy of reverence and who is the bestower of intellectual powers.

[This stanza in gayatrī metre is a prayer addressed to the indwelling Paramatman for the gift of mental powers leading to illumination. The Kenopanisad narrates an anecdote from which we understand that Indra was the first and foremost of gods who realized Brahman nearest. The Aitareyopanisad informs us that Indra is the mystic name of the Atman dwelling in the creatures. So it is evident that the Antaryamin (indwelling Atman) is the dearest object to everyone. The first member of the compound sadasaspati is interpreted thus: सीद्ति अस्मिन् अन्याकृताकारेण सर्वे जगत् इति। The marvellous nature of the Creator is evident from the manifestation of the universe unrivalled in its design and originality. Sani is a Vedic word denoting giver of gifts or one who is worthy of adoration. The Vedic Rsis frequently prayed for the power of memory and understanding implied in the word medhā, for no knowledge is possible without them. The reading medhāmayāsiṣam (blessing comprising of intelligence) noted by $D\bar{\imath}pik\bar{a}$ is amusing.]

20. O Jātavedas, shine brilliantly in order to destroy the sins connected with me. Confer on me enjoyments of various kinds including cattle. Give me sustenance and longevity and appoint a suitable dwelling for me in any direction.

[This is another prayer in anustubh metre to God meditated in Fire. Jātavedas is he who dwells in the human body assimilating food and guiding vital functions, or he who knows the needs of all beings born. Nirrti or Alakṣmī embodies in Hindu tradition all disvalues like poverty, ugliness, unlawful acts, laziness and so on. The quest of God can be successful only when an aspirant has a suitable place to stay, necessary comforts which insure against distraction and worry and the shining grace of God which keeps away all mental and physical sins of omission and commission. Hence the significance of such a prayer.]

21. O Jātavedas, through Thy grace may not the evil one slay our cows, horses, men and other belongings in the world. O Fire, come to succour us without holding weapons in Thy hand or thoughts of our offences in Thy mind. Unite me on all sides with wealth.

[This stanza in anuṣṭubh metre contains again two other prayers to the Antaryāmin: for the safety of wealth acquired through His grace and for the attainment of greater possessions implied by $S'r\bar{\imath}$, leading up to final beatitude. $\bar{A}gahi$ is the Vedic form for $\bar{a}gaccha$. Up to this stanza the text as found in various books consulted is generally uniform and fixed. Henceforward we counter many variations and additions in different documents. On the authority of a Vijāānātman, Sāyana has approved the $dr\bar{a}vidap\bar{a}tha$. The same is followed here, occasionally supplemented with a few other readings.]

22. May we know the Supreme Person and for the attainment of His Knowledge may we meditate upon Him, the thousand-eyed Great God. May Rudra, the giver of Knowledge, impel us towards such meditation and keep us in it.

[This and the following 12 passages are called gāyatrīs addressed to different deities. These are employed by a spiritual aspirant for worship and meditation as also for mental and oral repetition (japa). The term gayatrī denotes a particular metre in which a very large number of Vedic stanzas are composed. Of all these stanzas the most outstanding one is the stanza at Rgveda 3.62.10 of which the seer is Vis'vāmitra and the Deity Savitr. For one of the earliest commendations of gayatrī see Chāndogya Up. 3. 12. 1 and S'rī S'ankarācārya's commentary on it. This mantra is used by a twiceborn Hindu in his daily devotions and during special acts of worship. The gayatrimantra is also called Savitrī and Sarasvatī in view of the fact that it is addressed to Savitr and worshipped also as Sarasyatī. Gāyatrī itself is considered as a feminine Deity. In common usage, however, the word gayatri denotes the stanza in 24 letters occurring in a particular pattern. The Supreme Reality, Paramatman or Parabrahman, is invoked through this stanza. Exactly on the same ideal and verbal pattern several other gayatris have come into vogue, although none of them has attained the same universality, sanctity and significance which the original gayatrī possesses. Nevertheless every holy formula cast in the mould of the first and foremost gayatrī has an outstanding part to play in the worship of that particular deity with which it is connected. A name and characteristic description of the object of worship, a longing on the part of the worshipper to comprehend that object of worship in contemplation, and a prayer to the deity worshipped for goading, guiding and holding one's instrument of understanding so that one might attain the highest and best fruit of life—these comprise the essence of all worship; and the gayatri formula presents them in the most luminous and concise manner. The greatest help which man should expect of God is not personal services rendered for the satisfaction of his desires and needs like a good neighbour reciprocating previous favours, but the guidance of his thoughts in the right direction. In all the gayatris, therefore, the central thought consists in a petition to the Most High for initiating, controlling and developing thoughts, desires and feelings of the worshipper in a way conducive to the attainment of the highest human values and the knowledge of God that leads to liberation. Maitrāyanī Samhitā of the Yajurveda (2. 9. 1) gives for the first time eleven dhyāna-gāyatrīs employed for the meditation and worship of Rudra-S'iva in the last iṣṭakā of the agnicayana. There it is not merely an oblation made in consecrated fire, but the cityāgni is worshipped as the Divine Person preceded by s'atarudrīyahoma. The first gāyatrī given in this Upaniṣad occurs there.

This, the first gayatri given here, is addressed to Rudra-Mahādeva. The name Rudra is described as the power that rules knowledge and wisdom. Rudra is jñānadātā and as such He is the guide of the whole universe. As Virāt He is myriad-eyed and He is the Purusa pervading all creation. Mahādeva is the usual name by which His unrivalled divine nature is described. The aspirant after moksa or final beatitude expresses his longing to know the Supreme by the use of the verb in the potential mood: the same mood is used also in connection with the meditation implying that even the desire to meditate is engendered only through prayer to the Supreme for its gain. The use of the verbs in the first person plural in all these gayatrī formulas is specially noteworthy. Man is gregarious by nature. He can hardly rise above the moral and spiritual level attained by the collectivity to which he belongs. It is, therefore, necessary that every religious aspirant who strives for the uplift of his own self should also remember the whole community to which he belongs, so that all may be raised above the previous level. This great truth is implied in the plural expressions, 'May we know' and 'May we meditate'. The supplication implied in the last verb finally points out that the worshipper owes his approach to God solely to the impulse granted by God Himself. In all the gayatris that follow the same motivation runs centrally. These gayatris are repeated for getting purity of mind accompanied by meditation on the deity indicated. Purusa contained in this Rudra gayatrī implies that all deities may be invoked by a votary with the same mantra which is connected with his ista or chosen ideal, considering them as non-different from Him. one text examined the first line is found as तत्पुरुषाय This alteration makes the line a regular gāyatrī line. Otherwise the whole passage is not in gāyatrī metre, but in pura usnik. The grammatical structure of these formulas vary widely from standard usage by interchanges of case-endings and verbal terminations.]

तत्प्ररुंषाय विद्यहें महादेवायं धीमहि । तन्नों रुद्र: प्रचोद्यात् ॥ २३ ॥

तं आगमप्रसिद्धैश्वर्यं पुरुषाकारं महादेवं वयं जानीम । तस्य ज्ञानार्थे तं महादेवं ध्यायेम । तस्मिन् ध्यानविषये ज्ञानदाता रुद्रः अस्मान् प्रेरयतु ॥

तत् (for तस्मै) पुरुषाय that Supreme Person well known in the scriptures विद्याहे may we know, realize. महादेवाय that Mahādeva, the highest among gods धीमहि

may we meditate. तत् in that meditation रुद्र: Rudra-न: us प्रचोदयात् may impel.

23. May we know or realize the Supreme Person. For that, may we meditate upon Mahādeva and to that meditation may Rudra impel us.

[This Tatpuruṣagāyatrī is not noted by Bhaṭṭa-bhāskara perhaps thinking that it is duplicate of the previous mantra. Sāyaṇa accepts it and informs us that this Gāyatrī is a prayer addressed to Rudra visualized as:

विभ्रहोर्भिः कुटारं मृगमभयवरौ सुप्रसन्नो महेशः सर्वालङ्कारदीतः सरसिजनिलयो व्याघचर्मात्तवासः। ध्येयो मुक्तापरागामृतरसकलिताद्रिप्रभः पञ्चवक्तः व्यक्षः कोटीरकोटीकलिततुहिनरुचिः कलोत्तुङ्गभौलिः॥

in Prapañcasāra 27. 41. This contemplation verse gives in concise language the characteristics of Tatpuruṣa-Mahādeva as worshipped in the images. The terms Puruṣa, Mahādeva and Rudra are epithets of the same Divine Person implying His personality and spiritual characteristics.]

तत्प्ररुंषाय विद्यहें वक्रतुण्डायं घीमहि। तन्नों दन्तिः प्रचोदयात् ॥ २४॥

तं पुरुषं जानीम । तदंर्थं कुटिलनासिकं ध्यायेम । महादेव: स विन्नेश: दन्ती तस्मिन् ध्याने अस्मान् प्रेरयतु ॥ 24. May we know the Supreme Person. For that, may we meditate upon Vakratuṇḍa. May Dantin impel us towards it.

[In all gāyatrīs three epithets and three acts, namely, knowledge, meditation and impelling are to be connected. In this Vighnes'agāyatrī employed in the worship of Īs'vara, the Supreme Person is represented as elephant-faced, having a bent trunk and an excellent tusk. Vakratunda and Dantin are the names of Vināyaka. Dantih is the Vedic form of Dantin.]

तत्प्ररुंषाय विद्यहें चक्रतुण्डायं घीमहि । तन्नों नन्दिः प्रचोदयात् ॥ २५ ॥

तं दिव्यपुरुषविग्रहं जानीम । तदर्थं चक्रतुण्डं ध्यायेम । तस्मिन् ध्याने अस्मान् नन्दिः प्रचोदयतु ॥

25. May we know the Divine Person. For that, may we meditate upon Cakratuṇḍa. May Nandi impel us towards it.

[Here the epithets Purusa and Cakratunda refer to Nandikes'vara, the servant, seat and vehicle of S'iva. Being one endowed with occult powers, he is capable of assuming human shape as a purusa. He is called Cakratunda as he wielded the weapon known as Cakra, discus, while S'iva was engaged in battle with demons by grasping it with the mouth.

This gāyatrī and the next one are not in the shorter version commented by Bhaṭṭabhāskara.]

तत्पुरुंषाय विद्यहें महासेनायं घीमहि । तन्नः षण्मुखः प्रचोद्यीत् ॥ २६ ॥

तं पुरुषं जानीम। तदर्थं महासेनं ध्यायेम। तस्मिन् ध्याने अस्मान् षण्मुखः मचोदयतु॥

26. May we know that Divine Person. For that, may we meditate upon Mahāsena. May Ṣaṇmukha impel us towards it.

[This is a prayer addressed to Kartikeya who is represented as having six faces and as the general of the celestial army.]

तत्पुरुंषाय विद्यहें सुवर्णप्साय धीमहि । तन्नों गरुडः प्रचोदयीत् ॥ २७ ॥

तं पुरुषं जानीम । तद्र्यं सुवर्णपक्षं ध्यायेम । तस्मिन् ध्याने गरुड: अस्मान् प्रचोदयतु ॥

27. May we know that Divine Person. For that, may we meditate on Suvarnapaksa. May Garuda impel us towards it.

[This Garuḍagāyatrī represents Garuḍa as having golden wings. The name Garuḍa is traced to the root gr meaning to swallow—sarpāṇām giraṇāt.]

वेदात्मनाय विद्यहें हिरण्यगुर्भाय घीमहि । तन्नो ब्रह्म प्रचोदयात् ॥ २८ ॥

वेदात्मकं ब्रह्म वयं जानीम । तद्थें हिरण्यगर्भे ध्यायेम । तस्मिन् ध्याने ब्रह्म अस्मान् प्रेरयतु ॥

28. May we know the Veda, embodied as the four-faced Brahmā. For that, may we meditate upon Hiranyagarbha. May Brahman impelus towards it.

[This is a prayer addressed to Brahman. Some texts read Brahma as neuter singular while others have masculine singular Brahmā. Sāyaṇa considers this as Paramagāyatrī and explains it thus: Through the strenuous study of Vedānta as resident students in the place of the preceptor may we know Brahman, the Highest Reality, also expressed in the Vedic scriptures. Having known that Reality may we continually meditate upon that unlimited Truth day and night identifying It with ourselves. Vedātmana is a Vedic deviation for Vedātmaka. The four-faced Brahmā named Hiraṇyagarbha and the Vedic lore are but the expressions of the Supreme Reality which, as the impelling Spirit, influences one to do acts meritorious or otherwise.]

नारायणायं विद्यहें वासुदेवायं धीमहि । तन्नों विष्णुः प्रचोदयीत् ॥ २९ ॥ नारायणं जानीम । तदर्थं वासुदेवं ध्यायम । तस्मिन् ध्याने विष्णुः अस्मान् प्रेरयतु ॥

29. May we know Nārāyaṇa. For that, may we meditate upon Vāsudeva. May Viṣṇu impel us towards it.

[The Highest Person is here supplicated as Nārāyaṇa, Vāsudeva and Viṣṇu. Until and unless He impels the individual Soul, it cannot contemplate Him, and without contemplation on Him, His true nature cannot be understood. The etymological meanings of the three epithets are given at length in the bhāṣyas on the Gītā and Viṣṇusahasranāma. Bhattabhāskara's explanation of these words in the Viṣṇugāyatrī is noteworthy. He derives Nārāyaṇa thus: The term Nara, being derived from the root nr to lead, means the leader of all creation. derived from the above word denotes his offsprings. Narayana, therefore, is the effective cause of all creatures. Thus Nārāyaņa is Paramātman. He is called Vāsudeva in his immanent aspect, i.e., dwelling in all creatures as Antaryāmin. The term Viṣṇu implies His all-pervasiveness.]

वज्जन्षायं विद्यहें तीक्ष्णद्र थ्यायं घीमहि । तन्नों नारसि हः प्रचोदयात् ॥ ३०॥

वज्रनखं जानीम । तदर्थं तीक्ष्णदंष्ट्रं ध्यायेम । तस्मिन् ध्याने नारसिंहः अस्मान् प्रेरयतः ॥

30. May we know Vajranakha. For that, may we meditate upon Tīkṣṇadaṁṣṭra. May Nārasimha impel us towards it.

[This is a prayer to Narasimha. The lengthening of the vowel on the first letter of the word Narasimha makes no difference in the meaning, namely Man-lion God. Being partly leonine He has sharp eye-teeth and diamond-hard nails.]

भास्क्रायं विद्यहें महद्बुतिक्रायं घीमहि । तन्नों आदित्यः प्रचोदयीत् ॥ ३१ ॥

भास्करं जानीम । तदर्थं महाद्युतिकरं ध्यायेम । तस्मिन् ध्याने आदित्यः अस्मान् प्रेरयतु ॥

31. May we know Bhāskara. For that may we meditate upon the great-light-producer. May Āditya impel us towards it.

[Bhāskara literally means light-giver. The sun is believed to be the child of Aditi, mother of all gods, naturalistically the limitless sky. Mahaddyutikara in grammatical Sanskrit must be Mahādyutikara.]

वैश्वान्राय' विद्यहें लालीलाय धीमहि । तन्नों अग्निः प्रचोदयात् ॥ ३२ ॥

वैश्वानरं जानीम । तदर्थे लालीलं ध्यायेम । तस्मिन् ध्याने अग्निः अस्मान् प्रेरयतु ॥ 32. May we know Vaisvānara. For that, may we meditate upon Lālīla. May Agni impel us towards it.

[This is Agnigāyatrī. Fire is called Vaisvānara because He is favourable to all men by helping their cooking and worship. (विश्वेग्यो नरेग्यो हित:)) Nārāyaṇa explains in the Dīpikā that fire is called Lālīla, because oblations are licked up by flickering flames. He equates the word Lālīla with lelāyamāna in the Mundaka Upaniṣad. By attracting the syllable he of vidmahe some produce the word helālīla and explain it as the private sport of Fire-God (helā) and His play in the universe as the Supreme God (līlā).]

कात्यायनायं विद्यहें कन्यकुमारिं धीमहि । तन्नों दुर्गिः प्रचोदयीत् ॥ ३३ ॥

कात्यायनं जानीम । तदर्थे कन्यकुमार्रि ध्यायेम । तस्मिन् ध्याने दुर्गिः अस्मान् प्रेरयत् ॥

33. May we know Kātyāyana. For that, may we meditate upon Kanyakumāri. May Durgi impel us towards it.

[Bhaṭṭabhāskara explains that this Durgāgāyatrī has for its deity a particular sacred fire with which Durgā is identified. She is called Kātyāyana because of Her being the offspring of Katya in one of Her incarnations. Masculine gender of the word should be transformed into feminine. Kanyakumāri means a shining virgin, kanyā being derived from the root kan to shine. Kumāri is explained as destroyer of evil—(कुं कृत्सितं अनिष्टं मारयति इति।). The case and gender are to be transformed to bring them to the same pattern as other gāyatrīs. In the commentary given in the Ānandās'rama edition ascribed to an unknown author the following explanation is found: This is a prayer to Ādis'akti:—O Kanyakumāri, known as also Durgi, may we know Thee as most excellent and accessible solely through devotion—Thou who hast been a bestower of enjoyment and liberation to Kātyāyana (Thy father in one of Thy previous incarnations). The word Durgā is changed into Durgi.

Of these twelve gāyatrīs given above only six are accepted by Sāyaṇa and five by Bhaṭṭabhāskara. Dīpikā of Nārāyaṇa notes eighteen gāyatrīs of which the following are those not given above.

चतुर्मुखाय विद्यहे कमण्डलुधराय धीमहि ।
तन्नो ब्रह्मा प्रचोदयात् ॥ १ ॥
आदित्याय विद्यहे सहस्रकिरणाय धीमहि ।
तन्नो भानुः प्रचोदयात् ॥ २ ॥
पावकाय विद्यहे सप्तजिह्नाय धीमहि ।
तन्नो वैश्वानरः प्रचोदयात् ॥ ३ ॥
महाग्रुलिन्यै विद्यहे महादुर्गायै धीमहि ।
तन्नो भगवती प्रचोदयात् ॥ ४ ॥

सुभगायै विद्याहे कमलमालिन्यै धीमहि। तन्नो गौरी प्रचोदयात्॥ ५॥ नवकुलाय विद्याहे विषदन्ताय धीमहि। तन्न: सर्प: प्रचोदयात्॥ ६॥

The Agamas and Tantras enlist many more gayatrīs connected with other gods and goddesses; for, the worship of a god is not complete without a gayatrī. For instance:

महादेव्ये च विद्यहे विष्णुपल्ये च धीमहि ।
तन्नो लक्ष्मी: प्रचोदयात् ॥ १ ॥
रघुवंश्याय विद्यहे सीतावल्लभाय धीमहि ।

तन्नोऽघोर: प्रचोदयात् ॥ ४ ॥

सहस्रपरंमा देवी शातमूंला शाताङ्कुरा । सविश्रहरतुं में पापं दूर्वा दुं:स्वप्तनाशिनी ॥ ३४॥

सहस्रसंख्याकेम्यः पावनद्रव्येभ्यः परमोत्कृष्टा, अथवा फलदाने सहस्रात् अभ्यधिका, दीतिशालिनी अनेकमूला अनेकाङ्करशोभिता दुःस्वप्नफलनाशिनी दुर्वाभिमानिनी देवता मम पापं हरतु ॥

सहस्रपरमा superior to a thousand (purifying agencies) देवी embodying the divine spirit, shining रातमूला having many roots, and nodes राताङ्करा having many sprouts दु:स्वप्ननाशिनी destroyer of evil dreams दूर्वा durvā (panic grass) में my पापम् demerit, impurity सर्वम् all हरत ward off, remove.

34. May dūrvā (the panic grass), who represents the divine Spirit, who is superior to a thousand purifying agencies, who has innumerable nodes and sprouts and who destroys the effects of evil dreams, remove all my impurities.

[In the foregoing mantras it has been pointed out that there is only one Supreme Divine Reality and that the manifold objects of the universe represent that Reality symbolically. The Rudrasūkta salutes, among scores of other things, trees and plants and grass beds as the visible form of Rudra. By association some of the flora have acquired particular religious importance in Hindu spirituality. Dūrvā is a variety of pertinaciously growing beautiful grass, the shoots of which are used in various purificatory religious acts in the faith that they have an unseen effect in imparting to worshippers holiness and inner purity.

The religious pattern of individual life worked out by the scriptures spreads throughout the texture of the waking life of a spiritual man. A brāhmaṇa who lives according to the rules of the scriptures eliminates impulsive actions as far as possible and tries to approximate every act of his life to the form prescribed in the scriptures. From the moment he awakes from sleep in the last watch of night till he goes to bed late at night every hour of his life is programmed for the performance of religious duties. Worship of God (dharma) is the pivot on which all his other actions turn. His creaturely needs are fulfilled in such a way that a religious impress is put upon them by the repetition of certain mantras and adherence to a fixed pattern. Thus the mode of his leaving the bed; objects of his first sight; attending to his personal needs; his ablution; time, manner, material, place and preparation of his food; movement and rest of his body; and utterance of his speech are all governed by the scriptural rules. These are given in the Dharmas'astra texts at length. Actions of worship accompanied by sacred utterances repeated during their performance are particularly deemed efficacious. Although such ritualism at times degenerates into dry formalism which may give one the satisfaction that his religious obligations are fulfilled in the cheapest and easiest way, when performed in true spirit, it serves as a great carrying medium of true religion. Repetition of ritual acts creates an appropriate path, a habit of doing things in a worshipful spirit; and it thus purifies, enlightens and transforms the life subjected to it. Habit and attention, so necessary for religious life, are cultivated through proper religious acts.

The anustubh stanza given above in praise of durva is repeated at the time of a plunge bath which is taken early in the morning; then a few shoots of the grass with a little earth are placed on the head as an auspicious act. Such an auspicious bath is an ingredient of a life of worship. In addition to this stanza regarding dūrvā, the following variant stanza is recorded in Jacob's edition: दूर्वा अमृतसंभूता: शतम्ला: शताङ्कुरा: । शतं में झन्ति पापानि शतमायुर्विवर्धति ॥]

काण्डीत् काण्डात् प्ररोहंन्ती पर्वषः परुषः परि । एवा नो दूर्वे प्रतन्त सहस्रोण शतेन च ॥ ३९ ॥

काण्डात् काण्डात् परुषः परुषः परि प्ररोहन्ती हे दूर्वे एवं अस्मानपि वंशवृक्षया शतेन सहस्रोण च प्रकर्षेण विस्तारय ॥

काण्डात् काण्डात् from every stalk of jointed stem परुष: परुष: from every node परि further परोहन्ती growing दूवें O durva एवा (एवम्) analogously नः us शतेन सहस्रेण च by hundreds and thousands प्रतनु multiply.

35. O dūrvā, just as thou growest farther and farther multiplying at every node putting forth roots and fresh stalks, so also help us to grow in progeny by hundreds and thousands.

[The ancients who lived in an agrarian society close to Nature in a sparsely populated country valued growth of family in successive generations. They shuddered at the thought of the break of a lineage and the extinction of the social heritage transmitted through it. These families envied, as it were, dūrvā which gradually spread by the extension of its stalk in all directions.]

या शतेनं प्रतनोषिं सहस्रेण विरोहंसि । तस्योस्ते देवीष्टके विधेमं हविषां व्यम् ॥ ३६ ॥

हे देवि इष्टके, या त्वं रातेन प्रतनोषि विस्तारयिस सहस्रोण विरोहिस तस्याः ते परिचर्यां हविर्दानेन वयं कुर्मः ॥

देवि O Goddess (shining with green colour) इष्टके O thou worshipped by devotees या thou who रातेन by hundreds प्रतनोषि multiply सहस्रेण by thousands विरोहिस grow in different directions तस्याः ते thou who art of such (nature) (परिचर्याम् worship) वयम् we हिवा with oblations विधेम may perform.

36. O Devi, worshipped by devotees, may we worship thee with oblations—thou who multipliest thyself by hundreds and growest in thousands.

[These two stanzas are found originally in Tait-tirīyasamhitā IV. 2. 9 where they are employed for durveṣṭakopadhāna. The import of stanza 36 as explained here is partly contained in the previous one. These two stanzas are not given in the shorter text commented by Bhaṭṭabhāskara and Sāyaṇa. The word iṣṭake is the address of iṣṭakā. Iṣṭa, the past participle of the verb yaj, gives the meaning that which is worshipped. The form in the feminine with the suffix ka implying 'dear' gives the sense 'the dear one worshipped by the devotees'.]

अश्वकान्ते रंथकान्ते विष्णुक्तीन्ते वृसुन्धरा । शिरसा धारयिष्यामि रक्षस्व मीं पदे पदे ॥ ३७ ॥

हे अश्वक्रान्ते रथक्रान्ते विष्णुक्रान्ते वसुन्धरे त्वामहं शिरसा धार-यिष्यामि । मां पदे पदे रक्षस्व ॥

अश्वक्रान्ते traversed by a horse रथकान्ते traversed by a chariot विष्णुकान्ते traversed by Visnu वसुन्धरा (वसुन्धरे) O earth (लाम् you अहम् I) शिरसा on head धारियध्यामि shall take, hold; माम् me पदे पदे at every step रक्षस्व protect.

37. O earth that is traversed by a horse, a chariot and Visnu, I shall keep thee on my head; protect me at every step.

[A sacrificial ground is made holy by taking a horse over it. To indicate the sacredness of the earth the word asvakrāntā is used. So also it is believed that the earth is purified by the wheel of a chariot. In the incarnation of Trivikrama, Viṣṇu placed one foot on the earth and paced heaven. The earth is made sacred in that way also. The earth having these associations for holiness is considered particularly holy. What wonder if man is struck by feelings of reverence when he remembers the earth which is his support and source of nourishment?

Therefore as a symbolic act of self-purification the religious man places a little earth on his head muttering this mantra over it when he is about to take his morning bath. Some texts read vasundhare for vasundharā which makes it easy to construe with the preceding vocatives. In the second half sirasā dhāritā devī appears to be the older reading accepted by both Bhaṭṭabhāskara and Sāyaṇa. The whole stanza is regularized thus in the text used by Nārāyaṇa for his Dīpikā: अश्वकान्ते रथकान्ते विष्णुकान्ते वसुन्धरे। शिरसा धारिता देवि मां रक्षस्व पदे पदे ।

38. The earth is the giver of happiness like the milch cow, the sustainer of life and support for all living beings. (Represented as such the earth is addressed:) Thou wert raised up by Kṛṣṇa in His incarnation of the boar having hundred hands.

- 39. O excellent earth, destroy my evil deeds as well as sins connected with me. O excellent earth, thou art a gift from God to creatures. Thou art prayed over by Kāsyapa. O excellent earth, grant me prosperity, for everything depends on thee.
- 40. O excellent earth, on which all creatures are supported, cleanse all that (sin) from me. O excellent earth, my sins having been destroyed by thee, I attain to the highest goal.

Like the preceding stanza, this passage, containing seven lines divided into three mantras, is also used for purifying a quantity of earth held in the right hand before ablution. In the place of line 2 of mantra 39 the shorter version reads त्वया हतेन पापेन जीवामि श्रदश्यातम् and Bhattabhaskara notes after line 3, यहैवं यच मान्ष्यं ब्रह्मदत्तासि कस्यपि as accepted by tradition in order to complete the sense. In the last stanza तया हतेन is better represented by लया हतेन as accepted by most of the commentators. The repetition of the address 'O excellent earth' five times should be taken as an indication of the devotion which the seer of the mantra felt when he thought of the glory of the earth. Hindu religion reverences the earth which supports all life with the same feelings which a mother would call in the minds of her children. The earth is cited as the aptest illustration whenever one is in need of impressing about the necessity of patience. Man transforms the surface of the earth by cutting, digging, levelling and building with hard implements. Yet she yields him prosperity and enjoyment in turn.]

- 41. O Indra, make us fearless of those (causes such as sin, enemies and hell) of which we are afraid. O Maghavan, destroy that, i.e. the cause of fear, that is in us (thy devotees). For our protection destroy our harassing enemies.
- 42. May Indra come to our succour—Indra who is the giver of welfare on earth and bliss in the next world, who is the lord of people, who is the slayer of Vrtra, who is the subduer of enemies and giver of rain, who is peaceable and giver of safety.

[These two mantras reproduced from the Taittirīya-brāhmaṇa III. 7. 11 constitute a prayer to Indra for protection and safety when one is about to take bath. The variant reading tvam na ūtibhih instead of tanna ūtaye makes the syntax and meaning clear.

In the Ravedasamhitā a very large number of hymns are addressed to Indra who is described as the one ruler of the universe, the king of men, god of gods, lord of heaven, controller of the world, the Most High, immortal, protector of all, friend of sages, and the destroyer of the wicked. From these epithets it is clear that Indra is none other than the Supreme, the guide and protector of the universe. In these two mantras the devotee invokes His nearest presence for the destruction of internal and external enemies and the attainment of well-being and bliss. The regular morning bath of the pious Hindu is not merely an act of personal hygiene but a religious duty enjoined by the scripture in order to acquire religious merit and to destroy mental impurities as well. Prayers attered invoking the favour of divine Powers like Indra facilitate this end.

43. May Indra who is profusely praised by the devotees through sacred hymns, or frequently worshipped with oblations, vouchsafe to us safety and well-being. May the all-knowing or all-possessing Pūṣan vouchsafe to us well-being. May Garuḍa, the son of Tṛkṣa, whose chariot is not injured by anyone, vouchsafe to us safety. May Bṛhaspati, the preceptor of gods, grant us well-being.

[This mantra reproduced here from Rgveda I. 89.6 is intended to serve as a prayer for safety and wellbeing. It is uttered by one about to take bath in the belief that it helps to ward off the peril of sharks and crocodiles in water.]

44. Soma who is of mild anger, who strikes with stones, who shakes enemies, who has many deeds, who wields weapons and who delights in soma juice kept over, causes the jungles of dried up trees and bushes (to grow by the downpour of rains). Counter-weights do not weigh down making Indra light.

[This mantra occurs at Rgveda X. 89. 5. It is glossed by Yāska as a knotty stanza and explained by Sāyaṇa following in his wake. The translation and explanation given here are based on Sāyaṇa's Rgvedabhāṣya. Here Indra is called soma. Indra is depicted in the Rgveda mantras as the overlord, protector of men, immortal, the one sovereign of the universe. the eldest king, breaker of the wicked, the friend of sages, protector of all, the most powerful and the like. Whatever activity there is requiring power and energy, all belongs to Indra. He slew the demon Vrtra and released pent up rain which caused the earth smile with vegetation. This mantra gives some instances of the power of Indra, his heroism and activities in heaven. The term rjīsin occurs more than once as an epithet of Indra in the Rgveda and Sāyana explains rjīsa as gatasāra-somadravya. The word atasa occurs only once in the Raveda at II. 4. 7 and there it is explained by Sayana as dry bushes spread over the surface of the earth. Atasa also means flax. The similitude in the last line, according to Sāyaṇa, is given to prove that Indra excells all other gods. In order to test the relative greatness of Indra whatever one may place in the scales of a balance, none of them will weigh down and make him less in weight. The root dabh, says Sāyaṇa, has the sense of ākarṣaṇa here. In the Taittirīyasamhitā II. 2. 12 the same stanza occurs and there Sāvana explains it as describing Soma (the first three lines) and Indra (the last line). Soma has no anger though beaten with three stones (tripala) for extraction; in the process of pressing it shakes about (dhuni); it is subjected to operations (simi) like pressing and straining; its parts are infused (saru) and it leaves the sapless refuse $(rj\bar{\imath}sa)$. This soma cup is identified with soma, the moon; and soma the moon as the king of herbs increases vegetation (atasa) spread everywhere. No comparison hurts Indra—He is nonpareil. The commentary on this verse by the untraced author printed in the Ānandās'rama edition reveals no mark of acquaintance with the explanation given by Yāska and Sāyaṇa. The words tripalaprabharmā and dhuni are split there as tripalaprabhah and mādhuni and simīvān is explained as one who likes samivṛkṣa. No connected sense is possible according to this interpretation without supplying many conjectural ideas and without twisting the shape of the textual words.]

45. Vena, the noon sun who was born at the beginning of creation as the first effect of the Supreme Reality, Brahman, and who is of excellent brilliance, spreads over the whole world up to its boundary. He illumines also the heavenly bodies. He remains manifoldly in his own limited forms which are like himself. He also spreads over and permeates the causal substance out of which the visible and the invisible universe emerges.

[This mantra is found in the Taittirīyasamhitā IV. 2. 8. 2 etc., and Atharvaveda IV. 1. 1 and V. 6. 1 where Sāyaṇa interprets it differently. Here it is taken as a glorification of Paramātman, the ground of the universe and the cause of the energising and illumining sun through whom He functions. Gender concord is not accepted always as one of the criterions by the commentators in explaining the Vedic mantras. So jajñānam and prathamam in neuter qualify Vena in masculine. The vocable $budhniy\bar{a}$ is found in the $Samhit\bar{a}$ text as $budhny\bar{a}$ in the neuter plural form. Budhna means the sky. The upasarga vi has to be joined with $\bar{a}vah$. The term Vena comes from the root Vi to shine etc. The form vivah is traced to the root vr to cover.]

स्योना पृथिवि भवी नृक्षरा निवेशीनी । यच्छो नः शभी सुप्रथीः ॥ ४६ ॥

नृक्षरा अर्थात् नरोपलक्षितस्य चतुर्विधभृतजातस्य उत्पादयिता तेषां यथायोग्यस्थानेषु निवेदानी सर्वसिहण्णुत्वेन प्रथायुक्ता च भू: भवति । हे प्रथिवि सा त्वं अस्मभ्यं स्थोना अर्थात् दु:खानामन्तकरी भव । पुनश्च द्रामं अर्थात् ऐहिकामुष्मिकसुखं अपि देहि ॥

- नृक्षरा producer of men and other creatures निवेशनी settler सप्रथा: famous हे पृथिवि O earth न: for us स्योना ender of sorrows भवा (भव) be, शर्म happiness यच्छा (यच्छ) grant.

46. Being the producer of creatures including men and their settler in respective regions and also far-famed for forbearance, O earth, be to us an ender of sorrows and giver of bliss here and hereafter.

[The lengthening of the final vowels in $bhav\bar{a}$ and $yacch\bar{a}$ is a Vedic peculiarity. Syon \bar{a} is derived from the root so to make an end and $k\bar{s}ar\bar{a}$ in $nrk\bar{s}ar\bar{a}$ is from the verb $k\bar{s}\bar{a}rayati$ according to a commentator.

This stanza occurs at Rgveda I. 22. 15. Sāyaṇa interprets syonā in that context as 'extended' or 'joy.' Nṛkṣarā is taken by Sāyaṇa as anṛkṣarā and explained 'free from thorns.' According to him ṛkṣara is a thorn. The six mantras from 41 to 46 are not found in the shorter version and so Bhaṭṭa-bhāskara and Sāyaṇa have no commentary on these in this context.]

47. I invoke in this act of worship S'rī, the support of all, who is known through smell, who is unassailable, perpetually prosperous, rich in cowdung and the mistress of all created beings.

This anustubh mantra can be traced to S'rīsūkta of Raveda khila. Here Bhūdevatā is glorified as S'rī because of the earth's being the cause of prosperity. According to some, this verse is repeated while the ground is purified by cowdung, and according to others, while smearing earth on the body before bath. The regent of the earth is lauded as the mistress of all created beings because all life depends upon the earth. Even denizens of heaven are maintained by worship made on the earth. Prosperity of the earth consists in fruitful vegetation, plenty of cattles and towns and cities built in hospitable areas. Special mention of perpetual prosperity, cowdung and fragrance suggest this. Though man has by his toil and skill brought out unprecedented wealth from the bowels of the earth still she remains unassailable or durādharsā. After this mantra and before 48 some books give the following two formulas:-एँ भूर्लक्ष्मी: भुवर्लक्ष्मी: सुव: कालकर्णी, तन्नो महालक्ष्मी: प्रचोदयात् and पद्मप्रभे पद्ममुन्दरि धर्मरतये स्वाहा.]

48. May S'rī favour me. May Alakṣmī connected with me and mine be destroyed. The gods having Viṣṇu for their chief (who is the perpetual abode of S'rī) by the help of (the means prescribed in) the Vedas won these worlds for themselves free from the fear of enemies. May Indra armed with thunderbolt and worshipful moon grant us happiness.

[Of the three lines given above the second and the third occur at Taittirīyasamhitā I. 7. 5 and I. 4. 29 respectively. Sāyaṇa explains sodasī as an epithet of Indra who is lauded with sixteen stotra-s or s'astra-s. This mantra and the following two are said to be employed as a prayer for entering water for bath.]

[This stanzais found at Rgveda 1.18.1 and Taittirīya-samhitā I. 5. 6. The explanation given in the anonymous commentary published in the Ānandās'rama edition appears to be unsatisfactory. The translation given here is based on Sāyaṇa's commentary.]

51. He who is rendered holy by the ancient, widespread, sanctifying feet (or by virtuous conduct) crosses over evil deeds and their effects. Having been rendered holy by that naturally pure and purifying feet of the Lord (or conduct) may we overcome our enemies, the sins.

[This mantra is reproduced from the Taittirīyabrāhmaṇa III. 12. 3 here for the purpose of japa to be done by one standing in knee-deep water about to plunge for taking his bath. This is also repeated while a holy brāhmaṇa's feet are ceremoniously washed. The term caranam, however, in the singular number as we see in the text is directly interpreted as sāstrīyācaraṇa, virtuous conduct as ordained by the scriptures. This gives an apt and ethically ennobling meaning. Interpreting in the context of worship, caraṇam in singular is taken to stand for caraṇa devatā, Viṣṇu, and by implication the two feet of Nārāyaṇa, the Ancient One, whose wide gait encompassed earth, sky and heaven. Symbolically He is worshipped in the holy brāhmaṇa also.]

[This Rk is originally found at Rgveda III. 47. 2 and also at Taittirīyasamhitā I. 4. 29. 8 and III. 47. 2. The five passages from 48 to 52 are not in the shorter version and so they are not commented upon by Bhaṭṭabhāskara and Sāyaṇa.]

53. For us may (the regents of) water and herbs be friendly and to those who dislike us and whom we dislike let them be unfriendly.

[This mantra is reproduced from the Taittirīya-sanhitā I. 4. 45 and also Taittirīyabrāhmana II. 6. 3. Standing in waist-deep water the worshipper repeats the first half of the mantra, takes a quantity of water in the hollow of his joined palms and throws it to his front thinking about his friends; repeating the remaining half similarly again he throws some water towards the direction in which his enemies are supposed to be. The complementary passage in the Brāhmana is: द्रपदादिवेन्मुम्चान:, स्विन: स्नात्वी मलादिव, पूर्त पवि-लेणवाड्यं, आप: ग्रुन्धन्तु मैनसः ॥ i.e. May I be cleansed from sins by the waters just as a culprit is released from the wooden clog for his legs (drupada), just as a man who perspires is purified by a bath, and just as clarified butter is strained by a filter (utpavanapavitra).

The Vedas are meant to generate in those whofollow them certain potencies which help them in all situations and conditions. The highest ideal held forth by the Vedas to those who have completed the discipline prescribed in them is realisation of the Infinite Self dwelling in all creatures as the reality behind their finite existences. Those who have attained to this goal have no friends and no foes. They see equally God in all. They are extremely Therefore the Vedas have only a luminously precious fraction describing them. The largest part of the Vedas is meant for the common man who is tossed by likes and dislikes. Failure to recognise the fears and hopes of the natural man makes a scripture unrealistic. Ideals unconnected with the practical needs of human nature cannot enter into the daily life of the ordinary man. To suppose that the Vedas always deal with high philosophy and ethics only will be a delusion. Mystical formulas like the present one are found in many passages of the Vedas. They are given to propitiate friendly agencies and to suppress the enemies. Without peace and prosperity. s'anti and pusti, higher religious aspiration is impossible. That is why we find in the Vedas prayers like this one which deal with the lower purusarthas.]

54. O waters, verily you are bliss-conferring. Being such, grant us food, and great and beautiful insight (of the Supreme Truth). Further make us in this very life participators of that joy of yours which is most auspicious, just like fond mothers (who nurse their darlings with nourishment). May we attain to that satisfactory abode of yours which you are pleased to grant us. Generate for us also the waters of life and pleasures on earth (during our sojourn here).

These three Rks, reproduced here from Taittirīyasamhitā IV. 1. 5, rank among the important prayers addressed to the Divine Being in connection with the twilight devotions and other acts of worship. These are repeated also for the ceremonious regeneration of oneself by proksana or holy aspersion. The deity extolled in these passages is water which is not merely the essential liquid element that sustains life but the Supreme Reality. No doubt, the liquid element is supremely important as the giver of food, happiness and the sustenance which is necessary for higher insight and achievement. The qualifying words used here, however, serve also as signs to infer the Supreme Truth or Brahman. The word mayah in the Vedic means bliss; and unlimited bliss is Brahman only. The immediate intuition of Brahman alone deserves to be called the great and beautiful vision.

The term rasa in the Upanisad is expressive of the bliss of Brahman, and here it is described as most auspicious. The homely analogy of the fond mother nourishing her children applies to Divine Providence ever solicitous for the welfare of created beings. Ordinary water required for the sustenance of life has its home or source in Brahman and so here the cause and the effect are described as In substance, therefore, this is a prayer identical. addressed to the Supreme Being by the needy man who has been awakened to the necessity of worship, entreating for food and sustenance for body, mind and spirit, and for imperishable bliss. To the pious Hindu the universal liquid element is not merely an essential of life but also the visible and tangible divinity available at hand for worship and self-purification. Therefore the tendency to think of water solely as a chemical substance, to defile it wantonly and to waste it when living beings are in need of it deserves to be treated as sin against God Himself. Regarding this the Taittirīyāraṇyaka I. 26. 7 states: नाप्यु मूत्र-पुरीषं कुर्यात्, न निष्ठीवेत्, न विवसनः स्नायात्। न कूर्मस्याश्रीयात् नोदकस्य अघातुकान्येनमोदकस्य भवन्ति । अघातुकाः -Let not a person spit, urinate, or defecate in water; nor bathe unclad. Let him not eat any part of the tortoise or fish. Then no aquatic creature will hurt him and water will be auspicious towards him.]

155, I take refuge in Varuna, who is of golden lustre or who has a golden diadem. O Varuna, being entreated by me, grant me the saving grace. For I have enjoyed what belongs to bad people and accepted gift from sinners.

[This mantra and the following one are addressed to Varuna, the regent of the waters, during the plunge bath. The word $t\bar{\imath}rtha$ has the sense of a ford, a bathing ghat or what helps a man to cross over sin. Varuna is prayed for a proper bathing place and for the saving religious merit that accrues from a holy bath. If a person is compelled by the force of circumstances to accept necessaries of life from wrong and sinful persons, expiation for such transgression of the scriptural rule is required through the performance of purificatory acts. The high moral tone evident in the mantra mobilizes common sentiment against co-operation with sin and wickedness in any form. In Chandogya Upanisad V. 11.5 we read the declaration of As'vapati Kekaya to the five brahmanas, who hesitated to accept his gifts, that he was a King whose gifts are worthy of acceptance, because he ruled the country so well that there was no thief, no toper, no cuckold, no whore or any ignoramus in his land.]

56. May Indra, Varuna, Brhaspati and Savitr completely destroy that sin committed by me and my people in thought, word and act.

[This too is a mantra repeated along with the previous one during bath. Perhaps the reading tanma indrah in the second half noted by Bhaṭṭa-bhāskara agrees with the context better.]

- 59. May the King Varuna efface by his hand whatever sin I have incurred by unlawful eating, unlawful drinking and accepting gifts from an unlawful person.
- 60. Thus being sinless, stainless and unbound by evil and bondage, may I ascend to the happy heaven and enjoy equality of status with Brahman.

[These two mantras are uttered while taking a dip in water. It is the duty of a religious man to eat and drink only after having performed his daily devotions which consist in the worship of gods, ancestors and men duly with oblations. If he attended to his own physical needs of nourishment before discharging this religious duty it is considered unlawful. So also a religious man must be careful about right livelihood. He should not accept wealth or articles of necessity from any person whose earnings are not approved by scriptural regulations. If under straitened circumstances he is exposed to the sin resulting from the transgression of the rule in these respects, he ought to expiate it by this penitent prayer to Varuna. The goal of the aspirant is to become god-like in the highest heaven. For him life on this earth, therefore, must be an effort for freedom from sin and attainment of purity. The bondage which is often spoken of in this context comprises not only in the commission of sins forbidden by the s'astras and omission of enjoined duties, but also the sins of temper and passion as stressed in the first half of mantra 60. There is a reading dustat pratigrahat for ugrat pratigrahāt.]

य: he who अध्मर्षण: sin-effacing वरण: Varuna अप्स in waters (not mentioned before) स: he च and पुनात may purify.

61. May the sin-effacing Varuna who dwells in other sources of water like rivers, tanks, and wells also purify us.

[This short mantra is evidently a supplement to the previous one.]

62. O Gangā, O Yamunā, O Sarasvatī, O S'utudri, O Marudvṛdhā, O Ārjīkīyā, come together and listen to this hymn of mine along with Paruṣṇi, Asikni, Vitastā and Suṣomā.

This is a jagatī stanza from the Rayeda X. 75. 5 for the invocation of the Regents of various holy rivers in connection with purificatory rites. To the Vedic seers the great rivers mentioned here represented Divinity. They often expressed their devotion and gratitude to these life-sustaining and purifying rivers by proper invocations. Their descendants even when they had emigrated from the banks of those rivers prayed to the river goddesses to be present in any water which they used for their daily needs and worship. With the simplicity of a guileless child they prayed to these liquid divinities to be present in their own bodies through the connection of water which they used. They also entreated them to purify their bodies and minds and to youchsafe them safety and welfare. Bhattabhāskara takes the name Parusni to be Aparusni by attracting the immediately preceding vowel, and tries to interpret each name based on some fancied quality of the river-Asikni is called so because of her white (asita) colour; Susomā passes through a region where soma creepers grow; Vitastā is never dried up; S'utudri has a fast current. Students of Indian history find here the names of those rivers on the banks of which the Rgvedic people settled at a very remote period. They identify Susomā with Sohān, Vitastā with Jhelum, Asiknī with Chinab, Marudvṛdhā with Maruwārdwān, Paruṣṇi with Rabi and S'utudri with Sutlej.]

63. From the all-illuminating Supreme, by His resolve, the right and the true were generated. From Him night and day were generated. And from Him again was generated the sea with different waters.

64-65. Then, after the creation of the vast ocean the year was generated. Afterwards the ruler of the world of sentient and non-sentient beings who made day and night ordained sun and moon, sky and earth and the atmosphere and blissful heaven, just as they were in the previous cycles of creation.

[These three anustubh mantras from the Rgveda X. 190. 1-3 are reputed to be sin-effacing or aghamarsana. The subject matter dealt with in these stanzas being, evidently, the creation of the universe, the context demands an explanation which connects the thoughts directly or indirectly with the Supreme

Being. The prayer purports to be a means of selfpurification. According to the dharmas astras these mantras may also be repeated for the expiation of sins (prāyas'citta), besides their use during bath. The interpretation of Bhattabhaskara follows the Vis'istādvaitic tradition while that of Sāyana is Advaitic. According to Bhattabhāskara rtam implies the totality of sentient beings and satyam the individual Souls. Their source, the Divine Being, is indicated by abhīddhāt tapasah. Rātri stands for non-sentient prakrti and not night; for, the creation of the sun and the moon is mentioned only in stanza 65. Samudra in the text, again according to him, refers to mahat and arnava stands for the indistinguishable source of all creatures. Although Hindu religion has accepted the idea of the creation of the universe in general, there is a marked difference between the Hindu view of creation and the Christian view of it. This is evident from the 65th stanza which declares that each creationistic cycle is a counterpart of the previous one similiar in order and categories created for the benefit of individual Souls.

May the sin-effacing Varuna, the deity presiding over the waters, purify the taint of sin that attaches to the beings dwelling on the earth, in the atmospheric region and in the space between the earth and heaven and also connected with us (the performers of religious work). May the Vasus purify us. May Varuna May Aghamarsana, the sage called purify us. by that name, purify us. He, Varuna, is the protector of the world that was and also the world that exists at present between the past and the future worlds. He grants to the doers of meritorious deeds the worlds which they deserve and to the sinful the world of death called Hiranmaya. Again Varuna who is the support of heaven and earth, having become the sun is wholesome and attractive. Being such, blissful in nature, thou O Varuna, grant us thy favours and purify us.

The mantras contained in this paragraph are repeated while dipping oneself in water for bath. In the first clause the term $p_{r}thiv\bar{\imath}$ is supposed to denote the underworlds as rodasī expresses the earth as well as heaven. $D\bar{\imath}pik\bar{a}$ notes the reading $im\bar{a}k$ tad āpah which is superior to the one printed in the text, for in that case it is a demonstrative pronoun limiting apah and the construction becomes clear without supplying extraneous words. For madhya there is a substitute reading bhavue. Either way the position of that word is anomalous and an explanation is possible by filling in the construction with other words. The thought appears to have been broken off before the sentence was complete. The reading hiranmayah as found in some edition helps for greater clarity as it would qualify eşa and mrtyoh may be construed with lokam understood. Hiranmayam is taken by a commentator as the name of a particular region of Death. No support is given for the assertion. Perhaps there may be a hint that the allurement of unlawful pleasures is the gate of death. The term suvah is really the monosyllablic svah chanted as such. The whole passage is highly elliptical and so the translation given is interpretative.

आद्वें ज्वलेति ज्योतिर्हमंस्मि। ज्योतिर्ज्वलेति ब्रह्माहमस्मि। योऽहमंस्मि ब्रह्माहमंस्मि । अहमंस्मि ब्रह्माहमंस्मि । अहमे-वाहं मां जुहोमि स्वाहां ॥ ६७ ॥ परमात्मज्योतिः सृष्टिकाले जलेन आर्द्र वीजमिव विजृंभणोन्मुखं भूत्वा ज्वलित अर्थात् प्रपञ्चलपेण वर्धते । अथवा आर्द्रगुणोपेतं उदकं तद्धिष्टितेन परमात्मचैतन्येन प्रकाशते । यदात्मज्योतिः प्रकाशते तदेवाहमस्मि, न ततः अन्यः । अथ यत् ज्योतिः भूत्वा ज्वलित अथवा देहेन्द्रियादिभ्यो विवेचितस्य मम प्रत्यक् चैतन्यलपेण प्रकाशते तत् परं ब्रह्म अहमस्मि । अविवेकदशायां याह्म्रूपः अहं जीवः अस्मि स एवाहं इदानीं उक्तप्रकारेण ब्रह्मास्मि । वस्तुतः ब्रह्मण्येव मिय पूर्वे अञ्चानेन आरोपिते जीवत्वे विद्यया अपनीते सित इदानीं ब्रह्मस्वरूपमेव अहं अनुभविता अस्मि । तस्मात् पूर्विसिद्धः ब्रह्मस्वरूपी अहमेव जल्क्ष्पं मां महेहवर्तिनः देवान् उद्दिश्य उदरामौ जुहोमि स्वाहा । आध्यात्मिकदृष्ट्या इदानीं अभेदध्यानेन मिय एव परमात्मज्योतिर्हुताशने विज्ञानात्मल्क्षणं हवीर्ह्पं मां स्वाहुतां आहुति-मिव प्रक्षिप्य स्वस्वरूपाभिनिष्पत्त्याविर्मावफलं होमं निवर्तयामि ॥

आर्द्रम् water, what is soaked in water ज्वलित shines, ज्योति: light अहम् I अस्मि am. ज्योति: light ज्वलित shines ब्रह्म Brahman अहम् I अस्मि am. यः he who अहम् I अस्मि am ब्रह्म Brahman अहम् I अस्मि am. अहम् I अस्मि am ब्रह्म Brahman अहम् I अस्मि am. अहम् I एव alone अहम् I साम् me जुहोमि offer स्वाहा hail.

67. That Supreme Light which projected Itself as the universe like a soaked seed which sprouts (or that Supreme Light which shines as the substratum of the liquid element)—I am that Supreme Light. I am that supreme light of Brahman which shines as the inmost essence of all that exists. In reality I am the same infinite Brahman even when I am experiencing myself as a finite self owing to Ignorance. Now by the onset of knowledge I am really that Brahman which is my eternal nature. Therefore I realise this identity by making myself, the finite self, an oblation into the fire of the infinite Brahman which I am always. May this oblation be well made.

[These formulas are generally prescribed for repetition during the performance of ācamana or sipping of water in a specified way for ceremonious self-purification. This symbolic action consists in taking a very small quantity of water by the mouth which should not pass below the throat. These few drops of water are considered as an oblation made to the deities dwelling in the body; for all the gods dwell in man. Taittirīyasamhitā IV. 4. 2 states ब्राह्मणो वै सर्वा देवता:—
The brāhmaṇa is all the gods. This is explained by Manu, XII. 119:—

आत्मेव देवताः सर्वाः सर्वमात्मन्यवस्थितम् । आत्मा हि जनयत्येषां कर्मयोगं शरीरिणाम् ॥

Though the mantra 67 is ritualistic in application as explained above, its true import is highly philosophical and spiritual as pointed out by Bhaṭṭabhāskara. The drop of water represents the finite self. The fire in man into which it is offered stands for the Supreme Light, the Ground of all gods. The mantra, therefore, truly enunciates the refunding of the individual self into its source, the Supreme

Self, or the realisation of the identity between the jīva and Īs'vara when the adjuncts created by Ignorance are removed.]

अकुर्यकार्यवकीणीं स्तेनो भ्रूणहा गुरुत्रलपगः। वर्रुणोऽपामवमर्षुणस्तस्मीत् पापात् प्रमुच्यते ॥ ६८॥

अकार्यकारी a transgressor of the scriptural conduct अवकीर्णी a recreant स्तेन: a thief भ्रणहा a feticide, one who destroys the Veda by slaying its repository, the brāhmaṇa गुरुतल्पगः one who outrages the preceptor's honour तस्मात् from that पापात् from sin अमुच्यते is released. अपाम् of waters (स्वामो regent) वरुणः Varuṇa अघमर्पणः effacer of sin.

68. He who is a transgressor of the scriptural conduct, a recreant, a thief, a feticide or an outrager of his preceptor's honour is released from his sins; for Varuṇa, the regent of waters and effacer of sins (absolves them from sins by the repetition of this mantra).

[This mantra is also employed for repetition during bath. According to the traditional codes avakīrnin is one who gives up his vow of continence and bhrūnahan is one who acts in a way detrimental to the preservation of the Veda. With the development of moral and religious susceptibilities in a religious person through faith and practice, he comes to entertain a revulsion for all suspected sins which are possible in the society to which he belongs. He is afraid of their presence in some of his innumerable past births. He suspects them even in the present life. Further, being cognisant of the supreme purity of God whom he worships, the feeling of abasement often overtakes him and inclines him to consider himself an actual or a potential sinner. All his sins he expiates nevertheless through daily acts of purity such as the repetition of holy formulas like the present one, accompanied by prescribed acts like bath. The s'āstras have never given licence for unholy acts with provision for their future cancellation by rituals.]

रजोम्मि: ground of sins (अहम् I); त्व (त्वम्) you माम् me रोदयस्व cause to weep धीरा: the wise प्रवदन्ति say.

69. I am the ground of sins. Therefore you cause me to weep. Wise men say (don't make me weep, but favour me by destroying my sins).

[This formula also is expiatory and is repeated along with the previous one. The statement appears to be grammatically incomplete and so an interpretative translation is given supplementing the gap as the commentator has done. In the older version the third line of passage 66 of this section is transposed here with slight variation and that has helped Bhaṭṭabhāskara and Sāyaṇa to give a more jointed meaning for the passage. According to Sāyaṇa it may be then construed thus; रजस: भूमि: अहं, त्वं मां रोदयस्व । यद्यपि एतत् तव उचितं तथापि ऋषय: एनं पुनन्तु, वसव: एनं पुनन्तु, वरुण: एनं पुनातु, अध्मर्भण: एनं पुनातु इति धीरा: मां अनुग्रह्णन्त: प्रवदन्ति । धीरै: अनुग्रहीतत्वात् ऋष्यादिभि: पूतं मां हे यमदेव त्वमि मा बाधस्व किन्तु अनुग्रहाण ॥]

70. The Supreme represented as the ocean has overflown to the whole creation. He has created at first creatures according to the deserts of their various past deeds. He is the ruler of the universe and the munificent giver of gifts to the devotees. He dwells together with Umā (His power giving spiritual illumination) in the hearts of devotees which are holier than other parts of their body (the seat of the Divine) and therefore superior and elevated like a peak and affording protection. The Jīva who is his abode grows to be infinite. He is the Lord who delights the individual souls by guiding according to their deeds and conferring on them fruits of their actions.

[This tristubh mantra is prescribed for repetition after bath. It is reproduced from the Samhita portion and a spiritual meaning is needed in this context. Therefore an explanatory rendering based on commentators is given here. Two possible interpretations are given in Sanskrit according to two accepted commentators. The word sano is taken to stand for sānau and figuratively explained as heart. Avya comes from the root av to protect, which gives also the sacred syllable Om (avane sādhuh Om), Somah is explained in the light of the puranic conception of Umāmahes'vara. The term Umā means knowledge in ancient Hittite and in some other central Asian languages. The Kenopanisad speaks of Umā haimavatī and S'rī S'ankarācārya explains Umā in the context as sobhanatamā vidyā, the most splendid knowledge of Brahman appearing as the daughter of the Himalayas. The word Indu shares the same root with Indra and so may be an expression for the Lord also.

1. May we offer oblations of soma to Jātavedas. May the all-knowing One destroy what is unfriendly to us. May He, the Divine Fire that leads all, protect us by taking us across all perils even as a captain takes the boat across the sea. May He also save us from all wrongs.

[This section reproduces the well known Durgāsūkta originally found scattered in the Rgveda and also in other Vedic contexts. This is prescribed for japa undertaken to ward off the difficulties that beset the path of life. Jātavedas, interpreted physically as fire, stands for the all-knowing Divine Reality that is worshipped with the Vedic rituals. As Fire He is worshipped in the soma sacrifices with the oblation of soma juice. Bhattabhasakra points out that the devotee's petition to the Lord worshipped in the somayaga for destroying his enemies includes not only the destruction of the hostile agencies outside him but also his internal enemies namely the passions and impulses which act enemically when he progresses towards his goal. Further, the sea of troubles which he expects to cross through the grace of Agni includes every wrong, suffering and difficulty incidental to a man's mundane life. The words veda and vedas in this stanza stand for one who knows everything i.e. the Divine Fire. The word agnih is analysed as agram nayati agranih, that is to say he who leads one to higher levels—the Divinity dwelling as the Self of all creatures. The verb parşad expresses protection according to Bhattabhāskara and destruction according to Sāyana. It is derived from the root pr to protect or to fulfil. This stanza is the same as Rgveda I. 99. 1.]

(तुम्यम् to you) नमः salutation.

2. I take refuge in Her, the Goddess Durgā, who is fiery in lustre and radiant with ardency, who is the Power belonging to the Supreme who manifests Himself manifoldly, who is the Power residing in actions and their fruits rendering them efficacious (or the Power that is supplicated to by the devotees for the fruition of their work). O Thou Goddess skilled in saving, Thou takest us across difficulties excellently well. Our salutations to Thee.

[In this stanza we get a clear reference of Durgā the Goddess, according to Sāyaṇa. The word Durgā literally means inaccessible (दु:खेन गन्तुं शक्या). In the previous stanza the same word in neuter was taken in the sense of a difficult place or difficulty. In this one the word is in the feminine form as Durgā, the name of the Goddess. Durgā is, therefore, the Deity who removes difficulties from the path of Her votaries. According to the Vedic tradition a particular sacrificial fire consecrated for the worship of the Divine is called Durgā and by extension the word applies also to the power of creative and evolutionary energy which is associated with fire in many Vedic stanzas pertaining to Agni. It is, therefore, difficult to separate the conception of Durgā and fire conceived as the universal energy in this sukta. The predominant idea here, however, is that the Supreme represented as Durgadevi is the saviour of man in his troubles of mundane life and bestower of the highest bliss. This idea is fully developed in puranic works dealing with the deeds and worship of Durgā, the Divine Mother of the Universe.

3. O Fire, thou art worthy of praise. With happy methods take us beyond all difficulties. May our home town and home land become extensive and may the plot of earth (for growing the crops) also be ample. Further be thou pleased to join our children and their children with joy.

[Agni here stands for the same Deity mentioned in the above stanza. The words toka and tanaya, though in singular, are taken in generic plural. The term samyoh is a combination of sam joy reaching upto the highest bliss and yoh expressing the sense of mixing or joining. This stanza is the same as Taittirīyasamhitā I. 1. 14. 12 where Sāyaṇa takes tanaya as daughter. See also Rgveda I. 189. 2 and Taittirīyabrāhmaṇa II. 8. 2 for this stanza.]

विश्वांनि नो दुर्गहा जातवेदः सिन्धुं न नावा दुरितातिपर्षि । अप्ने अत्रिवन्मनेसा गृणानीऽस्माकं बोध्यविता तुनूनाम् ॥ ४॥

हे जातवेद: दुर्गहा सर्वापदां अपहन्ता त्वं सर्वाणि दुरितानि नावा सिन्धुं इव अस्मान् अतीत्य स्थितान् कृत्वा पालयसि । हे अग्ने अत्रि: यथा सर्वभूतानां सदा भद्रमिच्छन् मनसा आशासन् आस्ते तथा त्वमपि अस्माकं तन्नां रक्षिता भूत्वा बोधि जागरूको भव ॥

हे जातवेद: O Jatavedas दुर्गहा destroyer of difficulties (लम् thou) विश्वानि entire दुरिता (दुरितानि) evils, sins नावा by a boat सिन्धुम् sea न (इव) analogously न: us अतिपर्षि takest beyond and protectest. अमे O Fire, अत्रिवत् similar to Atri मनसा mentally गृणान: repeating अस्माकम् our तन्ताम् of selves, of bodies अविता guard, protector बोधि be conscious.

4. O Jātavedas, Thou who art the destroyer of all sins takest us beyond all troubles and protectest us just as one is taken across the sea by a boat. O Fire, guard our bodies and be mindful (of its safety) like the sage Atri who always repeats mentally ('May everyone be whole and happy').

[This stanza is found in Rgveda V. 4. 9 and also in Taittirīyabrāhmaņa II. 4.1, where Sāyaṇa takes durgahā as duṣpariharāṇi, an adjective qualifying duritāṇi. The third line of the stanza is thus explained अत्रिणा महर्षिणा चत्रात्रे कर्मणि यथा स्त्यसे तथा

अस्माभि: मनसा स्त्यमान: अस्माकं तनूनां रक्षको भूत्वासमद्भक्तिः बुष्यस्व।—Be a protector to us and recognize our devotion to thee; for we are hymning to theementally as Atri the sage did during his performance of the Caturatra sacrifice. Sayana has here in the Upanisad commentary the following note on Atrivat. There was a great sage who had attained supreme illumination and freedom-in-life and so was known as Atri, that is to say, one who is free from triple miseries. Goodwill and compassion for all created beings constitute the chief character trait of such a sage. Therefore people had always observed Atri in a state of mind in which he was constantly remembering in his prayers peace and safety for all creatures. He became a byword for universal compassion. There is a variant reading bhūtvavitā as the substitute for bodhyavitā in which case the construction तन्नां अविता भूतु (भवतु) makes the meaning easy. The Rgvedic text has namasā in the place of manasā which is explained by Sāyaṇa: with hymns—stotras.

पृतनाजित् सह मानमुग्रम् झि इंवेम पर्मात्स्थस्थात् । स नः पर्ष्वति दुर्गाण् विश्वा सामेद्देवो अति दुरितात्यक्षः॥५॥

5. We invoke from the highest place of assembly the Fire-God who is the leader of all, who is the charger and vanquisher of the hosts of enemies, and who is fierce. May He, the Fire-God take us across all our difficulties and wrongs and all that is perishable, and protect us.

[The root kṣai expressing the idea of decrease or diminution gives the usual participle form kṣāmaḥ. But here in the Vedic form it is found as kṣāmat and Bhaṭṭabhāskara takes it to stand for the decreasing and perishing phenomenal reality beyond which lies the imperishable Supreme Reality. Sāyaṇa, on the other hand, takes the word to be akin to kṣāmyat meaning condoning the offences and construes it as an adjective qualifying agni. Bhaṭṭabhāskara following a philosophical trend of interpretation holds that Agni here is the first and the foremost Principle which dominates the universal categories and which is meditated in the highest place or invoked from there by mundane worshippers.]

6. Thou who art lauded in sacrifices increasest our happiness. Thou abidest in the form of sacrificers, ancient and recent, in the places of sacrifice. O Fire, be thou pleased to make (us) happy (who are) thine own selves. Further grant us from all sides good fortune.

The above rendering is based on Bhattabhāskara who takes the words sanāt and navya as standing respectively for ancient and recent sacrificers i.e.

gods and men. Further according to him svām tanuvam stands for the universe represented as the body of God and also the individual souls in the universe who are but different abodes of the Divine Spirit. The second line consequently is an entreaty of the soul to God to grant those values which will elevate it to the divine state. Sāyaṇa's interpretation is purely ritualistic. According to him sanāt means giver of the results of actions and navyaḥ worthy of praise. The fourth foot is thus interpreted by him: O Fire, nourish your own body with the oblations offered by us. This stanza is found at Rgveda VIII. 11. 10 with the variant pratno hi.]

For that I make oblation to the Moon and the Quarters. Hail! Salutation to Gods! Svadhā (reverence) to Manes! (May the Deities of) Earth, Atmosphere and Heaven (assent to my desire with the utterance of) Om (and grant me) food.

[In these formulas and similar ones that follow the word-for-word meaning is not printed. It can be easily traced from the spaced texts and the English rendering subjoined to them. Moreover the words are often repeated, so much so their full reproduction in the word-for-word form will increase the type page without corresponding special advantage.

This section gives the necessary mantras employed for uttering while the institutor of the sacrifice who wishes an increase of food offers oblations into the consecrated fire for that purpose. The syllables bhūh, bhuvah, and suvah are called mahāvyāhrti-srepresenting terrestrial, atmospheric and heavenly regions. The Chāndogya Upanişad (4.17.1-3) says that through contemplation Prajapati extracted from fire, air and sun the three Vedas Rk, Yajus and Sāma respectively, and from these Vedas in the same order he again extracted the three vyāhrti-s, bhūh, bhuvah and suvah. So these three syllables are the quintessence of the three worlds and the three Vedas. They represent the Supreme. It is also stated there that the Prajapati in the beginning created the three regions uttering those three syllables. The word svāhā is an indeclinable word which terminates a formula used for offering oblations and it implies joyful and complete surrender of what is offered to the Deity in the sacrifice. The word namah again is a word of salutation which expresses complete self-surrender to the object of worship indicated by mental attitude, oral expression and physical action. Salutation with namah is often considered an act of worship complete in itself. The term svadhā is reserved for the expression of a person's reverence to his departed ancestors while he makes oblations to them. Bhaṭṭabhāskara interprets praṇava uttered at the end of this mantra as a recognition by the worshipper of his true nature—'I am that Brahman expressed by the syllable Om'. The same author derives the praṇava from the root av to protect—avane sādhuḥ—Om. The Gṛhyasūtras give the particular contexts where these mantras are used in the course of the homa or burnt offering.]

1. Hail! I offer this oblation to Brahman who is expressed by the first vyāhṛti, to Fire created by Him and to the Earth dependent on Him. Hail! I offer this oblation to Brahman who is expressed by the second vyāhrti, to the Air created by Him and to the Atmosphere dependent on Him. Hail! I offer this oblation to Brahman who is expressed by the third vyāhṛti, to the Sun created by Him and to Heaven dependent on Him. Hail! I offer this oblation to Brahman who is expressed by the vyāhṛtis, bhūḥ, bhuvaḥ and suvaḥ, to the Moon created by Him and to the Quarters. Salutation to the gods dwelling in all the regions! Reverence to the departed ancestors! I am that Brahman expressed by Om in unity and also expressed by the three vyāhrtis in His threefold aspect. O Divine Fire, assent to my prayer.

[This section and the immediately preceding one are mutually transposed in the shorter version. The mantras given here are used in the specific rite called mahāvyāhrtihoma. A sage called Nārāyaṇa is supposed to be the 'seer' of this section. It is accordingly designated as Nārāyaṇīya. Bhaṭṭabhāskara states that its purpose is Brahmopāsanā, worship of the Supreme, and thereby expiation of all common sins. The translation given above has been made partly exegetical to make this purpose clear. The supreme object of adoration here is Brahman. But oblations are offered to Him through His cosmic expressions—Earth, Air, Sky, Fire, Wind, Sun, Moon, Quarters, Gods and Manes. The worshipper finally unites the part with the whole and considers himself Brahman, the ground of all that exists, and thereby secures the highest mental purity.]

1. Hail! I offer this oblation to the adorable Supreme who is the All and to His parts, the Deities, Bhūh, Fire and Earth. Hail! I offer this oblation to the adorable Supreme who is All and to His parts, Bhuvah, Air and Atmosphere. Hail! I offer this oblation to the adorable Supreme who is All and to His parts, Suvah, the Sun and Heaven. Hail! I offer this oblation to the adorable Supreme who is All and to His parts, Bhūh, Bhuvah, Suvah, the Moon, the Asterisms and the Quarters. Salutation to Gods! Reverence to Manes! I am that Supreme Reality expressed by the syllable Om and the three Vyāhrtis, Bhūh, Bhuvah and Suvah. May I attain the Supreme!

This section gives the mantras to be repeated by one who offers oblations into the consecrated fire desirous of getting eminence. The word mahat in the text stands for He who is greatest and most worthy of worship, namely, the Supreme Divinity, who is the ground of all other gods, and to whom they are all related as parts to the whole and servants to the master. One of the central principles of religion is that the worshipper comes by the qualities of that object of worship upon which he meditates within himself. The Durgāsaptasatī rightly puts in the mouths of the hymning Gods त्यामाश्रता ह्याअयतां अयान्ति—those who seek support in Thee become the support of others. Those who worship the Most High themselves become eminent in the world.]

1. O Fire, preserve us from sin. Hail! Preserve us so that we may attain full knowledge. Hail! O Resplendent One, preserve our sacrificial acts. Hail! O S'atakratu, preserve everything (that belongs to us). Hail!

[Having recited the formulas meant for the removal of general sins in the previous three sections, this section particularly presents the mantras meant for offering oblations into the consecrated fire. These mantras remove the obstacles in the way of final illumination—the goal of the best religions seeker. The word enas in the first line of the text appears in the dative and it cannot be construed with pāhi; so it should be considered as an ablative for the purpose of syntax. The meaning of the term is sin or impurity; and here, Sayana points out that it stands for whatever comes in the way of divine illumination and liberation from the transmigratory existence. word visvavedas is interpreted as complete knowledge and its aids for which the seeker of liberation earnestly prays. By analysis the word $vi + bh\bar{a} + vasu$ gives the meaning he who possesses the wealth of outstanding splendour—the Supreme in whose light everything else shines. According to Bhattabhāskara, yajña in the line consists of knowledge of God; and according to Sayana, it means the sacrificial worship which paves the way to divine knowledge. So also the term satakratu according to the former means one who works in manifold and various ways and according to the latter, the consecrated fire necessary for hundreds of sacrifices. Both agree in interpreting sarvam in the last line to convey the idea of accessories for the generation of final illumination such as a preceptor, scriptures and worship.]

1. The Supreme Being, Indra, who is the most excellent pranava taught in the Vedas, who ensouls the entire universe, who leads the collection of Vedic utterances in gāyatrī and other metres standing in their beginning, who is capable of being attained by the worshippers and who is the first in the causal link, taught the contemplative sages the sacred wisdom of the Upaniṣad, Himself being the subject-matter of them, in order to strengthen them with the power of knowledge. I salute the gods for removing the obstacles in my path to illumination. For the same I also reverence the Manes. The triple regions of Bhūh, Bhuvah and Suvah and the entire Veda are comprised in Om.

[This passage embodies the mantra prescribed for japa to be performed by a person who seeks divine wisdom. That the syllable Om is the quintessence of the Vedas, that it is omniform and that it confers many spiritual values to the worshipper are declarations found in the beginning of the Taittirīua, the Katha, Prasna, Chāndogya, and other Upanisads in various contexts. The word sikya is a Vedic variation for sakya. The term chandah at the end is omitted in the shorter version. The term upanisad occurring in this mantra is interpreted both as subject and as object by turns. In the first case Indra. the supreme One, is taken as identical with upanisad —the subject-matter taught in the Upanisads. In the second case Indra is taken as the subject and upanisad, though found in the nominative case, is taken to be in sense accusative. In this case it stands for pranava which is the essence of the three vyāhrti-s.]

1. My salutations to the Supreme. May I concentrate my thoughts upon Him (in order that I may be united with Him). May I become one practising concentration of thought without distraction. I have heard enough with my ears (and perceived pleasurable objects through other senses). O my senses, do not fail me now (but settle yourselves in the Supreme Brahman with whom I wish to unite myself through the meditation of) Om.

[This is a mantra prescribed for the japa that is to be undertaken by one who wishes to practise unfailing remembrance of God after completing the study of the Vedas. I have rendered into English the thoughts contained in it according to Bhaṭṭabhās-kara's interpretation. He takes dhārana in the Pātañjala sense and karnayoḥ srutam indicative of the enjoyment of pleasures through all the senses. According to Sāyaṇa the prayer is addressed to God, the Creator of the universe, for the gift of the power of retaining and recalling the Vedic lore learned through memoriter by hearing from the teacher.

The meaning of the word dhārana, in that case, must be a powerful memory. Traditionally the formula is, therefore, uttered at the close of Vedic recitals.]

1. Right is austerity. Truth is austerity. Understanding of the scriptures is austerity. Subduing of ones senses is austerity. Restraint of the body through such means like fast is austerity. Cultivation of a peaceable disposition is austerity. Giving gifts without selfish motives is austerity. Worship is austerity. The Supreme Brahman has manifested Himself as $Bh\bar{u}h$, Bhuvah and Suvah. Meditate upon Him. This is austerity par excellence.

[Word-for-word meaning is omitted here; see note on III. 1. The shorter version on which Bhattabhāskara and Sayana have commented omits dama and sama. The term rta translated here as right is the principle of dharma deified by that name in the Rgveda. Rgveda IV. 23 contains stanzas in praise of Rtadeva identified with Indra, Aditya, Satya, and Yajña. The laws of physical and moral nature which proceed in their unerring course are the result of the operation of the principle of rta. Therefore the ethical implication of the word rta, in practical life, is stated to be 'the implementation of resolutions' by Bhattabhāskara and 'thinking exactly according to what is perceived' by Sayana. Satyam here is precisely rendered by the word truth, that is to say, correctly reporting what has been observed. All the eight items separately emphasised here as 'austerity' practically include all that is required for a complete moral and spiritual discipline. They are essential for a seeker of the ultimate religious goal of Selfrealisation. But they are all subservient to divine contemplation consisting of an unbroken current of a single thought set to flow towards God. That is the principal sadhana and the rest are auxiliary to it. The term tapas similar to manas, namas, and vacas in form is derived from the root tap literally meaning to give heat and light. Primarily, therefore. tapas implies an activity of mind or body which demands keen concentration of thought or an effort requiring unusual and continuous physical strain and heat. Tanas is praised often in the scriptures as the highest and best means for securing what is hard of attainment in this world and in the next. Godhood and Rsihood are attained through tapas. Even birth on this earth in situations which yield the highest and best pleasures is attributed to the previous performance of tapas. All physical, mental, moral and intellectual perfections are traced to this one source, namely tapas, mainly consisting of selfrestraint and whole-hearted devotion to a single purpose. We get graded definitions of tapas in old texts, such as observance of fast, sexual asceticism. restriction of enjoyment, foreswearing of pleasures, fortitude in the face of difficulties that arise in the discharge of one's duties in one's station and order of life, and one-pointedness of mind and senses in the pursuit of spiritual ends. This passage may be taken as a eulogy of the categories asserted here as tapas; or it may also be taken as a mantra the repetition of which ensures the attainment of qualities enumerated here.]

संपुष्पितस्य of a well flowered बृक्षस्य relating to a tree गन्ध: fragrance यथा in which manner दूरात् from a distance वाति is wafted by the wind एवम् similarly पुण्यस्य of meritorious कर्मण: of acts laid down in the scriptures गन्ध: fragrance, renown दूरात् to a great distance, to heaven वाति is conveyed. यथा वा even as कर्ते (गतें) in a pit अविहताम् laid cross-wise असिधाराम् the cutting edge of a sword युवे I tread with my feet युवे I tread with my feet (इति thus) यद् if अवकामे I walk ह verily कर्तम् (गर्तम्) the pit पतिष्यामि I will fall इति thus विह्वयिष्यामि I will be perturbed. एवम् in the same way अमृतात् from the motive of attaining immortality आत्मानम् oneself जुगुप्सेत् one should guard (from open and hidden acts of sin).

1. Just in the same manner as the fragrance of a tree in full blossom is wafted by the wind from a distant place, the fragrance of meritorious deeds—the good name that accrues from them—spreads to a great distance (as far as heaven). There is again this illustration. The cutting edge of a sword is laid across a pit. 'I am placing my feet on it, I am treading over it. So saying if I walk over it, I will be perturbed by the thought of hurt or fall into the pit.' In the same manner a man who is exposed to open and hidden sins must seek to guard himself from either in order that he may attain Immortality.

[This passage commends the merits accruing from the performance of ordained duties as indirect means of getting illumination, and censures forbidden acts as a direct bar to it. The vivid and poetic imagery contained in this passage is arresting. Good deeds are their own recommendations. They cannot be hidden, for they will declare themselves in spite of the humility accompanying their performance, just as strong fragrance reaches distant places because of its very nature. It is the puranic belief that a man remains in heaven as long as the good deeds done by him on the earth are not forgotten by the people around. This analogy is used by Buddha in the Dhammapada in a significant way in the Pupphavagga: 'The perfume of flowers cannot travel against the wind, be it the scent of sandal, tagara or jasmine, but the sweet odour of a good man travels even against the wind; the righteous pervade every place with their fragrance; those who lead the excellent life ascend to the God's, as the highest.' The second analogy stresses the need for entertaining the sense of sin; for, sin is to be shunned by all means. One who accepts virtue has to set his face against vice. Wrong deeds are to be abjured for two reasons. They bring public odium if they are committed openly and fearlessly. Attempts to conceal sinful acts will be as hazardous as Walking on the sharp edge of a sword. Even if one succeeds in thriving on hidden wickedness his fall is as certain as that of the acrobat who slips from the edge of the sword and falls into the pit. The good path of dharma alone is the royal road for the seeker of liberation. There are certain variations in the reading which do not seriously affect the meaning. The form vihvalişyāmi appears as vihvayişyāmi ; and vihvadişyāmi is merely a phonetic variation; yuve appearing as huve is also explained by substitution of h for y. The root yu means mingling or joining, and in this context the joining of the insole with the blade. The reading $kartam\ v\bar{a}\ patisy\bar{a}mi$ is preferable to the printed one as it emphasises the alternative effects—either cutting the feet or falling into the pit. There is also a reading $anrt\bar{a}d\ \bar{a}tm\bar{a}nam\ jugupset$ in which case the ablative is in seat—one should save oneself from unrighteousness and sin.]

द्वादशोऽनुवाकः SECTION TWELVE

अणोरणीयान् मह्तो महीयानात्मा गुहीयां निहितोऽस्य जन्तोः। तमकतुं पश्यति वीतशोको घातुः प्रसादीन्महिमानमीशम् ॥१॥

अणो: than the minute अणीयान् more minute महत: than the great महीयान् greater आत्मा the Infinite Self अस्य of this (born on the earth) जन्तो: of the beings गुहायाम् in the concealed place, heart, intellect निहित: set. (य: he who) अकृतुम् without desire (based on values) महिमानम् supremely great तम् him ईशम् the Supreme Lord धातु: of the creator प्रसादात् through grace पश्यति sees, realises (स: he) बीतशोक: freed from sorrow (भवति becomes).

1. The Infinite Self more minute than the minute and greater than the great is set in the heart of the beings here. Through the grace of the Creator one realises Him who is free from desires based on values, who is supremely great and who is the highest ruler and master of all, and becomes free from sorrows.

[This section purports to impart divine wisdom to a person who has attained the necessary purity required for it by the practice of righteousness extolled in the previous section. Bhaṭṭabhāskara says that this section and the following one describe the nature of Paramātman and His worship (Paramātmopavarņana and Mahāpuruṣārādhana). This stanza is found with slight variation in Katha Up. II. 20 and an exact duplicate of it is at Svetāsvatara Up. IV. 20. The Supreme is subtler than ether and the minutest atom, for then only He can be present in everything whatever that exists. Being thus all-pervasive He encompasses and transcends the sum total of the The statement that the Supreme resides in the heart of creatures does not imply a local habitation. Then it would be tantamount to saying that the whole is confined in the part. Therefore the limitation to the heart-lotus or the intellect means only the possibility of intuiting or communing with the Supreme in and through buddhi. The word akratum in the text qualifying the Supreme is interpreted as free from desires based on personal valuations. The Supreme is directly present as the innermost witness in everything. His knowledge is not, therefore, derived through the internal organ which according to its constitution evaluates sensations and conceptions as agreeable and disagreeable, worthy and unworthy, acceptable and rejectable. Being thus unconditioned, the Supreme is unlimited. While the Katha passage emphasises the necessity of personal effort for the realisation of the Supreme namely, for effecting $dh\bar{a}tuprasar{a}da$ or the purification of internal and external organs—the variant text here is meant to stress that divine grace is the since qua non of self-illumination and freedom from sorrow. A familiar verse often on the lips of advaitic teachers runs thus: ईश्वरानुम्रहादेव पुंसामद्भैतवासना। महाभयकृतलाणा दिलाणां यदि जायते ॥—Avadhūtagītā quoted in Citsukhī].

सप्त प्राणा प्रभवन्ति तस्मीत् सप्तार्चिषः समिषः सप्त जिह्वाः । सप्त इमे लोका येषु चरेन्ति प्राणा गुहार्रायात्रिहिताः सप्त सप्त ॥

सप्तसंख्याकाः प्राणाः तेषां सप्तदीप्तयः स्वस्वविषयप्रकाशनशक्तयः तैः यह्यमाणत्वेन सप्त संख्याकाः विषयह्पाः समिधः सप्तजिह्नाः इमे भूरादयः सप्त लोका:—येषु लोकेषु देवमनुष्यादिशरीरवर्तिनः प्राणाः चरन्ति— सर्वेऽप्येते तस्मात् परमात्मनः प्रभवन्ति । सप्त ऋषयः सप्त छन्दांसि सप्त स्वराः इत्यादि सप्तसंख्याविच्छन्नाः अन्येऽपि गुहाशयात् परमेश्वरात् उत्पन्नाः, तत्र तत्र स्थापिताः च ॥

सत प्राणा: the seven pranas सत अचिष: the seven flames सिमध: fuels सत जिह्ना: the seven tongues इमे these सत seven लोका: worlds येषु wherein प्राणा: life-breaths चरन्ति move (एते these सर्वे all) तस्मात् from Him प्रभवन्ति originate सत सत seven and seven गुहाशयात् from the dweller in the secret place (of the heart) (उत्पन्ना: are originated) निहिता: set (च and).

2. From Him originate the seven prāṇas, the seven flames, their fuel, the seven tongues and the seven worlds in which the life-breaths move. (Further other things that are) sevenfold also come forth from Him, who dwells in the secret place of the heart and are set (in their respective places).

[This mantra sets forth the creative power of the Divine Being who was presented as the object of worship in the immediately preceding one. It occurs also in Mundaka II. 1. 8 where jihvā is substituted by homa. Bhaṭṭabhāskara interprets the verse as giving an account of God's creation of the senses, the seven planets, the seven sacrificial fires, their seven flames, and the seven worlds together with other sevenfold entities. According to S'rī S'ankara and Sāyana, the seven prānas are two eyes, two ears, two nostrils and mouth; the seven flames are the enlightenments produced by their activity; the external objects which stimulate their actions are their fuel; the seven tongues are Kālī etc. described at Mundaka 1. 2. 4 and the seven worlds are Bhūh to Satya. The word guhāsayāt here is taken as the source of all sevenfold items, namely the Supreme dwelling in the heart. In the Mundaka this word occurs in the nominative plural and not in the ablative singular; and so there it qualifies the prana-s which mingle in the heart during sleep. There again the seven and seven refer to the items described in the previous line as placed in each living creature by God. The purpose there is to show that all activities, their means and results with which a sacrificer is connected proceed from God. Here God is described as the creative cause of the universe for the purpose of meditation. The Taittirīyasamhitā IV. 6. 5 has the following mantra on the pattern of which the present one is constructed for a philosophic purpose :-

> सत ते अग्ने समिधः सत जिह्नाः सत्तर्धयः सत धाम प्रियाणि । सत होत्रा सत्तधा त्वा यजन्ति सत योनीरापृणस्वाघृतेन ॥]

अतः समुद्रा गिरयश्च मर्बेऽस्मात्स्यन्दंनते सिन्धंवः सर्वेरूपाः। अतंश्च विश्वा ओषंघयो रसीश्च येनैष भूनस्तिष्ठत्यन्तरातमा॥ ३॥ अतः परमात्मनः सर्वे समुद्राः सर्वे गिरयश्च प्रभवन्ति । गंगाद्याः बहुरूपाः सिन्धवः अर्थात् नद्यः अस्मादेव स्यन्दन्ते सवन्ति । अतः अस्मात् पुरुषात् एव व्रीहियवाद्याः विश्वाः सर्वाः ओषधयः मधुराम्लादिरसाश्च प्रभवन्ति । येन रसेन अर्थात् ओषधीनां सारांशेन भृतः संबद्धः एषः अहंप्रत्ययेन गम्यमानः अन्तरात्मा सूक्ष्मशरीरी जीवः स्थूलदेहे तिष्ठति ॥

अत: from Him सर्वे all समुद्रा: seas गिरय: mountains च and (प्रभवन्ति arise). अस्मात् from Him सर्वरूपा: of every kind सिन्धव: rivers स्यन्दन्ते flow. अत: from Him च and विश्वा: all ओषधय: herbs रसा: essences च too (प्रभवन्ति arise). येन by which भूत: formed, connected एष: this अन्तरात्मा individual soul तिष्ठति dwells.

3. From Him arise all the seas and mountains. From Him flow rivers of all kinds and from Him all herbs and essences come forth; united with the essence of the herbs the individual Soul seated in the subtle body dwells in creatures.

[This stanza is found also at Mundaka II. 1. 9 with slight alteration— $sarv\bar{a}$ for $visv\bar{a}$, rasah for $ras\bar{a}h$ and $bh\bar{u}taih$ for $bh\bar{u}tah$. The singular rasa agrees with the singular yena which follows. The Mundaka reading $bh\bar{u}taih$ gives better sense as the word stands for the five elements, whereas here the singular has been interpreted as sambaddha, or connected, which sense is not usual. Bhaṭṭabhāskara takes the word sindhu as denoting water of all kinds as found in wells, tanks and rivers. He interprets also the fourth line yena bhūtaḥ antarātmā as by whom the jīvātman is produced as the enjoyer in the body. Compare with this ममैवांशो जीवलोके जीवमृत: सनातनः in the Gitā. The purpose of this whole stanza cited here again is to point out the necessity of knowing and worshipping the Supreme who is the only source of the universe.]

ब्रह्मा देवानीं पद्वीः केबीनामृषि्विशीणां महिषो मृगाणीम् । इयेनो गृधीणाः स्विधितिर्वनीनाः सीमः प्वित्रमत्येति रेमन् ॥४॥

स एव परमेश्वरः इन्द्रादिदेवानां मध्ये उत्कृष्टः सन् ब्रह्मरूपेण नियामकः मूत्वा वर्तते। तथा कवीनां मध्ये पदवीः शब्दसामध्यांभिज्ञः अथवा पदवाक्य-प्रमाणज्ञः, मेधाविनां मध्ये ऋषिः अतीन्द्रियवस्तुद्रष्टा, मृगाणां मध्ये शक्त्याधिक्यात् महिषः, ग्रधाणां पिक्षणां मध्ये शंसनीयः पिक्षराजः, वनानां अर्थात् हिंसकानां मध्ये स्विधितः अर्थात् छेदनपरग्रः, विविधयागानां मध्ये सोमश्च मूत्वा रेभन् अर्थात् मन्तराब्दैः स्त्यमानः सन् स परमेश्वरः पवित्ववस्तुसमूहं सर्वे अतीत्य वर्तते।।

देवानाम् among gods ब्रह्मा the four-faced Brahmā कवीनाम् among composers पदवी: master of right words विप्राणाम् among intelligent people ऋषि: the seer मृगाणाम् among animals महिष: buffalo गृशाणाम् among birds इयेनः the kite वनानाम् among tools of destruction स्वधिति: the cutting axe सोम: the soma रेमन् sounding पवित्रम् what is pure अत्येति transcends.

4. The Supreme having become the four-faced Brahmā among gods, the master of right words among the composers, the seer among the intelligent people, the buffalo among animals, the kite among the birds, the cutting axe among the destructive tools and soma among the sacrificers, transcends all purifying agencies accompanied by the sound (of holy chant).

[This mantra is quoted from the Taittirīyasamhitā III. 4. 11 where Sayana interprets it in a different way. We find in this stanza, as interpreted now, the adumbration of the vibhūtiyoga of the Gītā, where individual instances of certain classes are mentioned as special abodes or symbols of the Supreme Being. By practising special reverence for them a person learns values according to their excellence. here interprets vanam as forest, soma as that ingredient of yaga and pavitram as purifying agency. But in the samhita context, according to him, vana is employed to denote a destructive tool, pavitra the ūrņāstuka (i.e. straining wool) and soma the pressed soma juice. In that context the mantra is a praise of soma. But here it is interpreted to convey this sense: namely, that the Supreme Being who created the insentient world as described above became the leading principle in every group of objects.]

अनामेकां लोहितशुक्तकृष्णां बह्वीं प्रनां जनर्यन्ती १ सरूपाम् । अजो ह्येको जुषमाणोऽनुरोते नहाँ न्येनां मुक्तभोगामनीं ऽन्यः॥९॥ लोहितग्रुक्रकृष्णां रजस्सत्वतमोगुणात्मिकां जगत्मृष्टेः मूलकारणभूतां अत एव अजां जन्मरहितां सुखदुःखमोहान्विताः बहुविधाः गुणत्रयात्मकत्वेन सरूपाः प्रजाः जनयन्तीं एकां मायां एकः अजः जीवः प्रीतिपूर्वकं सेवमानः अनुरोते तदनुसारेण वर्तते। अन्यः अजः विरक्तजीवः भुक्तभोगां एनां परित्यजिति॥

5. There is one unborn Female (Māyā, the uncaused substance of the universe) red, white and black (representing Sattva, Rajas and Tamas) producing manifold offspring of the same nature. There is one unborn (in the generic sense some jīvas who are attached) who lies by her taking delight in her; there is another unborn (in the generic sense those who are not attached) who leaves her after having enjoyed her.

[This stanza aims to teach the doctrine of bondage and liberation based on the principle of Māyā accepted by Vedanta for the explanation of the creation of the universe according to the advaitic system of it. Avidyā, Māyā and Prakṛti are taken to be synonyms. Prakrti is the uncaused cause of the remaining categories posited to explain the stages of universal Therefore it is one and unborn. evolution. term Prakrti being grammatically feminine in gender ajā represents the unborn Female giving birth to the rest of creation. Red, white and black represent either Tejas, Ap and Annam taught in Chandogya VI. 4. 1 or the three gunas Sattva, Rajas and Tamas. The manifold offspring produced by Prakrti is described as having the same nature because the gunas of Prakrti extend to every part of its effects. the second half of the stanza two types of individāsakta and virakta (passionate and ual souls. dispassionate), are described—the former enjoy pleasures under the bondage of Māyā and the latter are averse to the pleasures and so are liberated from the thraldom to Māyā. The word bhuktabhoga implies that the latter have done with enjoyments supplied by Māyā and so they are no more enslaved by her. The word prajam in the first half and aja in the second half of this stanza are to be taken as generic plurals. prajā actually appears in the plural form in S'vetās vatara IV. 5 where also this verse occurs.

6. That which is the sun who abides in the clear sky, is the Vasu (the air that moves) in the mid-region, is the fire that dwells in the sacrificial altar and in the domestic hearth as the guest, is the fire that shines in men and in the gods, as the Soul, is the fire that is consecrated in the sacrifice, is dwelling in the sky as air, is born in water as submarine heat, is born in the rays of the sun, is the fire that is directly seen as the luminary, and is born on the mountain as the rising sun—that is the Supreme Truth, the Reality underlying all.

[This stanza in jagatī metre is the well-known Hamsamantra describing the Supreme Reality as it appears to the sage who has been illuminated. Its original place is in the Rgveda IV. 40. 5. It is found in the Vājasaneyīsamhitā X. 24; XII. 14; the Taittirīyasamhitā III. 2. 10. 1, IV. 2. 1, etc. and the Kathopanisad V. 2. In the context of the samhitā, Sāyaṇa interprets the mantra as describing the transcendent greatness of the sun, fire, etc. according to the contexts. S'rī S'ankarācārya points out in his commentary on this verse in the Kathovanisad that it can be congruously explained as referring to the Supreme Brahman in as much as the sun also is accepted as the form of the Supreme. In fact, we find in the samhitas themselves the identity of the Divine Person in the orb of the sun, the Self dwelling in man and the Supreme Reality that is the background of the manifold universe. The same Reality is designated and described as Indra, Mitra, Varuna, Agni, Prajapati and the rest. Here also the omnific nature of that one Reality is evident. The essence of the Hamsamantra is contained in the formula yo'ham so'sau which establishes the identity of the Self in man and the Deity in the sun. Although in the common usage the word hamsa denotes a swan, in religious literature it stands for the Self, finite as well as Infinite, because of their uniqueness and unity. According to the interpretation accepted here, the Sun is called hamsa because he moves everywhere; his abode is heaven; he is the animating power of air in the mid-region. As the necessary ingredient of a sacrifice in the shape of fire, he dwells in the sacrificial altar and also in the civil fire to be tended like an honoured guest; as Vais'vānara he dwells in men and gods. While gods like Indra are invisible the sun is directly visible to all. He rises in the eastern mountain. His presence is known by the rays and by the submarine heat of water. All these attributes of the sun represent symbolically Brahman and in this context it is asserted that Brahman is the one source and substratum of all that has been described by the mantra. Therefore in the light of sankarabhāsva and Sāyana's commentary the term Vasu denotes the Sūtrātman holding the universe; atithi the soma juice stored in the pot (durona) or the brahmana guest entertained at home; abjā the shark conch. mother of pearl and the like produced in water; goiā the corn produced on the earth or milk milked from the cow, and adrijā the trees and rivers originating from the mountain. According to Sankarācārya the ending phrase informs us that each item described above is but an appearance of that unsublatable Reality which is the final cause—Rtam Brhat. The man who rejects the illusory world described in the immediately preceding stanza realizes the truth described in this one.]

यस्मी जाता न प्रा नेव किंचनास य आविवेश भुवनानि विश्वी।

6 (A). The beings born from Prajāpati are not separate from Him. Before their birth nothing whatsoever existed other than Him, who entered all the creatures of the world as their in-most Self. Prajāpati has identified Himself with the creatures. He imparts the three luminaries, fire, sun and moon, lustre by identifying Himself with them. He is endowed with sixteen parts.

[In the previous stanza it was asserted that the manifold universe is the Supreme Reality designated as Rtam Brhat. The common man who witnesses created beings only cannot accept this as a matter of experience. This passage, therefore, reasserts the Vedic idea that the manifold sensible universe is in reality non-different from the Supreme, though it appears not so to the uninitiated observer. passage occurs in the Taittirīyabrāhmaņa III. 7. 9 with the first eight words reading as यस्मान्नजात: परो अन्यो अस्ति which is grammatically perfect. Bhaṭṭabhāskara explains that Prajāpati is the Divine Providence who creates all beings, who supplies them with the ten senses, and the five elements constituting their bodies and minds, and the three luminous worlds in which they dwell, and who supports them as the indwelling Spirit. According to Sayana, the sixteen parts or kalas are prana, s'raddhā, five elements, indriya, mind, food, vīrya (virility), tapas, mantra, sacrifice, the worlds, and the names, given in the Prasnopaniṣad VI. 4. He interprets the Taittirīyabrāhmaṇa passage just referred to taking ṣodasī as the name of the soma cup. This passage and the coming one in gāyatrī metre are entered up here from the shorter version as they are missing in the longer one which I have followed as the basis for the text here.]

6 (B). We invoke the creator of the universe who sustains the creation in many ways and who witnesses the thoughts and deeds of men. May He grant us plenty of excellent wealth.

[This gāyatrī stanza is also reproduced from the samhitā. The translation is based on Bhaṭṭabhās-kara. Sāyaṇa informs us that this is a prayer made by the aspirant who wishes Supreme illumination. So according to him vasu means the riches of divine knowledge and vidhartr is the grantor of it. Savitā impels our intellect towards that knowledge. To harmonise with this interpretation he takes cakṣas, the terminal word, in the root-sense i.e. revealer or expounder. The five gāyatrī stanzas which follow this one in the shorter version will appear in one of the succeeding sections of the longer version. So they are not incorporated here.]

7. The sacrificers poured clarified butter into the consecrated Fire. Clarified butter is the place of origin of this one and in clarified butter is his support. Indeed clarified butter is his luminant and residence. O Fire, with every offering of oblation bring here the gods and delight them. O thou excellent one, convey to gods the offerings we have made with $sv\bar{a}h\bar{a}$.

[This hymn to Fire is cited from the Rgveda II. 3. 11 here to propitiate the sacrificial Fire, so that through sacrificial acts one may attain to conditions suitable for spiritual illumination. Bhatṭabhāskara takes this to be a verse lauding the Supreme as the Fire and reads mimikṣe for mimikṣire which reading would give the meaning, he creates water. In the samhitā-s Agni is described as devānām devaḥ and amṛṭānām prathamaḥ and so all the other gods are propitiated through Him. He is the carrier and mouth of the offerings made to all gods.]

8. From the Supreme Fount, vast as the ocean, arose the universe in the shape of waves yielding enjoyment to created beings. The name designating the self-luminous Reality and consisting of the syllable Om is hidden in the Vedas. By contemplating on the Supreme along with the slow repetition of that name one attains to Immortality. This designation of the Supreme is on the lips of contemplative sages and it is the central support of undying bliss.

[This also is a stanza quoted from Rgveda IV. 58. 1 in order to support the view that the syllable One is the means of attaining release from the cycle of birth and death. To fit into the context the translation has been made explanatory in the light of Sāyaṇa's words, though it may appear somewhat far-fetched. Bhaṭṭabhāskara explains it closer to the possible original meaning which it may have in the samhitā context.

व्यं नाम् प्रब्रवामा घृतेनास्मिन् युज्ञे धीरयामा नमीभिः । उपं ब्रह्मा र्गृणवच्छ्यमीनं चर्तुःश्वङ्गोऽवमीद्गीर पुतत् ॥ ९॥

श्रानार्थिनः वयं अस्मिन् श्रानयश्रे घृतेन दीप्तेन स्वप्नकाशचैतन्यरूपेण निमित्तभूतेन प्रणवरूपं ब्रह्मणः अभिधानं सर्वदा ध्यायन्तः प्रब्रवाम । ततश्च नमस्कारैः युक्ताः वयं तत् ब्रह्मतत्त्वं चित्ते धारयाम । अस्माभिः शस्यमानं स्त्यमानं पार्श्ववर्तिभिः उपाश्चण्वत् एतत् ब्रह्मतत्त्वं चतुःश्चङ्कः अकारोकारमकारनादरूपश्चङ्कचतुष्टययुक्तः गौरः निष्कामैः उच्चार्यमाणत्वात् निर्मेलः ऋषभः प्रणवरूपः अवमीत् प्रतिपादयामास ॥

वयम् we अस्मिन् in this यज्ञे in the sacrifice (of contemplation) घृतेन (having) the self-luminous (as the cause) नाम the designation Om प्रव्रवामा (प्रव्रवाम) may we always repeat. नमोभि: along with salutations धारयामा (धारयाम) may we hold in mind. चतु:श्रङ्ग: four-horned गीर: white (ऋषम: bull) शस्यमानम् being lauded उपाश्रणवत् within the hearing of (other lovers of truth) एतत् this ब्रह्म Brahman अवमीत् revealed, expressed.

9. May we always repeat in our contemplative sacrifices the designation Om which has for its cause the Self-luminous Reality and may we also hold Him in our hearts with salutations. The four-horned white Bull has expressed this Supreme Brahman praised by us in the hearing of co-seekers.

[Here is another citation from the Rgveda IV. 58. 2 designated to express the glory of Pranava according to Sayana on whom the above explanatory rendering is also based. The root ghr has the meaning of trickling and shining. Based on the latter sense Sāyana interprets ghrta as the Self-luminous Reality and the nama as Pranava expressing It according to the Upanisads. The context here has been declared as that of higher knowledge (vidyāprakaraņa) and yajña is taken as Jñānayajña or Ātmayāga. The four-horned white Bull represents the syllable Om described as chandasām rsabhah visvarūpah in the beginning of Taittiriyopanisad. The four horns are the four sound elements in the Pranava. Whiteness is argued to be the result of its being repeated by holy men free from all worldly desires. Bhattabhāskara explains the mantra in the sacrificial sense as a praise of water and thereby an indirect glorification of Paramatman who has created water. The term ghrta, that which has trickled, denotes water. Brahma then is the lord of speech and the fourhorned one is the sacrifice which like a white animal is purifying.]

चृत्वारि शृङ्का त्रयों अस्य पादा हे शीर्षे सप्त हस्तीमो अस्य । त्रिषां बुद्धो वृष्मो रॉरवीति महो देवो मर्त्या आविवेश ॥१०॥

अस्य belonging to him चलारि four शृंगा (शृंगाणि) horns, त्रय: three पादा: feet, द्वे two शीर्षे heads. अस्य belonging to him सप्त seven हस्तास: (हस्ताः) hands. त्रिधा in a threefold manner बद्ध: connected तृषभ: the Bull मह: Self-luminous Supreme Reality रोस्वीति cries out, eloquently declares—देव: the Supreme मर्त्यान् mortals आविवेश entered.

10. The syllable Om conceived as the Bull possesses four horns, three feet and two heads. He has seven hands. This Bull connected in a threefold manner, eloquently declares the Supreme. The Self-luminous Deity has entered the mortals everywhere.

[This is the well-known allegoric stanza of the Rgveda IV. 58. 3 variously interpreted in different contexts. Patanjali in his Great Commentary on Panini explains it as representing the various flexions of speech; Bhattabhāskara takes it as a eulogistic representation of the sacrifice with auxiliaries; and Sāyana here interprets it as the syllable Om already metaphorized as a bull. The word vrsabha conventionally means a bull and etymologically that which rains (plenty). The meditation on Pranava is stated to confer on the aspirant spiritual riches. The vṛṣabha, or Praṇava, has four horns as indicated in the previous note. Om is also the Reality expressed by it; and that Reality is reached through the three feet or steps, namely, the waking, sleeping and dreaming of the individual soul, and also the universe, the soul embodied in the universe and its unevolved cause. The higher and lower aspects of Prakṛti, taught in the Gītā chapter VII, are considered as His two heads. The seven worlds are fancied to be His hands. Being the ground of all that exists this vrsabha is connected with the threefold aspects of subjective and objective universe mentioned just now. The vrsabha or bull bellows loudly. Here the Pranava declares the Supreme Reality eloquently. This declaration here implies the presence of Paramātman in all creatures and His sustaining of them. According to Bhattabhāskara the four horns are the four adjutants of the sacrifice, Adhvaryu, Hotr, Brahman, and Udgātr, the three feet are Garhapatya, Ahavanīya, and Anvāhāryapacana; the heads are the institutor of the sacrifice and his wife or the Prayanīya and Udayanīya; the seven metres headed by gāyatrī are the seven hands. The body of the sacrifice is bound in a threefold manner by three savana-s or ceremonies connected with the extraction of soma. The Yajña grants desired objects. So it is vṛṣabha. The noise produced by the bull compares to the chant of the three Vedas at the sacrifice. The Lord Himself entered human beings through the sacrifices in which He is worshipped.]

देवास: (देवा:) god-like sages त्रिधा in a threefold way हितम् laid (in the three stages of experience and the three aspects of evolution) पणिभि: by teachers who recite the glory of the Supreme गुझमानम् concealed (as the Supreme secret) घृतम् the Self-luminous Reality गिंव in speech अन्वविन्दन् attained in order. इन्द्र:

the lord (residing in the waking soul and the perceived universe) एकम् one (waking experience) जजान created. स्य: the sun (Hiranyagarbha) एकम् one (experience of dream) (जजान created). वेनात् from the attractive one (i.e. unevolved cause in which there is no sorrow and hence attractive) एकम् one (State of sleep) (निष्मन्नम् was produced). स्वथ्या by the self-supporting (Self) निष्टतक्षु: were shaped (the three categories mentioned).

11. God-like sages attained in the order (of their spiritual practices) the Self-luminous Reality laid in the three states of consciousness and secretly held by the teachers who praise it by chants in the Vedic speech (the great formulas such as 'Thou art That'). Indra or Virāţ, the regent of the visible universe and the waking consciousness created one, the visible world. Sūrya representing Taijasa and Hiraṇyagarbha created one, namely, the world of dream, and from Vena came the remaining one, the dreamless sleep. By the self-supporting Paramātman all these threefold categories were fashioned.

[This is yet another samhitā mantra (Rgveda. IV. 58.4) reproduced here and interpreted as a description of Om and the Reality denoted by it. As I have done above in order to comport with the context, following Sāyaṇa, I have given here also only an explanatory rendering. The word pani is etymologized by Sāyaṇa as panegyrizer based on the meaning of 'praise' attached to the root pan. Thus pani is taken to be an ācārya who recites the glory of the Supreme for the benefit of his disciples. Vena is taken to be the Avyākṛta as there is no sorrow in it. All these allegorizations may be a distortion of an earlier text to yield a later meaning. Since, however, the context in which a stanza is found is fundamentally important for the religious interpretation, the commentary has been taken as the only guide in fixing the meaning here and wherever the same situation had to be confronted. Bhaṭṭabhās-kara interprets the stanza as a creationistic passage.

यो देवानीं प्रथमं पुरस्ताद्-विश्वाधिको रुद्रो मुहर्षिः । हिर्ण्यगर्भे परयत् जायमान् स स नो देवः शुभयास्मृतया संग्रनक् ॥ १२ ॥

य: he who विश्वधिक: superior to all रुद्र: Rudra, revealed in the Vedas महर्षि: the Supreme Seer (य: he who) देवानाम् among gods प्रथमम् first हिरण्यगर्भम् Hiranyagarbha पुरस्तात् before (other gods) जायमानम् who is being born परयत (परयति) sees स: such देव: the Lord न: us ग्रुमया beneficial रमृत्या with remembrance संयुनवतु may join.

12. May He, the Lord, join us with beneficial remembrance—He who is superior to all, who has been revealed in the Vedas, who is the Supreme Seer and who sees Hiranyagarbha who is the first among the gods and who is born before all the rest.

[From the indication in the stanza it is accepted that this is one of those mantras prescribed as a prayer for the attainment of illumination through the grace of Parames'vara. Hiranyagarbha represents the sum total of jīvas residing in all the bodies; hence He is also called Sūtrātman or the Self that pervades creation as a thread. The Supreme Divine functions as Hiranyagarbha for setting in motion the entire creation; and hence the latter is the first-born and the Lord of all other gods. The present participle jāyamānam implies that the Supreme is ever face to face with the individual jīva represented by Hiranyagarbha viewed as a totality. The word Rudra is explained variously—revealed in the Vedas, giver of knowledge, causer of cry of sorrow at dissolution—by etymologizing as ru plus dra or rud plus ra. The epithet rsi is given to one who directly sees the Truth or who sees more than what others see, and so maharsi here is the all-seeing God. The whole stanza occurs also in Svetāsvataropanişad III. 4 and IV. 12 with some verbal variation. also visvadhiyo occurs in the longer version in the place of visvādhiko found in the shorter one. retained in the text the latter reading for metrical euphony and clarity of meaning. Bhattabhaskara explains that the remembrance meant here is the knowledge of God attained through His grace. According to Sayana the beneficial remembrance consists in the unbroken thought of the Supreme Reality.]

यस्मात्परं नापर्मित् किश्चित् यस्मान्नाणीयो न ज्यायीऽस्तिं कश्चित् । वृक्ष ईत्र स्तब्धो दिति तिष्ठत्येक्-स्तेनेदं पूर्ण प्रक्षेण सर्वम् ॥ १३ ॥

(य: he who) एक: alone वृक्षः इच like a tree स्तब्ध: established दिवि in heaven, in his own glory तिष्ठति stands. तेन by that पुरुषेण by the Person इदम् this सर्वम् all पूर्णम् filled.

13. Other than whom there is nothing higher, nothing minuter, nothing greater, by that Purusa—the One who stands still like a tree established in heaven—all this is filled.

[The object of unbroken remembrance stated in the previous stanza is now further described here. The Paramatman is all that exists even as the visible universe. The simile of the tree here is perhaps akin to that of the eternal banian with roots in heaven described at Katha VI. 1. At Taittirīyabrāhmaņa II. 8. 9 we get the following two stanzas which throw light on the vrksa mentioned here. किं सिद् वनं क उ स वृक्ष आसीत् यतो द्यावापृथिवी निष्टतक्षुः। मनीषिणो मनसा पृच्छतेदुः तत् यदध्यतिष्ठत् भुवनानि धारयन् ॥ ब्रह्म वनं ब्रह्म स वृक्ष आसीत् यतो द्यावापृथिवी निष्टतक्षुः। मनीषिणो मनसा वित्रवीमि वः ब्रह्माध्यतिष्ठत् मुननानि धारयन्। |- Was it a forest? what was the tree from which the world was fashioned? O wise men, think out an answer for this and verify it by ascertaining from your preceptor. Further, ask what is the cause which sustains all the world within itself? This is the reply of the teacher: Brahman is the forest, Brahman is the tree out of which heaven and earth were fashioned, for all efficiency needed is in Brahman. O wise ones, I, the teacher, have arrived at this conclusion and tell you so. That Brahman stands above all other causes, holding the whole universe in Itself.—Bhaṭṭabhāskara gives the etymology of vrkṣa as चृत्वा ६मां सीदित इति चृक्ष:, implying the immanent aspect of God; and interprets divitisthati in the words: द्योतनद्योले परमात्मिन अपृथग्मानेन तिष्ठति। Thus he implies that the same Supreme Divinity is non-different in the transcendent and immanent aspects. Sāyaṇa interprets divi as the self-supporting glory of Paramātman. This mantra is found in the same form at S'vetāsvatara III. 9.]

न कमीणा न प्रतया धर्नेन त्यांगैनैके अमृत्त्वमांनुशुः । परेण नाक निहितं गुहायां विभाजेते यद्यतयो विशनित ॥१४॥

कर्मणा by work न not, प्रजया by progeny न not, धनेन by wealth (given as gift) (न not); एके some त्यागेन by giving up (all these) अमृतत्वम् immortality आनशः attained. यत् That which यतयः hermits विशन्ति attain (तत् that) नाकम् heaven परेण above निहितम् placed, गुहायाम् in the ether of the heart विभाजते shines.

14. Not by work, not by progeny, not by wealth, they have attained Immortality. Some have attained Immortality by renunciation. That which the hermits attain is laid beyond the heaven; yet it shines brilliantly in the (purified) heart.

[This is one of the widely quoted stanzas of this Upanisad interpreted by Bhaṭṭabhāskara and Sāyaṇa in two distinct ways. According to both these commentators, it lays down the means for the attainment of the Supreme Being whose attributes, power and grace were described in the previous stanzas. Both of them agree that immortality resulting from the knowledge of the Supreme is attained only by some who have undergone the necessary discipline. The passage, however, does not imply that work, progeny and gift of wealth are condemned as futility. think so would be discarding the evidence of the Vedas. The purpose of the passage here is to stress the supreme importance of renunciation for the attainment of divine knowledge, which is the goal of the twofold religious path named pravrtti and nivrtti. Bhaṭṭabhāskara considers that tyāga here means phalatyāga or the surrender of the fruits of religious acts and of deeds of charity. The regular duties meant to secure absolution from the threefold debt to ancestors, gods and Rsis cannot be neglected. The Supreme Being is realised in the highest heaven as well as in one's own heart. He is attained by those who study the Vedas, understand their import, perform duties laid down by them, habitually control the senses and continuously practise divine contemplation. They surrender the fruits of their actions to the Most High; consequently they are not bound by the actions they do. Sayana thinks that this passage teaches total renunciation associated with sannyasa which is necessary for the attainment of Immortality. Small devotions like Agnihotra, extended sacrificial sessions designated Sattra and ordinary work of common service, however helpful these might be in generating the desire to know the Supreme, they cannot by themselves give Immortality. The knowledge of Paramātman and freedom come to one only by renouncing other interests and concentrating oneself on that ideal. There is a reading bibhrājadetad in the place of bibhrājate yad adopted here in the printed text. The pronoun in the first case emphasizes the realisation of the Infinite Self in one's own Self and that in the second stresses the identity of the Self in oneself with the Divine in the highest heaven. The reading tyāgenaikenāmṛtatvam has no documentary basis; eke implies only the rareness of the mature type of aspirants who have the necessary preparation for Immortality. This stanza and the succeeding one are found also at Kaivalyopanisad 1. 2. 4.]

वेदान्तविज्ञान्विनिश्चितार्थाः संन्यांसयोगाद्यतयः शुद्धमत्त्वाः । ते ब्रह्मेखोके तु परीन्तकाळे परीमृता(त्)ः परिमुच्यन्ति सर्वे॥१९॥

वेदान्तविज्ञानविनिश्चितार्थाः those who have rigorously arrived at the conclusion taught by Vedānta through direct knowledge सन्त्यासयोगात् through renunciation (taught by the word tyāga in the preceding stanza) and by the practice of the discipline of yoga गुद्धसन्ताः whose minds have been purified ते सर्वे they all यतयः aspirants striving for self-control परामृताः having attained the immortality consisting of identity with the Supreme परान्तकाले तु at the time of final departure ब्रह्मलोके in the region of Brahman परिमुच्यन्ति dissolve themselves, get themselves liberated.

sisting of identity with the Supreme, all those aspirants who strive for self-control, who have rigorously arrived at the conclusion taught by the Vedānta through direct knowledge, and who have attained purity of mind through the practice of the discipline of yoga and stead-fastness in the knowledge of Brahman preceded by renunciation, get themselves released into the region of Brahman at the dissolution of their final body.

[This stanza is commented on by S'rī S'aṅkarācārya at Mundaka III. 2. 6 adopting the reading Brahmalokeşu for Brahmaloke tu and Parāmṛtāh parimucyanti for Parāmṛtāt parimucyanti. The explanation and rendering given above follow his authority. According to S'rī S'ankarācārya, the goal of Vedānta is Paramātmavijāāna or Self-realisation. The central theme of this verse is that this knowledge is attained through inner purity gained by taking to sannyāsa and yoga. Sannyāsa implies renouncing worldy and religious work and preferring to remain forever steadfastly in the consciousness of Brahman. Those who perpetually strive to keep is also yoga. The last this spiritual state are called yati-s. moment of life is called antakāla, end-time. fated to rebirth confront antakāla repeatedly; but the soul that is illumined by the wisdom of Vedanta takes his last birth, and consequently he meets with his parantakala, final end-time. The same author explains brahmalokeşu in the plural distributively from the view-point of many liberated souls who all merge into one Brahman. The word parāmṛtāh denotes the attainment of Immortality while one is living on the earth, and the verb parimucyanti implies the merging of the individual Self then and there, at the time of death, into the Supreme Self without leaving a trace of separate individuality— just as the birds flying across the sky do not leave any footprint there or the fish moving in water leave no trail of a path. With the attainment of illumination the aspirant becomes parāmṛta and at the fall of the body he becomes parimukta, no more to be born again. Sāyaṇa following sāṅkarabhāṣya in spirit finds no difficulty in explaining the plural Brahmalokesu by accepting the reading Brahmaloke tw printed in our text. He says that though jñāna is the sole cause of liberation sannyāsa is necessary along with it. Yoga is taken by him in the Patañjala sense, and he stresses its necessity for the purity of mind which mainly consists in turning oneself away from objects that stimulate one's desires. Jñāna dispels ignorance by revealing the Truth, but tyaga and yoga are necessary to engender the undistracted and pure state of mind in which alone knowledge could shine unintermittently. Brahmaloka here does not imply any locality, but Brahman Itself. The reading parāmṛtāt is justified by him in the following way: Parāmṛṭa stands for Avyākṛṭa from which ignorant people are not liberated even at the time of their final dissolution, while those who have Brahman-knowledge are liberated from it at the fall of their body. According to Bhaṭṭabhāskara, sannyāsa implies dedication of the fruits of actions to God and yoga the practice of samādhi. He points out also that sarve includes all ās'rama-s and castes.]

दुहं विपापं व्रवेशमभूतं यत् प्रण्डरीकं पुरमंध्यस् स्थम् । तत्रापि दहे गुगनं विशोकं तसिमन् यदन्तस्तदुपीसित्व्यम् ॥१६॥

16. In the citadel of the body there is the small sinless and pure lotus of the heart which is the residence of the Supreme. Further in the interior of this small area.

there is the sorrowless Ether. That is to be meditated upon continually.

[This stanza gives the object and place for the unbroken meditation of the Supreme Divine. The Hindus worship God objectively in Nature or in the symbols artistically conceived for the purpose of adoration, as shown by the authority of the scriptures. Greater importance, however, is often attached to the subjective worship of the Divine which chiefly consists in His contemplation within one's own heart. To make this idea clear the analogy of the capital of a king, familiar to the Indian populace, is worked out in some of the Upanisadic passages. See Chāndogya VIII. 1. The body is named as Brahmapuram analogous to the capital of a king. There is the royal mansion in the city to which the lotus of the heart is compared. The king resides in the mansion and he must be sought there by supplicants. This passage describes that although Parabrahman is infinite, He can be accosted in the ether of the heart through unbroken meditation. The heart is the mansion of the Supreme. Because the heart is the place for meditating upon the Supreme it is qualified as sinless and pure. When a king is propitiated through proper service in his own residence he would reveal himself and all his glory to his devoted servants. So also when the Supreme is approached through contemplation within oneself one realises the true nature of one's own being. The Paramatman residing in the heart is here referred to as visoka, sorrowless, and an aspirant who enters into his own heart by the continuous contemplation of the Supremealso becomes sorrowless. The text adopted above is that of the shorter version accepted by Sayana. The variae lectiones in the longer version have not much merit: varaves mabhūtam here is presented as parames mabhūtam there and the anonymous commentator declares that mesma is a Vedic form of vesma! In the second line dahre is replaced by dahram without any special advantage. Where Sayana reads varavesma Bhattabhāskara reads paravesma, the home of the Supreme. The word pundarika is analysed by Bhaṭṭabhāskara thus: पुण्या दरी पुण्डरी, तां कायति शब्दयति इति that is to say a holy inner apartment called by the name pundarika. For further elucidation of worship in the heart see Brahmasūtras. 1. 3. 14-21.

17. He is the Supreme Lord who transcends the syllable Om which is uttered at the commencement of the recital of the Vedas, which is well established in the Upanisads and which is dissolved in the primal cause during contemplation.

[This mantra describes the Reality mentioned in the previous stanza as the sorrowless ether in the heart. The pranava is the symbol and the representation of the Supreme and so the source and substance of the Vedas and the Upanisads. The aspirant is advised to meditate on the three elements of pranava a, u and m representing Virāt, Hiraņyagarbha and Avyākṛta (material, mental and causal aspects of the universe). By this meditation the grosser principle is refunded to its subtle cause; so Virāt is dissolved in Hiranyagarbha and Hiranyagarbha in Prakṛti. Beyond Prakrti, the causal principle, is the Supreme corresponding to the nada or the intangible reverberation which continues for ever when the three syllables of the pranava are uttered in succession and their physical sound has subsided. The term mahesvara containing the element mahān indicates the idea of the highest worship—points out Bhaṭṭabhāskara. It is not meant for distinguishing Him from alpesvara. About the origin of pranava and the four Vedas from it see Bhāgavata XII. 6. 37-44.]

1-3. This universe is truly the Divine Person only. Therefore it subsists on Him—the self-effulgent Divine Being—who has many heads and many eyes, who is the producer of joy the universe, who exists in the form of the universe, who is the master and the cause of humanity, whose forms are the various gods, who is imperishable, who is the all-surpassing ruler and saviour, who is superior to the world, who is endless and omniform, who is the goal of humanity, who is the destroyer of sin and ignorance, who is the protector of the universe and the ruler of individual Souls, who is permanent, supremely auspicious and unchanging, who has embodied Himself in man as his support (being the indwelling Spirit), who is supremely worthy of being known by the creatures, who is embodied in the universe and who is the supreme goal.

[This anuvāka, according to Bhaṭṭabhāskara, describes the attributes of the Supreme; but according to Sāyaṇa it lays down the nature as well as the quality of the Divine who is to be worshipped in the heart as pointed out in the penultimate verse of the previous Section. Based on these two ancient commentators I have given an explanatory rendering of the epithets and names like Nārāyaṇa and Hari. In the Rgvedasamhitā the Divine Reality is described as Agni. A large number of hymns ascribe also to Agnidevatā divine attributes and functions. The Agnirahasya in the S'atapathabrāhmaṇa and Agnicayana in the Taittirīyabrāhmaņa teach meditations on Agni in one's own Self as the Purusa. Such meditations, when performed by an aspirant without desire for any self-regarding result, lead him to liberation. From the Brahmana texts it is evident that the Fire which is embodied in the universe is the Purusa worshipped in the Agnicayana. अग्निरेव महत एकाक्षरं ब्रह्म is the declaration of S'atapatha. The rite of Agnicayana is meant for Puruṣārādhanā. The Rgveda in the famous Puruşasūkta forestalls the central teachings of the Upanisads by announcing Purusa as the cause of the universe and the means of attaining liberation. various gods described in many hymns merge into the Purusa, who in the Yajurveda is mentioned as the Prajāpati. Finally He is comprehended under terms like Ekam Sat, Purusa, Prāna, Ātman, and Brahman. The whole universe is conceived on the analogy of a human organism and then the unity of all existence as Atman is emphasized. The conception of Purusa, Brahman and Atman finally becomes identical. Chāndogyopanişad VIII. 12. 3 describes the uttamapurușa described in the Gītā as Purușottama. Uttaranārāyana in the Vājasaneyīsamhitā and this anuvāka are in a way supplementary to the Purușasūkta of the Rgveda. This anuvāka is used in daily worship of the Divine Person by those who follow the scriptural mode of divine service. the place of prabhum ending the first stanza the longer version reads padam which means the goal.

4. Nārāyaṇa is the Supreme Reality designated as Brahman. Nārāyaṇa is the highest (Self). Nārāyaṇa is the supreme Light (described in the Upaniṣads). Nārāyaṇa is the inflnite Self. [Nārāyaṇa is the most excellent meditator and meditation.]

[In this whole anuvāka we have accepted the reading supported by Sāyaṇa and minor variations of wording are not noted. Bhaṭṭabhāskara's interpretation is openly vis'istadvaitic while that of Sayana is The difference of reading in some non-dualistic. places appear to depend on this. The former takes. Nārāyanaparam and Nārāyanapara as single words and interprets Brahma as the dependent vibhūti of Nārāvana and Juotirātmā as the finite Self that is dependent on God as a pot is on clay. While Sayana takes the two terms Brahma and tattvam tegether. Bhattabhaskara considers them seperate and states that the categories of the universe are meant by tattvam. According to Bhattabhaskara, Paramatman is identified with Nārāyana who is the substantial cause of the universe, nature and souls. But according to Sāyana, Nārāyana is Paramātman described as Brahman and not a personality. The verse added in brackets is not vouched for by both these commentators. It emphasizes the advaitic idea of the transcendent unity of meditator, meditation and the Reality meditated upon. The anonymous commentator makes out from the last Nārāyanah parah the opposition of Nārāyaṇa to sinners, relying upon the meaning enemy for the word para.]

6. One should meditate upon the Supreme—the limitless, unchanging, all-knowing, cause of the happiness of the world, dwelling in the sea of one's own heart, as the goal of all striving. The place for His meditation is the ether in the heart—the heart which is comparable to an inverted lotus bud.

[This stanza runs two ideas together with a grammatical gap which is filled in the translation. The first half describes once again the nature of the Supreme Divine Being on whom the world subsists and on whom one should meditate. The second half prescribes the place of meditation, namely, the heart already mentioned. As long as a man is engrossed in the sense-world seeking external pleasures his heart remains like an inverted lotus bud at night, which turns away from the light of the sun. But when he seeks the Divine Reality delightfully he turns away from the distracting objects of the world and he enters into the chamber of his own heart in communion. The lotus of his heart then becomes heliotropic to receive the light and life radiating from the Divine Sun.]

7. It should be known that the heart which is located just at the distance of a finger span below the Adam's apple and above the navel is the great abode of the universe.

[This stanza locates the heart in the body, just at the distance of one's own finger span below the Adam's apple denoted by the word nişti here. Sayana explains nisti as grīvābandha. Bhaṭṭabhāskara takes the word to be niṣṭyā and considers that the genitive case ending has been elided according to Vedic usage. The reading in the text above, accepted by Sayana, is justified by him on the ground of savarṇasandhi after eliding the visarga between vitastyāh and ante.

In order to evade this procedure based on Vedic license Bhattabhāskara accepts the reading vitastyām tu instead. The heart is described as the great abode of the universe either because Paramātman, the Soul of all, resides there or because the mind which projects the whole universe dwells there. In the place of हृद्यं तहिजानीयात् the longer version reads ज्वालुमालाकुलं भाती which means shining with a garland of flames.]

8. Like the bud of a lotus, suspends in an inverted position, the heart, surround by arteries.

In it there is a narrow space (or near it there is a narrow space called susumnā). In it everything is supported.

[Bhattabhaskara takes the narrow space in the heart to be the seat of everything. By everything he means the inner man consisting of the spirt, the mind and the faculties. Sayana takes ante in the sense of near and not inside as the former exegete does. He tells us that the narrow space is the susumnā nādī. According to him, when the mind enters into this space through the process of yoga, one intuits Paramātman, the source of all the universe. Hence the narrow space is spoken of as the support of all.]

9-11. In the middle of that (narrow space of the heart or susumna) remains the undecaying, all-knowing, omnifaced, great Fire, which has flames on every side, which enjoys the food presented before it, which remains assimilating the food consumed, [the rays of which spread scattering themselves vertically and horizontally,] and which warms its own body from the insole to the crown. In the centre of that Fire which permeates the whole body, there abides a tongue of Fire, of the colour of shining gold, which is the topmost among the subtle, which is dazzling like the flash of the lightning that appears in the middle of a rain-bearing cloud, which is as slender as the awn of a paddy grain; and which serves as a comparison to illustrate subtlety.

[These lines convey to us the following thoughts: Somatic heat is the sign of the presence of life. When the body loses all warmth, life has departed. A great Fire is thus at the root of life. Its place is within the narrow space of the heart or susumna. This Fire or energy radiates through arteries and nerves like heat through conductive bodies. It also receives stimuli from outside through sensations and perceptions which act as its many mouths. Whatever is presented to this Fire is analysed, enjoyed and assimilated by it without itself being transformed or destroyed in the process. It can make use of knowledge from the distant past and project thoughts into the future. Thus the vital principle of jīva described here in the simile of the Fire is responsible for all physical and mental activities ordinarily observed in the living and functioning man. Every part of the body is pervaded by the jīva like the rays of light radiating in all directions. One particular tongue of flame is specially mentioned as abiding in the centre of this great Fire which is the real principle of the jīva described here with a wealth of imagery. The brilliance of a lightning flash suddenly appearing in the background of a deep blue cloud, which acts as a foil to it, gives it a specially charming colouring. When this streak of light is as slender as the awn of a paddy grain, this Upanisad wants us to take it as the example of the central flame which represents the jīva. The Svetās vatara upanişad V. 9 also says that the individual Soul is as subtle as a hair point divided and sub-divided hundred times. So also ibid., V. 8 and Mundaka III. 1. 9 speak of its atomicity. Yet the jīva is potentially infinite. For further discussion of the matter see the Brahmasūtras II. 3. 19 to 32. The jīva is called agrabhuk because it is his nature as the agent to enjoy what is immediately presented rather than what is distant. The layman's reply to the questionwhat is jīva?—is given in the statement: The undecaying one who is responsible for the chemistry of the body-who breaks ingested food and builds up living tissues. Bhattabhāskara considers the locus of the great Fire in the narrow space of the heart, and Sāyana says that it is in the susumna near the heart. According to the former, the jīva draws towards it all existence, to an open mouth as if it were, containing the entire realm of space. This metaphor suggests to us that the jīva is capable of infinite knowledge and joy. It is evident from the Agnimantras in the Rgveda that Fire is Purusa, Atman and Brahman and so it dwells in the human body as vais vānara responsible for human life and activity. The longer version adds one line after the ninth verse which I have enclosed in parenthesis as it is not commented on by both the exegetes. The reading āpādatalamastakah does not affect the sense. The compound word aniyordhvā, according to Bhattabhaskara is anīyah plus adhvā with the augmentation of the semivowel r as a Vedic peculiarity. According to this formation of the word, the narrow flame is the subtle path of the jīva for the attainment of the Supreme. The alternative meaning given by him and also accepted by Sayana, is based upon the compound aniyah plus urdhva with the elision of the visarga and combination of the vowels. The meaning then is top-ranking among what is subtle. In the eleventh stanza there is the reading pītābhā syāt tanūpamā in the place of pītā bhāsvatī anūpamā which has the advantage of eliminating the redundancy of the idea in bhāsvarā and bhāsvatī appearing closely.

Bhattabhāskara has the following suggestive note revealing the meaning conveyed by the simile: The jīva entangled in the activities and enjoyments of mundane life has his vision diverted from the Supreme and got absorbed in the world. In this state he is shrouded in the gloom of delusion and consequently his inner Light is reduced to a narrow streak like the flash in the cloud. But when he retracts from worldly engrossments and turns towards the Supreme, the curtain of delusion cast by the spell of the world is drawn and his inner Light shines in all the brilliancy of the Supreme.]

12. Paramātman dwells in the middle of that flame. (Although He is thus limited) still He is the four-faced creator, S'iva, Viṣṇu, Indra, the material and efficient cause of the Universe and the Supreme Self-luminous Pure Consciousness.

[This stanza concludes the meditation upon the heart. The Paramatman has the Supreme in apparently reduced Himself in order to dwell in the heart, in the Fire of the Soul, ruling from the centre of the body. This self-limitation does not, however, affect the Paramatman who remains ever the Truth designated by the divine names, Brahma, Siva, Hari and Indra-though He is viewed as the conditioned Brahman originating, sustaining and retracting the universe and as the acosmic self-luminous Supreme Brahman. According to Bhattabhaskara who gives a vīs'istadvaitic interpretation of the passage, the following ideas stand out: Paramatman is Narayana, the source of jīvas. He remains contracted in the heart for the benefit of the jīvas. He is the creator. protector and dissolver of the universe. He is Svarāt because He is the only independent Reality causing all other dependent categories. He shines for ever in His own glory. The Deities and scriptural duties taught by mantras and brahmanas have their finality in Him. Worshipping Him thus one attains Him.]

1. Verily Āditya is He; This orb of His gives light and heat; The well-known Rk verses are there; Therefore the orb is the collection of Rks; He is the abode of the Rk verses. Now this flame which is shining in the orb of the sun is the collection of Sāman chants; That is the abode of Sāman chants. Now He who is the Person in the flame within the orb of the sun (is to be meditated as) the collection of Yajus; that part of the orb is the collection of Yajus; That is the abode of Yajus. Thus by these three the threefold knowledge alone shines. He who is within the sun is the Golden Person.

[This passage lays down a meditation of the Supreme in the sun. The Chāndogyopaniṣad (1. 6. 5-6) states: The white shining of the sun is the Rk, the dark, the ultra black, is the Sāman; there is the Golden Person, exceedingly brilliant and above all evils, within the sun. The same Upanisad (III. 1.4, III. 2.3, and III. 3.3) asserts that the red appearance in the sun is the essence of the Rgveda, the white appearance is that of the Yajurveda, the dark appearance is that of the Samaveda and the exceedingly dark appearance is that of the Atharvaveda. That the Vedas are to be associated with meditation upon the sun is an idea found in many passages of the scriptures. According to Sāyaṇa, Parames'vara, praised as Nārāyaṇa in the previous Section, is described here as the sun. The scriptural view is that every object in the world has three aspects: Adhyatma, Adhidaiva and Adhibhūta. The last of these terms implies the physical aspect of the object; the second one denotes the Divine Power as residing in all the objects; and the first one represents the essence of everything viewed from within as the subject. On this theory Rk, Yajus and Saman (hymns, formulas and chants) have their own devatās or regents. According to Sayana, the regents of the body of each Veda dwell respectively in the orb of the sun, the flame in it and the Person visible in the orb, in the order of the Vedas. The phrases rcam lokah, samnam lokah and yajusām lokah are explained in the above light as the abode of the regents of the Vedas. All these three are in the orb of the sun and therefore the splendour of the sun is visualised as the glory of the triple knowledge, trayī vidyā. Further, the regent of the sun is declared to be the Golden Person. He is identified with the threefold Vedas being the subject-matter taught by them. According to Bhattabhāskara the Golden Person is the Supreme Lord who has favoured man with the three Vedas shining in the sun. He explains Aditya as ādau bhavah—the Lord who was in the beginning. The universe is illumined by His light as coming from the sun. The Upanisads state that the splendour of the sun really belongs to the Supreme. The passage extolls the three Vedas, whose purpose is to magnify the Supreme Being in order that we might Worship Him. As the basis of Bhattabhāskara's interpretation we notice also some difference in the text used by him. He reads ream mandalam in the place of reā mandalam, inserts sa sāmnām mandalam before sa sāmnām lokah and omits sa yajuṣām mandalam.]

1. The sun alone is verily all these:—energy, splendour, strength, renown, sight, hearing, body, mind, anger, Seer, the Deities Death, Satya, Mitra, Wind, Ether and Breath, the Rulers of the world, Prajāpati, the Indeterminable One, happiness, that which transcends the senses, truth, food, [span of life,] liberation or Immortality, individual Soul, the Universe, the acme of bliss and the self-born Brahman. This Person in the sun is eternal. He is the Lord of all creatures. He who meditates thus upon Him attains union with Brahman and lives in the same region of enjoyment with Him; he attains union, co-residence and like-enjoyment with these gods in their worlds. The secret knowledge is thus imparted.

This Section lists various attributes, powers and qualities of the Supreme Person identified with the all-encompassing sun for the purpose of worship and meditation. One may worship Hiranyagarbha-the-World-Soul here identified with the sun-or the Deities who form His parts, powers and attributesas enumerated here. A worshipper may be a superior aspirant who possesses greater concentration, stronger feeling and better capacity for continuous effort; another may be weak and possessing only an inferior capacity for worship. If the worshipper isof superior calibre he attains identity with the objectof his worship; if he is of poor capacity he gets a place in the region of the object of his worship which entitles him to enjoyments similar to those possessed by the God whom he worships. In the Hamsamantra previously explained on pages 145-149 it has been pointed out that the sun is fit to beworshipped as Brahman. Bhaṭṭabhāskara points out that the Supreme Person has not only revealed the three Vedas through the sun, but also has given all that is necessary for the well-being and liberation of creatures. This Section is reminiscent of the Gitachapters nine and ten where the attributes of the Supreme are described for contemplation. The shorter version for which we have the commentary of Bhaṭṭabhāskara and Sāyaṇa has āyuḥ inserted after annam and before amṛtam, Svayambhūḥ instead of Svayaṃbhu given in the text above, and adds immediately after that word प्रजापतिरिति संवत्सरोऽसावादित्यो यः in the place of ब्रह्मतदमृतः। Bhaṭṭabhāskara reads also saṃvatsara after prajāpati and before iti and explains सम्यक् वसन्ति अनेन इति विश्वोपादानं ब्रह्म taking saṃvatsara as an epithet of the Supreme.]

2. Aditya, the supreme cause of the universe, is the giver of light and water and is the source of all energy. He is denoted by the syllable Om. Gods worship Him as Tapas and Truth. (Being worshipped thus) He grants bliss to the worshippers. (Or the worshippers offer honey and sweet offerings to Him.) That form of the sun is Brahman. That is the pervading cause of all. That is water, fire, flavour and ambrosia. The three vyāhṛti-s representing the three worlds and the praṇava representing the cause of the universe denote that Brahman.

[This mantra is given as a single Section in the shorter version immediately after what is printed above as Section Fifteen. I have enclosed this therefore in square brackets to indicate that it does not belong to the longer version. The second half of it embodies the well-known gāyatrī-siras which forms part of the formula used during prāṇāyāma, the earlier half being the Savitṛgāyatrī.

The explanation of it given is as follows: The syllable Om added at the gayatri-head represents Parabrahman in the three aspects of Brahmā, Viṣṇu and S'iva responsible for the creation, protection and dissolution of the universe. Apah expresses the omnipresent impartite existence which is also the jyotis or self-luminous Pure Consciousness. The same Reality is rasa—original bliss, and amrtam—Immortality. It is Brahman because It is not limited by time, space and causality. The same Reality is bhūh being, bhuvah the substance of all that exists and suvah, the dissolver. The ending pranava affirms that Parabrahman described as above is the innermost Self or Pratyagātman. During prāṇāyāma, the praṇava with seven vyāhrti-s measure the inhaling. Gāyatrī headed by pranava limits the period of retention of breath and siras given here with pranava spans the breathing out. Both Bhaṭṭabhāskara and Sāyaṇa consider this passage as a formula to be employed for japa by those who are incapable of performing the meditation given in the previous Section. The combination adityom is a Vedic irregularity; the separate words -are ādityah Om.]]

1. By these twenty-two names ending with salutations they consecrate the S'ivalinga for all—the Linga which is representative of soma and sūrya, and holding which in the hand holy formulas are repeated and which purifies all.

[Here there are twenty-two salutations suffixed to the twenty-two Divine Names uttered at the time of the consecration of the emblem of S'ivalinga in a public temple, or at home for private worship, or on the body of a devotee of S'iva. These names are not explained uniformly by the commentators. The whole Section has not the confirmation of Bhattabhāskara and Sāyaṇa. Vīras'aiva texts explain only eleven of these Divine Names in the light of their philosophy and yoga. The anonymous commentary printed in the Ānandās'rama edition attempts to explain each word somehow based on conjecture. The Sanskrit paraphrase given above is based on these two sources.

In the serial order of the text I give an English version of the Names below: 1. The Lord of the dissolution of the universe—S'iva is here considered as the aspect of the Supreme responsible for the final dissolution of the universe. 2. The end-maker or Nidhanapati is Yama who is responsible for the death of all creatures. At the time of universal absorption S'iva alone remains, the whole pantheon of gods including Yama being retracted into Him. To get this meaning, however, we have to suppose that pata plus antika in the text is pati plus antaka. 3. The Most High standing at the head of the categories which evolve into the universe, namely Siva who is the unity of Power and Power-holder. 4. The principle of Sadasiva embodying the power of Intelligence. 5. He who is beneficial and charming to creatures. 6. He who is visualized as the linga made of gold. 7. He who is endowed with attractive splendour. 8. He who is of the form of linga made of suvarna, here silver. 9. He who is the source of bliss in heaven. 10, He who is worshipped in the paradise as the linga established there by the devotees-or He who is worshipped as the divine emblem. 11. He who is the source of the cycle of birth and death. (The S'vetāsvataropanisad describes S'iva as संसारवन्धस्थितिमोक्षहेतु:.) 12. He who is worshipped as the linga by human beings. 13. He who is the suppresser of the universe at the time of final dissolution. (S'arva from the root S'r to destroy). 14. He who has the shape of the linga emblem of S'arva, who gives bliss. 15. He who is most auspicious. 16. He who has the form of S'ivalinga. 17. He who has the form of a flaming splendour. 18. He who has the form of the brilliant linga. 19. He who is the Spirit (Atman) dwelling in all creatures. (The usual form must be atmane in the place of ātmāya.) 20. He who is concealed in the heart of all creatures being their inmost Self. 21. He who is unsurpassed. 22. He who is the Supreme Lord of bliss and liberation indicated by the linga emblem.

The term linga in Sanskrit means an indicatory mark or emblem which symbolically represents that for which it stands. S'ivalinga represents the Supreme Being denoted by the word Rudra Mahadeva. The Chāndogya III. 19. 1 describes that the whole universe was hatched out of a golden egg which lay a complete year before it brought forth offspring. The spherical dome of the heavens above, appearing to us capping the earth on which we live, may be likened to an enormous semisection of an egg containing the world. Perhaps this golden egg lended itself to be fancied as the visible symbol of the limitless all-inclusive Divine Reality into which the manifold universe was believed to be reabsorbed at the end. The linga which is worshipped by the devotee of S'iva is but a handy replica or a convenient dimunitive form of the universal semispherical emblem of the Unlimited. S'ivalinga may be carved out of stone, naturally found as stalagmite, or shaped out of gold, metal and the like. The linga, therefore, is a symbol concealing a truth behind. This word occurring in various compound names above are to be interpreted in the light of the tradition behind the word. For further details about S'ivalinga and its worship the Purāṇas and Agamas may be consulted.]

1. I take refuge in Sadyojāta. Verily I salute Sadyojāta again and again. O Sadyojāta, do not consign me to repeated birth; lead me beyond birth, into the state of bliss and liberation. I bow down to Him who is the source of transmigratory existence.

[These and the succeeding four formulas of salutation and prayer are called Pañcabrahmamantra-s, employed in the worship and meditation of Mahādeva visualized as having five faces turned towards the four quarters and up. These are also prescribed for japa by a person who desires divine illumination. The term $Sadyoj\bar{a}ta$ literally means he who is born today. The Lord described here is the embodiment of all knowledge. His westward face is supposed to be responsible for the evolution of the universe from the unevolved condition. When this face is pratyagvrtti (out-turned) the cycle of birth and death begins to turn and sustains creation. When it is prāgvrtti (in-turned) Mahādeva grants Release. That aspect of Mahādeva, which is responsible for samsāra is called Sadyojāta. The worshipper who has realised the limitations and miseries of the world, therefore, prays to Sadyojāta: May He not consign me any more to the round of birth and death, but lift me out of it and set me on the path of Release. binds the jīva with His delusive power alone can give him Release; and the helpless bound Soul has nothing with him to buy his release except humility, self-surrender, self-abnegation and continuous aspiration implied in the word namah.]

He is endowed with many forms that are either sāttvika, rājasa or tāmasa called here respectively as aghora, ghora and ghoratara. I have preferred the text of the shorter version which is accepted by Bhatṭabhāskara and

Sāyaṇa, slightly departing from the usual practice, because the reading सर्वेभ्य: सर्वश्रवेभ्य: in the longer version appears to be corrupt and not vouched for by any authoritative commentator.]

[This is again another mantra employed in the worship and meditation of Mahadeva and for salutation to Him. It contains seven epithets of Siva-Each one of them is traditionally explained in the following order of occurrence in the formula: 1. One who has ornaments of gold on the arms, or possessing a form having the golden hue. 2. He who is the source of the syllables of the Vedas which are as precious as gold. 3. He who is shining in splendour. 4. The Lord of riches wholesome and charming. 5. The consort of Ambika, the Mother of the universe. 6. The master of Uma, Brahmavidya personified as such. 7. The Lord of all created beings. Of these seven names, 1, 4, 5 and 6 alone are in the shorter version and confirmed by Bhattabhaskara and Sayana. According to Bhattabhāskara, Paras'akti when She projects Herself as the universe, is called Ambikā and when She retracts the universe into Herself at the end of a cosmic cycle She is called Uma. The Vedas, according to the meaning given above, are supposed to be precious and dear not only because of their intrinsic value as divine revelation, but also because of the great difficulty in acquiring them after long and exacting service in the preceptor's residence.]

ऋतर् सृत्यं पेरं बह्य पुरुषं कृष्ण्पिङ्गेलम् । ऊर्घ्वरेतं विरूपाक्षं विश्वरूपाय् वै नम्रो नमः ॥ १ ॥

परं सर्वस्मादुत्कृष्टं ब्रह्म परमार्थवस्तु ऋतं सत्यं अत्यन्तसत्यम् । तादृशं ब्रह्म जगदनुप्रहाय दक्षिणे महेश्वरभागे कृष्णवर्णः वामे उमाभागे पिङ्गल्वर्णश्च सन् कृष्णपिङ्गलं, योगेन ब्रह्मरन्ध्रे स्वकीयस्य रेतसः धृतत्वात् उर्ध्वरेतं, तिनेत्रत्वात् विरूपाक्षं, पुरुषं पुरुषरूपं च भवति । तस्मै विश्वरूपाय सर्वजगदात्मकाय एव नमस्कारतिः अस्तु ॥

परम् Supreme ब्रह्म Brahman ऋतं सत्यम् the Supreme Truth कृष्णपिङ्गलम् dark blue and reddish brown in hue ऊर्ध्वरेतम् absolutely chaste विस्पाक्षम् possessing uncommon eyes (three in number) पुरुषम् the person. विश्वस्पाय of the universal form (तस्मै to Him) वै alone नमः नमः many salutations.

1. Supreme Brahman, the Absolute Reality, has become an androgynous Person in the form of Umāmahesvara, dark blue and reddish brown in hue, absolutely chaste and possessing uncommon eyes. Salutations to Him alone who is the Soul of the universe or whose form is the universe.

This mantra occurs in the shorter version immediately after the Nārāyanānuvāka (Pages 175-191). It is employed for japa when one is prostrating oneself reverently before the Deity whom one worships. The translation given above is based upon Sāyana who takes rtam as adjectival and satyam as substantival and explains that while the term satuam alone denotes pragmatic truth, when qualified by rtam it conveys the idea of the Absolute-Truth which is Parabrahman. The term Brahman in neuter stands for the Absolute Reality. Herethe word Purusa and its qualifications also are unusually given in the neuter form. This fact stressesthe identity of the personal and impersonal, conditioned and unconditioned, aspects of the Divine Reality. Bhattabhaskara interprets this verse in a slightly different light: It is employed for japa. meditation and repetition when homa is performed by those who seek welfare in this world or desire the bliss of Release. Further, it describes the Divine Person who is the goal of the religious quest. The term Rtam is analysed also as : - ऋतीयते विश्वं अनुग्रह्णाति इति ऋतम्—the Compassionate form of the Divine Person who is also Satyam because He is conducive to the highest good—सति साधु, सते हितम्. The Param Brahma is Purusa because He fills and protects all. When He takes a body, that body is produced and developed by the paternal and maternal seed represented as kṛṣṇa and pingala which combination implies also Parasiva and Parasakti. The term ūrdhvaretam which should be ūrdhvaretasam in the usual language is interpreted as the transcendent form of the Divine. The word retas is taken in the sense of the change and growth which a seed undergoes and therefore it is applied to the evolving universe. Urdhvaretas is then the Divine Principle transcending the evolutionary process of creation. Sāyaṇa explains that S'iva being yogīs'vara holds His retas in Brahmarandhra by the power of yoga; and that ūrdhvaretas is therefore an epithet of S'iva.]

1. We sing a hymn that confers on us happiness in the highest degree to Rudra who is worthy of praise, who is endowed with the highest knowledge, who rains objects to the worshippers most excellently, who is more powerful and who is dwelling in the heart. Indeed all this is Rudra. Salutations be to Rudra who is such.

[The term kadrudra is taken to be an adjectival compound, kad being derived from the root kathdenoting praise. This Mantra is found also at Rgveda I. 43. 1 where Sāyaṇa takes 'kad' as an adverb meaning when (kadā). The translation accordingly will be: When will I recite this hymn to Rudra who is supremely bliss-conferring, who is most wise, who is supremely great, who is the giver of all desires and who is dwelling in our heart! Mīdhuṣtama is the superlative form of mīdhvas, traced to the root Mih to rain. Sāyaṇa takes tavyas as a disguise of the word stavya while Bhaṭṭabhāskara equates it with tavīyas the comparative form of tavas strength or power. This mantra serves the same purpose as the previous one.]

1. He who has the sacrificial ladle made of Vikankata (Flacourtia Spida) tree for his Agnihotra rite offers oblations effective in producing the desired fruit. Further, these oblations contribute to establish (his spiritual knowledge through the generation of mental purity).

[This passage lays down the substance of the sacrificial ladle proper for Agnihotra. From some other liturgical part of the Veda this sentence is extracted here to serve as a specimen in order to indicate that the entire range of scripture-ordained duties from Agnihotra to Sattrayāga help a seeker after liberation in bringing about mental purity essential for the attainment of his goal. The longer version presents the text omitting the word enclosed in square brackets.]

1. The sage Vasistha declared that Aditi is the Mother and protector of gods, of celestial minstrels, of men, of departed ancestors, of demons and others; that she is possessed of hardness or cohesiveness, that she is excellent and honoured, that she belongs to the Divine Spirit, that she is fit to be praised, contingent and supporting all, that she is rich in crops, broad and possessing a wealth of objects, that she is universal and comprising of the primary element, that she is exceedingly blissful, transformed into the bodies of creatures, illustrious, enduring and hence immortal.

[While the word Bhūmi denotes the earth, here the term Aditi refers to the deity embodied by it. This passage is a praise of the Supreme as the Deity of the Earth. The word Aditi is derived from the root meaning to divide and generally it is applied to the Deity of the heavens comprising of unlimited space. Here it is taken to denote the Earth. The reading mahatā in the place of mahatī is not admitted by Bhaṭṭabhāskara and Sāyaṇa. For a similar eulogy of Aditi see Rgveda I. 89. 10.]

worlds denoted by $Bh\bar{u}h$, Bhuvah and Suvah are water. The source of all these is the Supreme, denoted by the syllable 'Om'.

[This mantra refers to water as a Deity. The Supreme Being is here eulogised as water. The Deity of water is supplicated to avert dryness and to cause rain. Bhaṭṭabhāskara transposes annam, and amṛtamand omits yajūmṣi. He interprets Samrāṭ as perpetually shining, Virāṭ as manifoldly shining and Svarāṭ as self-luminous.]

1-2. May this water cleanse my physical body that is made of earthy substances. Thus purified, may the earthy body purify me, the Soul within. May this water purify the guardian of the Vedas, my preceptor. May the purified Vedas taught by the purified teacher purify me. (Or may the Supreme purify me. May the water purified by the Supreme purify me.) My defilement, repast on prohibited food and misconduct if any, and the sin accruing from the acceptance of gifts from persons disapproved by the scripture—from all these may I be absolved. May the waters purify me. Hail!

This Section consisting of two stanzas supplies the formulas employed for purifying ceremoniously a quantity of water taken through the mouth as a part of the midday devotion and also for acamana during bath. Here again the water stands for both, the element and the Deity. Intoning this mantra the twice-born drinks little water in the prescribed form with the following ideas in mind: May I become fit to enjoy the bliss of liberation here in this life through the realisation of the Supreme. For that may I receive instruction, and practise reflection and contemplation upon the final teachings of the Vedas with my mind and body cleansed of all impurities and sins. The prayer in the text is built up by a number of clauses. The importance of physical purity comes first. Water purifies the human body which is perpetually rendered unclean by exudations. A clean body is an aid for a pure mind. The second line offers a problem of grammatical concord which is somehow overcome by taking arbitrarily the plural verb to be singular in sense or by taking the nominative to be accusative i.e, ब्रह्मण: पति: मां पुनातु or आप: ब्रह्मण: पति पनन्त. In the first case Brahmanah patih is the Lord who is the four-faced Brahmā, here the Supreme, who is entreated to purify the performer. In the second case, as Sāyaṇa points out, Brahmanaspati is the preceptor who is purified by the water and so he purifies the pupil. The second stanza is both a prayer and an expiation for transgressions of the individual and collectivity. Scrupulous avoidance of offences against the accepted code of religious conduct is possible only for the thoughtful and the painstaking aspirants. Consciousness of the intrusion of sin necessitates such a penitent prayer as this. Food defiled by others by intention or by contact is unfit for sacramental worship. In peril one may be compelled to take unclean food. The man behind the gift exerts an influence over the enjoyer of it often in an invisible manner. Hence religious people who insist on right living do not welcome gifts from disapproved people. Life is beset with these and many other offences against holy regulations and so daily expiations and resolutions are provided in the routine of devotion.

Further, whatever sinful deed has been committed by me, all that and myself I offer as an oblation into the Self-luminous Truth, the source of Immortality. Hail!

[Similar to the previous Section this one also is employed for praying over the purificatory water that is taken in as part of daily evening devotion, which serves for expiation of sins. Traditionally Agni and Ahas, Fire and Day, are here taken to stand for the Divine. What is literally denoted by these two words cannot remove one's sins. Sayana therefore takes Fire and Day to mean the regent Deities. Manyu is a Deity found mentioned in the Vedas. The meaning given is 'longing fervour'—मननशीलं अन्त:करणं सर्वप्रवृत्तिनिवृत्तिहेतु:—as Bhaṭṭabhāskara puts it. From this meaning, by restriction, we get the sense of anger towards one's enemies—including internal foes like craving, rage, covetousness and passion. guardians of manyu are the senses and energies of man. Man's passions are his misfortunes. Just as the home is protected from thieves and burglars by placing proper guard so a man has to protect himself from sinful acts perpetrated through his enslavement to the passions and pleasures of the senses. Every act of devotion is an act of weeding and sowing. The mind has to be cleansed of possible sins and planted with thoughts of purity and holy resolutions. During the evening twilight-devotion offences of the day are burnt in the fire of divine contemplation. The list of sins given here, though fairly comprehensive, may be considered only as illustrative. A pure mind is at the root of all spiritual progress. Wrong and sinful emotions and feelings stain the mind. Control of mind implies controlling and directing of one's acts in proper and approved way. All day-dreamings based on personal hurts and satisfaction are therefore to be shunned as sin and repented for. Sins are committed by words in the shape of lying, swearing, tattling, disparaging and bantering. Aimless and hurtful activities are consciously or unconsciously performed by the hand. The feet are responsible for gadding about and walking over places where one ought not to go. The belly offends by taking in wrong food. Unchastity is a sin for which the procreative organ is held responsible. All the senses are to be carefully guarded. Without fear of sin no man can tread the right path and human nature is prone to all these weaknesses. As a preventive and cure for these foibles the aspirant during his evening devotions contemplates daily upon the Supreme Truth -The Shining Reality within himself. He forgets at least for the time being his lower human nature as it were. Daily repetition of this process finally burns away all the dross in him and makes him pure and divine. That is the purpose of this and similar other mantras recited in this context.]

Further, whatever sinful deed has been committed by me all that and myself I offer as an oblation into the Supreme Light represented by the sun, the source of Immortality. Hail!

[This mantra serves the same purpose as the one described in the previous two mantras. The only difference is that this is employed during the performance of the morning twilght devotion of the twiceborn. Traditionally $s\bar{u}rya$ is here interpreted as the Supreme represented by the sun. Even the word $r\bar{a}tri$ is interpreted to denote the Supreme Being— $r\bar{a}$ means to give and trai means to protect, that is to say, the protector of the universe who confers the Purusārthas to the devotees. This Section varies from the previous one only by the substitution of two words:— $s\bar{u}rya$ and $r\bar{a}tri$.]

1. The one syllable 'Om' is Brahman. Agni is its Deity. Its Rsi also is Brahman. Its metre is gāyatrī. Its use is for the union with Pāramātman who exists as the manifold universe.

[This passage is not noticed by Bhaṭṭabhāskara and Sāyaṇa and has the appearance of an intrusion. Its grammatical deformity is redeemed by supplying the necessary case ending conjecturally. The purpose of the passage is to inform us that the very form of the syllable 'Om' is Brahman, that what is denoted by it is also Brahman here named as Agni, that its Rṣi is Brahman, that its metre is gāyatrī, and that its use is to aid an aspirant to realize his union with the Supreme.]

1. May the boon-conferring divine gayatricome to us (in order to instruct us about) the imperishable Brahman who is determined by the Vedanta. May gayatri, the mother of metres, favour us with the Supreme just mentioned.

[This is the Gāyatrī invocation used in the twilight devotions. The instruction on the Supreme (Brahmopades'a) is mainly conveyed through praṇava and gāyatrī. Here, therefore, a prayer is addressed to Gāyatrī, the Deity denoted by the verse, requesting her to visit the devotee and favour him with the intuition of the Supreme Brahman—the last word of the Vedas and the final purpose of religious righteousness taught in it. We note as part of the Vedic faith inspired by the Kenopanişad that Brahmavidyā is acquired through the grace of the Divine Mother, there named as Umā, and here as Gāyatrī. The longer version has juṣasva me in place of juṣasva nah found in the shorter one. The reading in the shorter version appears to be superior in so far as the gāyatrī text itself uses the first person plural as the object. Further both Bhaṭṭabhāskara and Sāyaṇa have accepted the plural reading. To meet the trend of advaitic interpretation, Sāyaṇa takes juṣasva in the sense of joṣayatu. The alternative interpretation which is given in the Sanskrit Paraphrase represents Bhaṭṭabhāskara and in English it would read:—May the boon-giving Deity of Gāyatrī come to us. O Devi, mother of metres, deign to accept this prayer of ours in gāyatrī metre which is similar to the imperishable Brahman in greatness.]

2. O thou who art the source of all letters, O thou the great Deity, O thou the object of meditation at twilight, O thou Sarasvatī, may thy devotee be liberated from the sin which he commits during the day by the same day and the sin which he commits during the night by the same night.

[This supplimentary prayer found in the longer version is not noticed by Bhaṭṭabhāskara and Sāyaṇa. The forms ahnāt and rātriyāt must be restored to the usual grammatical forms ahni and rātryām.]

1. O Gāyatrī, Thou art the essence of strength. Thou art patience, or the subduing power. Thou art physical capacity. Thou art splendour. Thou art the abode of gods and their name. Thou art the insentient universe. Thou art the full span of life or the Lord of all. Thou art every living thing. Thou art the life span of all. Thou art the vanquisher of all that is hostile to us. Thou art the Truth denoted by the pranava. I invoke Gayatri, (into my heart). I invoke Sāvitrī. I invoke Sarasvatī. I invoke the metres, the Rsis (and the gods). I invoke the splendour (of all the gods). Of Gāyatrī the metre is gāyatrī, the Rsi is Visvāmitra and the Deity is Savitr. Fire represents. the mouth; the four-faced Brahmā, the head; Viṣṇu, the heart; Rudra, the crown-hair; Earth, the source; the in-breath, the outbreath, the diffused breath, the up-breath and the middle breath, the breath. Gāyatrī is fair in hue and is of the same family as Paramātman attained by the Sāṅkhyas—the illumined sages. The deity Gāyatrī (explained further as a formula) has twenty-four syllables, comprised in three feet, six sheaths or cavities and five heads. It is employed in Upanayana, or initiation into Vedic studentship.

[Along with the previous stanza this section is also employed for invoking Gayatri in the heart of the worshipper. The Vajasaneyins use this Section for the invocation of Gayatri instead of the verses beginning with Ayātu varadā devī of the immediately preceding Section. Worship implies a relation between the worshipper and the object of worship, and also a felt need and a suitable attitude in the worshipper which he naturally and genuinely adopts. The apparent limitations and imperfections, as well as the consciousness of sin and impurity incidental to his inherited nature as described in the preceding Sections, engender in the mind of the worshipper the need for invoking the grace of the Supreme in the shape of Gāyatrī to retrieve his own true divine nature which had been temporarily eclipsed by the life of the world.

Gravitational flow of water takes place only to a low ground. Similarly only a person who is humble, penitent and eager for purity and freedom can receive the divine glory in its unsullied splendour. Such an aspiring soul looks to the Divine for all its needs and exclaims: 'Thou art my strength. Thou art my power, Thou art my glory, Thou art my all'. So here Gayatrī conceived as non-different from Brahman is eulogised as the various excellences and attributes listed above. The longer version has an extension of the passage, not noticed by Bhattabhāskara and Sāyana, in sāvitrīm āvāhayāmi etc. used by many worshippers according to their tradition. The earlier part up to abhibhūrom is quoted from Taittirīyabrāhmana 2. 4. 3. 2, where it is given as a eulogy of Gāyatrī. Sāyana takes āyu in the sarvāyu as food in the commentary on the Taittirīyabrāhmana passage. It has been already noted that Gāyatrī is also known as Sāvitrī and Sarasvatī. The Supreme Being as the indweller and impeller of all Creation is known as Savitr and hence the passage in praise of Him is called Savitrī. The Vedas are represented as a lake or saras which gives the Waters of life and hence Gayatri, as the essence of the Vedas, is called Sarasvatī. These two terms magnify Gayatrī as the object of worship.

Traditionally Gāyatrī is the name given to That Deity in the forenoon, Sāvitrī in the midday and Sarasvatī in the evening. Gāyatrī is explained as that which protects the person who chants it (gāyantam trāyate) from the various sins. The epithet Sāvitrī is given because it represents Savitr, who illumines the creation; and Sarasvatī because in that aspect it expresses the world in the shape of speech. These three are also represented as Brahmā, Rudra and Viṣṇu as well as red, white and black. Whatever may be the details of worship, the Supreme is worshipped through the gāyatrī. To this effect the Smṛṭi-s cite the following authority:

निमन्नां प्रतिपद्येत गायत्रीं ब्रह्मणा सह । सोऽहमस्मीत्युपासीत विधिना येनकेनचित् ॥ गायत्नीं चिन्तयेद्यस्तु हृत्पद्मे समुपस्थिताम् । धर्माधर्मविनिर्मुक्तः स याति परमां गतिम् ॥

The principal part of this devotion consists in the meditation of Gāyatrī in the orb of the sun visualised in one's own heart as non-different from Paramātman. The ritualistic details are secondary. The Mahābhārata states that during the Kurukṣetra war, Yudhiṣṭhira and other leaders did the twilight meditation at the appropriate time without retiring from the battle field for the performance of detailed rituals. The eulogy of Gāyatrī is further extended by identifying it with other items given below that. Being the essence of all mantras, gāyatrī embodies in it mystically all the metres, all the Ḥṣis, all the gods as well as their splendour. So by the invocation of Gāyatrī all these are invoked within oneself. No mantra is fit for employment in religious acts unless the metre, the deity and the seer are also remember-So gāyatrī, Vis'vāmitra and Savitr are next Then the formula of gayatri is personimentioned. fied for meditation: - Agni the first of Gods is the mouth, Brahma the first-born is the head, Visnu is the heart and Rudra is the $sikhar{a}$ or flame causing the final dissolution (or what is placed at the top of all). The earth is the Yoni i.e. the source, and the winds, the breath. Fairness in hue is indicative of the highest purity. The knowledge of family is necessary to assess the greatness of an individual and so it is stated that Gāyatrī is of the same Gotra as Brahman. (सांख्यै: ईयते रानिभि: प्राप्यते इति सांख्यायन: सन्मात्रं ब्रह्म). The form of Gāyatrī mantra is then described. It has three feet of eight syllables each, six sheaths or auxiliaries to the Vedas which protect the Vedas represented by Gāyatrī like a sheath, five heads consisting of four Vedas and Itihāsa and Purāņa known as the fifth Veda. details about Gayatrī are recited before a boy is initiated into studentship and Gäyatrī is instructed.]

2. Om Earth. Om Sky. Om Heaven. Om Middle Region. Om Place of Birth. Om Mansion of the Blessed. Om Abode of Truth. Om may we meditate on the Adorable Light of that Divine Generator who quickens our understandings. Om He is water, light, flavour, ambrosia and also the three worlds. He who is denoted by pranava is all these.

[This passage gives the mantras employed for mental repetition and concentration during the performance of prāṇāyāma. Four elements namely, praṇava, vyāḥṛti-s, gāyatrī and gāyatrīsiras make up the whole unit. According to Manu this composite formula is to be mentally repeated clearly and attentively thrice while the breath is retained within. During the retention of the breath the nostrils are closed with the thumb and the little and the ring fingers. The seven vyahrtis denote the seven worlds created by Brahmā by uttering them in the beginning and the first three of them are called Mahāvyāhṛtis. Pranava is added to each of them to point out that each vyāhṛti independently also stands for the Supreme. After the seven vyāhrtis the gāyatrīmantra follows them headed by another pranava, which again implies that the Supreme alone is denoted by the gāyatrīmantra. This is succeeded by gāyatrīsiras bracketed by the pranavas in the beginning and the end. Gayatrī coming in the middle is the fundamental element and the rest are auxiliaries thereof. When a person performs the pranayama and concentrates his thought on this mantra, the latent spiritual tendencies in the depth of his being are awakened and he becomes fit for communion with the Supreme Reality and eventually he realises the spiritual goal.

The metre associated with the seven vyāhṛtis are gāyatrī, uṣṇik, anuṣṭubh, bṛhatī, paṅkti, triṣṭubh, and jagatī and their deities are Agni, Vāyu, Sūrya, Bṛhaspati, Varuṇa, Indra and Vis'vadevas respectively. Prajāpati is their Rṣi. Gāyatrīs'iras consisting of sixteen syllables is called so because it forms as if it were the head of the formula. Prajāpati is its Rṣi, anuṣṭubh is the metre and Brahmā, Agni and Vāyu are the deities. It has been mentioned on p. 44 that the gāyatrī is employed during the performance of japa, homa and dhyāna. Until one is purified by the practice of pranayama he is not ready for japa. Hence the importance of the formula given here for the practice of pranayama. The pranayama which is performed during the twilight devotions differs from the one advocated by Patanjali for the practice of yoga. In the former the retention period alone is measured by the formula given here. In the latter case breathing in, holding the breath within and breathing out are appropriately measured. There is a considerable literature explaining the meaning of gāyatrī towards which all the great ācāryas have made their contribution. The word tat qualifying savity makes it clear that the visible prime luminary of the heavens is only a representation of the Godhead who is referred to here as immanent in all creatures and also transcendent. He is savitr because He is the cause of the universe and He animates and impells all that exists. He is deva because He is self-luminous, and all other light, whether intellectual or physical, is a loan from Him. The devotee meditates upon His bharga, light, for the attainment of all the fourfold values of life. The term bharga is derived from the root bhrsj meaning to roast or to burn. It, therefore, implies not only the radiant light but also the heat which destroys the root of ignorance and misery which bars one from the attainment of the Supreme. Hence this Divine Light is eagerly sought after by all who seek release from the round of birth and death, The significance of the third line of the gayatri is this: According to the Vedas, thought and activity make up human destiny. A man's mental activities elevate him if and when they are under the influence of divine operation. Hence in this line the devotee's longing is expressed that the Supreme should guide his mind towards the performance of religious duty, selfless devotion to God and the highest illumination. Two ancient authorities have paraphrased the ideas contained in the gayatrī by the following verses:—

यो देव: सवितास्माकं धियो धर्मादिगोचराः । प्रेरयेत्तस्य यद् भर्गस्तद्वरेण्यमुणस्महे ॥ १॥ यद्रह्म नित्यं हृदि सन्निविष्टं मां प्रेरयत्तिष्ठति नः सुबुद्धीः । भर्गस्तदाख्यं भजनीयमेतत् ध्यायाम नित्यं रविमण्डलस्यम् ॥ २॥

For the explanation of gāyatrīs'iras see note on Section XV, stanza 2. The shorter version gives two alternative formulas for prāṇāyama. (1) ओं भूभुंव: सुवर्महर्जनस्तप: सत्यं तद्वह्म तदाप आपो ज्योती रसोऽमृतं ब्रह्म भूभुंव: सुवरोम् ॥ (2) ओं तद्वह्म । ओं तदात्मा । ओं तत्सत्यम् । ओं तत्सर्वम् । ओं तत्परोर्नम: ॥ The first one differs from the gāyatrīs'iras only by the prefixing of praṇava and vyāhṛtis and by substituting Sāvitrī for tat brahma. The second one will be explained later in the longer version.]

षट्त्रिंशोऽनुवाकः SECTION THIRTY-SIX उत्तमें शिखंरे देवि [जाते] मूम्यां पर्वतमूर्धीन । ब्राह्मणैभ्योऽभ्यं ज्ञाता गुच्छ देवि युयासुंखम् ॥ १॥ हे देवि गायत्रि, त्यदुपासकेभ्यः ब्राह्मणेभ्यः अनुज्ञानं अभिव्याप्य अथवा तैः अनुज्ञाता सती पुनरिप तेषां समीपमागन्तुं प्रतीक्षमाणा यथा-सुखं यत्र गतायाः भवत्याः सुखं भवति हे देवि, तत्र उत्तमे पुण्यतमे शिखरे महामेरी भूमी अन्यत्र पर्वतमूर्धनि उच्छृतप्रदेशे वा गच्छ, गत्वा तत्र तिष्ठ ॥

1. O Goddess, Thou mayest go and remain at Thy pleasure on the highest and holiest peak on the earth, or in any high place until the brāhmaṇas remember Thee again.

[This stanza and the succeeding one are repeated at the close of twilight devotions for the dismissal of Gāyatrī. The longer version reads jāte in the place of devi. According to Sāyaṇa the abode of Gāyatrī from where she is summoned is on the highest peak of the mountain called Meru on the earth. Whereas Bhaṭṭabhāskara appears to understand the various epithets in the first line as places where Gāyatrī is at liberty to be until She is summoned further.]

स्तुतो मया वरदा वैद्माता प्रचोदयन्ती पवनै द्विजाता । आयुः पृथिव्यां द्रविणं ब्रंह्मवर्चसं मह्यं दत्वा प्रजातुं ब्रंह्मलोकम् ॥ मया स्तुता वरदा वाञ्छितार्थदात्री पवने अर्थात् मास्त इव प्रचोद-यन्ती अन्तर्यामिरूपेण प्राणिनां प्रेरियत्री द्विजाता सूर्यमण्डलब्रह्मलोकयोः प्रादुर्भूता वेदमाता चतुर्णां वेदानां जननी मह्यं पृथिव्यां विद्यमानाय आयुः दीर्घजीवनं द्रविणं ब्रह्मवर्चसं च दत्वा प्रजातुं अर्थात् प्रकर्षेण जातं ब्रह्मलोकं गच्छतु ॥

मया by me स्तुता magnified व्रदा boon-conferring पवने (पवन इव) like the wind प्रचोदयन्ती impelling द्विजाता born from two sources वेदमाता Mother of the Vedas महाम् to me पृथिव्याम् on the earth आयु: long life द्रविणम् wealth ब्रह्मवर्चसम् power of Vedic learning दला having given प्रजातम् (प्रजातम्) excellently produced ब्रह्मलोकम् world of Brahman (गच्छतु may depart).

2. May the boon-conferring Mother of the Vedas, who has been magnified by me, who impells the created beings like wind and who has two places of birth, depart to the excellently produced world of Brahman having conferred on me, here on the earth, long life, wealth and power of Vedic learning.

[Sāyaṇa and Bhaṭṭabhāskara have not noticed this verse here. It is believed that the residence of Gāyatrī is both Brahmaloka and the orb of the sun as suggested by the word dvijātā. The passage, however, directly indicates Brahmaloka as the place to which Gāyatrīdevī returns. The words pavane and prajātum appear to be solecistic and offer difficulty of construction which is overcome by substituting a suitable sense under the sanction of Vedic license. The Atharvaveda XIX. 71. 1 gives the uncorrupt form of the mantra as follows:

स्तुता मया वर्दा वेदमाता प्रचोदयन्तां पावमानी द्विजानीम् । आयुः प्राणं प्रजां पृशुं कीर्ति द्रविणं ब्रह्मवर्चुमं मह्यं दुत्वा ब्रनत ब्रह्मलोकम् ।

This is blemishless. Pavamāna is the Indwelling Divine Spirit. Gāyatrī extols His glory; further Gāyatrī is the Mother of the Vedas or the Vedas are represented by Her. The seer here prays for the fruits of the devotion properly performed for everyone including himself. 'May Gāyatrī, the Vedamātā, who glorifies the Supreme Reality, having been invoked by me during the worship grant me and all the twice-born, longevity, life, progeny, cattle, renown, wealth and splendour of spirituality. After giving these, may Gāyatrī go back to the Supreme Brahman from whom She arose.']

1. The imperishable Aditya who is the giver of lustre and the creator of the universe moves in the sky like his own rays. The essence of him in the form of sweet water flows in the shape of rivers. He is the Truth (Rest as XV. 2.)

[The present Section gives this mantra as a substitute for the upasana mentioned on pages 233 to 246. One may perform japa of it if he is incapable of perfoming the worship which has been described. The same formula appears in the shorter version, and it has been fully dealt with at Section XV, passage 2, to which place it naturally belongs. So here it is not discussed at length.]

1. May the Supreme reach me. May the Blissful reach me. May the Supreme alone that is blissful reach me. O Lord, being one among Thy creatures I am Thy child. Suppress the dreary dream of the empirical existence that I experience. For that I offer myself as an oblation into Thee, O Lord, and the vital and mental powers, Thou hast kept in me.

[This is the first of the notable group of mantras called Trisuparna. From the free rendering given above it is evident that the kernal of it is a prayer on the part of the spiritual aspirant to Paramatman for enlightenment and release from the round of birth and death, for the effecting of which he makes an oblation of his senses and energies—hitherto engrossed in worldly persuits—into the Supreme to whom they really belong. The Trisuparna is prescribed for japa to be undertaken by the seekers of the divine knowledge and who wish to expiate all known and unknown sins that stand in their way to illumination. In the Vedic literature the term suparna stands for the Sun, Fire, Prajāpati and other gods and in the Puranas the bird Garuda is called Suparna. Garuda is the King among birds and protector of amrta. These mantras guard the highest good of the Soul. So they are called Suparna. Pranava is also called Suparna, for it takes the upasaka to his divine goal. Since these passages help one to reach that goal they are here called Suparna. Bhattabhaskara understands the text slightly differently. He splits Brahmametu into Brahma and metu avoiding the awkward form Brahmam and explains metu as imparative third person singular of the root $m\bar{\imath}$ of the tenth conjugation. He gives a ruling that without justification in sense the addition of any element to a Vedic word is unacceptable; and so to consider Brahmam as the actual form and not Brahma is not legitimate according to him. Again abhi and so taken as two words above is considered as one word by him and therefore abhiso means—Somena ārādhayitā—one who worships with Soma. The word abhiso also implies abhitah sarvatah sotā īsitā—one who rules all around, the Lord. This implies that through the grace of the Lord the worshipper has achieved his union with the Supreme. Bhaṭṭa-bhāskara reads dussvapnahan duruṣṣahā (samjātaḥ), and explains the second word as an adjective meaning one who is not capable of being overpowered (because of divine knowledge). The word Soma is explained by him as Īs'vara, the Lord, who impells the universe and explains the word Umā in it as Paras'akti denoted by praṇava in part reversed—mā u.]

2. One may impart Trisuparna to a brāhmaṇa unsolicited. Those brāhmaṇas who recite Trisuparṇa indeed destroy even the sin of brāhminicide. They attain to the fruit of the performance of Soma sacrifice. They purify all those who sit in a row of a thousand (while at dinner) and attain union with praṇava i.e. the Deity of this mantra.

[This passage glorifies the Trisuparna mantra in eulogistic language. Like the word saptarsi each unit of the Trisuparna is also called by the same name. Knowledge is imparted to a disciple generally on request. But this mantra may be given to any brāhmaṇa whom one encounters without his asking for it. Even such grave sins like Brahmahatyā are expiated by its repetition and it will confer the fruit of the Somayāga. It is a custom in India to feed non-possessing brāhmaṇas who minister to the religious needs of the community and also the hungry and the destitute according to one's capacity on special occasions with a view to obtain religious merit. The scriptures which encourage this practice lay down also that the brahmanas entertained must be sinless and learned. Even if a single person who practises the japa of Trisuparna happens to be present on the holy occasion of religious feeding, it is said here, that the host or atithipati is exculpated from the sin of feeding the wrong persons. The purpose of this eulogy here is to draw attention to the greatness of Trisuparna which calls away man from the path of worldliness to that of divinity. The pranava ending the section points out to the fact that it is also indicative of the greatness of that syllable. Bhattabhāskara explains it by saying that the person mentioned here attains union with Brahman denoted by pranava. while Sayana states that pranava here implies that the deity of Trisuparna is the Paramatman denoted by pranava.

- 1. That Brahman is attained through the power of intelligence. That Bliss is attained through the power of intelligence. The Bliss which is indeed Brahman is attained through the power of intelligence.
- 2. O God, O Thou creator, vouchsafe to us today the prosperity consisting of progeny.

Turn away from us this bad dream (of the world). 3. O God, O Creator, turn away from me all the sins. Bring to me that which is beneficial.

4. To me, who is the devotee of the Supreme Truth let the wind blow sweetly. Let the rivers run sweetly. Let the herbs be to us sweet and beneficial. 5. Let there be sweetness day and night. Let the particles of the earth be sweetness-bearing. Let heaven, our father, be sweet to us. 6. Let the fruitbearing trees be sweet to us. Let the sun be sweet and beneficial to us. Let the cows be sweetness-bearing to us.

[This hexad gives the second Trisuparna—a prayer for power of intelligence and for the environment conducive to the attainment of supreme knowledge and realisation of the Divine Truth. The stanzas 2 and 3 are found in the Rgveda at V. 82. 4-5 and stanzas 6 to 8 ibid. I. 9. 6-8 respectively. They are to be explained here according to the prakarana or context. Hence the meaning given above follows. The term medhā implies power of intelligence in general and particularly the capacity to retain and recall the words and their meaning taught by the preceptor. In the Vedas medhā is considered as a deity and hymns are sung in her praise, of which the passages extracted just below give some good examples. Stanzas 1-2 are from the Vājasaneyīsam hitā (XXXII. 14-15) and the next 5 from the Atharvaveda (VI. 108. 1-5):—

यां मेघा देवगुणाः पितर्रश्चोपासंते । तया माम्य मेघयाप्ते मेघाविनं क्रुक्त स्वाहां ॥ १ ॥ मेघां मे वर्रणो ददातु मेघामृप्तिः प्रजापितः । मेघामिन्द्रंश्च वायुश्चं मेघां घाता देदातु मे स्वाहां ॥ २ ॥ तवं नो मेघे प्रथमा गोमिरश्वेमिरा गीह । तवं सूर्यस्य रिश्मिम्तवं नो अप्ति यिक्तयां ॥ ३ ॥ मेघामृहं प्रथमां ब्रह्मण्वतीं ब्रह्मजूतामृषिष्टुताम् । प्रतिनां ब्रह्मजारिभिद्वान्तामवेसे हुवे ॥ ४ ॥ यां मेघामृभवों विदुर्यो मेघामस्तरा विदुः । ऋषयो मद्रां मेघां यां विदुर्तां मय्यावेशयामित ॥९॥ याम्ष्यो भूतकृतों मेघां मेघां विनों विदुः । तया माम्य मेघयां मेघाविनं कृणु ॥ ६ ॥ मेघां मायं मेघां प्रातमेवां मुध्यन्दिनं परिं। मेवां सूर्यस्य रिश्मिम्वंच्सावेशयामहे ॥७॥

Although the Supreme Truth is described as ineffable and beyond thought and expression, yet the path to Its knowledge lies through the scriptures learned from the preceptor by the power of intelligence. The importance of the scripture and the line of teachers and their disciples who carry forward the torch of knowledge in suitable environments, is therefore, recognised here (pages 254—257) with details as it has been done at Taittirīyopanişad 1. 4. The worshippers pray:—Give us many sons and disciples who will propagate this knowledge. Dispel the dream of this illusory world through right knowledge. Suppress sins and encourage virtue. We are seekers of Truth and let Nature be benign to us. Let us be surrounded by sweetness—chiefly consisting of salubrious wind and water. May herbs and cows give us healthful yield in proper time. May day and night cause for us only joy and happiness. May every particle of the earth and the sky, paternal to all, favour us with suitable conditions of climate and weather. May the sun shine favourably over us and the trees give us sustenance through edible fruits.—Only in such a happy surrounding proper cultivation of knowledge and realisation of the Truth become effective and fruitful. According to Bhattabhaskara: madhu means Self-knowledge and he derives it from mananiya or rasaniya; the word rtauate means 'to the institutor of the sacrifice' and parthivam rajah means the earth. The Madhumantras occur also in the Taittirīyasamhitā IV. 2. 9. There Sayana interprets them to suit the Sacrificial context.

य इमं त्रिसुंपर्णमयाचितं ब्राह्मणायं द्द्यात् । भ्रूणहृत्यां वा एते भ्रीन्त । ये ब्रीह्मणास्त्रिसुंपर्ण पठंनित । ते सोमं प्राप्तुंवन्ति । आ सहस्रात्पुङ्क्ति पुनेन्ति । ओम् ॥ ७ ॥

[The declaration of the fruit of Trisuparna given above is a copy of the same given at the close of the previous Section with only the substitution of bhrānahatyā in the place of brahmahatyā and the addition of ya imam at the head. So the apparatus of interpretation is not repeated here as well as in the coming Section. The word bhrānahatyā means feticide, or hurting a brāhmaṇa well versed in the Vedas and in their auxiliaries.]

[This is the third Trisuparna made up of three units. The first unit is a Yajus similar to the one appearing as the first line of Section Thirty-nine, medhavā substituting the word medhavā. The term medhavā is a disguised form of medhavat i.e. possessing or connected with medha or sacrifice. The idea behind the expression is that the Supreme Brahman is attained only by a person in whom the desire for Self-knowledge is generated by the proper performance of prescribed duties and sacrifices. Thus Brahman is connected with medha (sacrifice) in so far as sacrifices and other similar activities help one from a distance for the realisation of Brahman by creating purity of mind and desire for knowledge. It may be noted that the first Tisuparna prescribes a meditation in the shape of offering oneself into the Supreme as a means of attaining Him. The second one stresses the need of knowledge engendered through intelligence developed by scripture, preceptor, and proper environment, and the third one here emphasises karma or Vedic sacrifice as an aid to the attainment of the Supreme. Since the text is exactly similar to the previous one but for the word medhavā just explained, the apparatus of interpretation is omitted. The second unit is a repetition of Section 12, stanza 4, and the third unit is the repetition of Section 12, stanza 6. For the explanation of these two passages vide passim.]

4. I pile fuel in the consecrated fire with a view to acquire the Vedas necessary for Thy worship, meditating on Thee in the form of Rgveda. The unbroken currents of clarified butter offered into the kindled fire—rendered sacred by cordial and hearty thoughts—flow like rivers, the water of which is potable for Gods. By this I kindle the splendour of the holy fire.

[This and the immediatly succeeding passage are not found in the shorter version and so the explanatory rendering given here is based upon the commentary ascribed to the untraced author in the Anandas rama edition. In a footnote supplied by the editor of that publication, it is remarked that two manuscripts used for determining the text contain ree in the place of ruce and that ruce is only a

Vedic disguise of rce. But at Taittirīyasamhitā IV. 2. 9, the source of it, the form actually found is ruce.]

5. In that Ahavanīya Fire, amidst those currents of clarified butter offered as oblation, abides the profusely rich and splendid Supreme Being who is magnified in the Trisuparna, who dwells in the nest of the bodies of created beings, who confers bliss on creatures according to their merit, and who shares with gods sweet ambrosia in the form of oblations offered by worshippers in Fire. In His proximity are seated the seven sages who destroy sins by mere remembrance and who continuously pour oblations in the form of a current of nectar keeping in mind the various gods for whom they are meant.

[The two textual passages found on pages 261 and 263 are quoted from Taittirīyasamhitā IV. 2. 9, where Sayana interprets them in a different way. Following the anonymous commentary in the Anandās'rama edition I have given the meaning here. The word vetasah in the text is taken as a transformation of the word vedas meaning wealth. The passage gives a celestial picture of the fundamental significance of all sacrifices in the consecrated fire. Physically a burnt offering or sacrifice consists in the oblation of streams of clarified butter into the consecrated fire according to prescribed rules. Here it is stated that the Supreme One is present in the centre of the Ahavanīya Fire receiving the offerings and sharing them with the other Gods. In the brāhmaņas we see statements identifying Yajña with Viṣṇu who is also called Yajñapuruṣa. All the Yajñas are meant to worship the Supreme and the various Gods worshipped in them are but aspects or attributes of the Supreme Being. The seven sages represent the foremost of worshippers who are constantly engaged in communing with the Supreme by their spiritual activities and who are, therefore, capable of purifying others.]

[This declaration of the glory of the third Trisuparna differs from the one on page 259 only in idam for $im\bar{a}m$ and the phrase $v\bar{v}rahaty\bar{a}$ which means slaying a worthy brahmana or an anointed king.]

1. May the all-penetrating goddess of intellect who is beneficial, favourably disposed to, and delighting in, us visit us. O goddess, may we who were delighting in profitless speech before thy visit, now as the result of thy delight in us, become enlightened and also capable of expressing the Supreme Truth along with our heroic sons and disciples.

[This stanza and the next one in tristubh metre glorify the deity presiding over the power of intelligence or intellect. The Rgveda-khila IV. 8. 1-9 are in praise of the deity Medhā and also Atharvaveda VI. 108. 1-5 quoted on page 258. In the latter context Medhā is praised as the rays of the sun spreading everywhere. Sages like Vasiṣṭha have praised this deity and stressed the necessity of propitiating her. According to the Rgvidhāna IV. 96-97 the baby is suckled or fed with pap repeating the sraddhā and medhā mantras so that he may have these qualities when he grows up to an adult.

The power of intelligence which can penetrate all objects of knowledge like the rays of the sun must come to the aid of the Rsi for the acquisition, preservation and instruction of the Vedas as well as the proper performance of the acts of worship taught therein. In the Taittirīyopanişad I. 4. 1-2 there is the prayer for intelligence coupled with prosperity; for. the latter without the former is dangerous and the former without the latter is often ineffective. in this context that particular quality of intelligence is solicited which engenders the union of the finite self with the Infinite Self. Only those persons who are blessed with the right intelligence by which they can wean themselves from the pleasure of useless and harmful talk achieve inner illumination. They alone devote their faculty of speech for receiving and communicating knowledge of the Supreme. Their children and their disciples also become heroic and noble. The word vidatha is accepted in the sense of knowledge by Bhattabhaskara and in the sense of worship by Sāyaṇa. The longer version has the reading nudamānā in the place of juṣamānā which is evidently an old emendation made in order to make the sense agree with duruktān-duruktān nudamānā (pushing aside all profitless talk)—and to avoid duplication of jusamāna.]

त्वया जुष्टं ऋषिभैवति देवि त्वया ब्रह्मागुतश्रीरुत त्वया । त्वया जुष्टंश्चित्रं विनदते वसु सा नो जुषस्व द्रिविणेन मेधे ॥ २ ॥ हे देवि त्वया जुष्ट: अनुग्रहीत: पुरुष: ऋषि: द्रष्टा अथवा मन्त्रद्रष्टा भवति । त्वया जुष्ट: पुरुष: ब्रह्मा ब्राह्मण: भवति अथवा ब्रह्मत्वं लभते । उत अपि च त्वया जुष्ट: आगतश्री: प्राप्तसंपत् भवति, चित्रं विविधं वष्ठ धनं लभते च । हे मेघे ताहशी त्वं द्रविणेन अस्मभ्यं देवेन प्रशस्तेन धनेन सह न: अस्मान् जुषस्व अनुग्रहाण ॥

2. O goddess of intellect, favoured by thee, one becomes a seer; one becomes a brāhmaṇa or a knower of Brahman. Favoured by thee one becomes also possessed of riches. Favoured by thee one obtains manifold wealth. Being such, O goddess of intellect, delight in us and confer on us wealth.

[The reading dravino na in the place of āravinena has no merit as it would give sense only by taking the word dravina arbitrarily to stand for one who possesses dravina. Brahma in the second pada may mean a brahmana, Hiranyagarbha or the Supreme.]

2. Hail! May that intelligence favour me—that which is possessed by Apsaras (celestial women) that which is the mental power in Gandharvas (celestial minstrels) that intelligence expressed as the divine Vedic lore and that intelligence which spreads like fragrance.

[These two stanzas form another prayer for the grant of intelligence. They are found in the Rgveda-khila IV. 8. 2-3 in the following form: मेधां मे वरणो राजा मेधां देवी सरस्वती। मेधां मे अश्विनो देवावाधत्तां पुष्करस्रजा॥ या मेधाप्सरस्य गन्धवेषु च यन्मन:। देवी या मानुषी मेधा सा मामाविश्वतादिह॥ The word Sarasvatī in the second verse is substituted by manuṣyajā in the shorter version which implies intelligence of men. Svāhā ending the stanza in the longer version is omitted in the shorter version. The reading daivīm in the longer version in the place of daivī is confusing.]

This again is another prayer for intelligence. The reading juṣantām in the longer version replacing juṣatām is perhaps an ancient error perpetuated by tradition-bound scribes.]

1. Kindling the consecrated fire with chips of wood (in order to offer oblations during worship) may I attain both the worlds. Having attained the prosperity of this world and the next I shall cross over death.

[In the Taittirīyabrāhmaņa Sāyaṇa interprets salka as small pieces of wood. This mantra occurs at Taittirīyabrāhmana 1. 2. 1. 5 and Āpastambasrautasūtra 5. 8. 4. It contains a prayer for Immortality after the enjoyment of this world and the next procured through the performance of Vedic rites in the fire. This prayer represents the vows taken by the Yajamāna. Immediately preceding this mantra the institutor of the sacrifice resolves: अन्तात् सत्यमुपेमि, मानुपाहैवमुपेमि, देवीं वाचं यच्छामि—From falsity I rise to truth, from human conduct I enter divine conduct; I restrict my speech to divine purpose. Falsity here is dissenting from the fire worship and restriction of speech implies speaking Sanskrit only.]

1. O Rudra, injure not our elders, our children, our adults capable of procreation, the foetus we have laid in the mother's womb and our father and mother. Do not hurt our dear selves.

[This mantra and the next one are Rgveda 1. 14.7 and 8 respectively. They contain a vivid and touching prayer addressed by disconsolate men to Rudra who rules over destruction in its various aspects. Nothing strikes greater terror into the hearts of men than the deprivation by Death of their own kith and kin and bringing to the end their own existence by the cold hands of Death. The negative particle mā is repeated again and again; so also the possessive pronoun naḥ connected with every noun denoting objects and persons of interest. The repetition of these makes the passage a vivid record of deep feeling. This mantra occurs in the Atharvaveda also, where mahāntam is replaced by vahantam meaning one who is capable of conveying a burden, a carrier. At Vājasaneyisamhitā XVI. 15 Uvaṭa points out that the mention of father apart from elders in general is indicative of greater respect due to him.]

1. O Rudra do not hurt us in respect of our children, our grandchildren, other men belonging to us, our cattle and our horses. Do not hurt in anger our heroes. We shall serve thee with oblations and reverence.

[The thoughts contained in this stanza are a continuation of those in the previous one. Sāyaṇa in the Rgvedabhāṣya interprets toka as son, tanaya as grandson and āyus as other men connected with the person who addresses this prayer. The Vājasaneyisamhitā XVI. 16 has the same stanza, but reads in the place of namasā vidhema te the variant sadam id tvā havāmahe (i.e. Finding no other help we always call upon thee for propitiation).]

1. O Prajāpati, all that is born is not different from Thee. Thou art before them and after also (when they are reabsorbed into Thee). The created beings cannot surpass Thee. With whatever desire we offer oblations to Thee may that be fulfilled. May we become lords of riches.

[This is the last stanza of the famous Hiranyagar-bhasūkta (Rgveda X. 122. 10) and it appears also at Taittirīyasamhitā III. 2. 5 and Taittirīyabrāhmana II. 8. 1. 6. Statements such as प्रजापतिची इदमेक अग्र आसीत् नान्यत् किञ्चित् and प्रजापति: सिवता भूत्वा लोकानमुजत् in other parts of the Taittirīyasamhitā and Taittirīyabrāhmana make the idea given here sufficiently clear. The transcendence and immanence of the Supreme are emphasised in the first hemistich. The second hemistich expresses the wish of the worshipper for the fulfilment of his desires and attainment of wealth through divine favour. It is customary to employ this verse for recital during the ceremonial feeding of brāhmaṇas with specially prepared food, and similar other functions.]

सुगन्धिम् fragrant पुष्टिवर्धनम् increasingly nourishing त्रयंक्कम् the three-eyed Lord यजामहे we worship. वन्ध-नात् from the stalk उर्वाह्कम् cucumber इव like मृत्योः from death मुक्षीय may we slip off, get freedom. अमृतात् from immortality मा not (मुक्षीय may we be separated).

1. We worship the three-eyed Lord who is fragrant and who increasingly nourishes the devotees. Worshipping Him may we easily slip off from death just as the ripe cucumber easily separates itself from the binding stalk. May we be never separated from Immortality.

[This is a cherished mantra prescribed for japa by all seekers after the purusartha-s (four ends of life), and chiefly by those who aspire after liberation from the round of birth and death. The Supreme is here meditated upon as the giver and increaser of wellbeing and progress in physical and spiritual excellences. The adjective sugandhi qualifying God implies that divine grace becomes perceptible, from a distance like fragrance, to persons who are given to piety and adoration of God. The example of cucumber gives us the concrete impression how a spiritually and physically mature person naturally and easily gets freedom from the bondages of existence in the world either at the dawn of knowledge or at the close of a well-spent life. This mantra is originally found at Vājasaneyisamhitā III. 6. In commenting on this passage Mahīdhara states that celestial fragrance of the Lord is suggestive of all His Divine excellences. Death implies also mundane existence. In the Samhitā context this mantra is prescribed for repetition by the Yajamana who circumambulates the Ahavanīya Fire after piling it. After him, his virgin relatives also do the same; but they repeat the mantra replacing पुष्टिवर्धनम् by पतिदेवनम्—meaning giver of a proper husband. The meaning of the stanza with this change will be: Like the cucumber may we be separated from parents and brothers at marriage and never separated from the husband.]

1. O Death, those thousand and ten thousand snares which thou hast laid for slaying man, all of them we remove by the power of our deeds of worship.

[The word death is used in different connected senses. Its most concrete shape is the termination of physical existence marked by stoppage of breath, consciousness and bodily functions. The force that brings about this is personified as Death. The duration of life on this earth is determined by the merits and demerits accruing from a man's deeds. This is the view of the scriptures. The god of Death adjudges each person according to his deserts and limits the duration of his life on the earth. Evil thoughts and deeds, errors of passion and temperament, sickness and suffering—all these are snares laid by Death to entrap unwary man. Further, ignorance, carelessness, remissness, insatiable craving and harmful propensities are also listed among the army of Death. S'iva, the auspicious God, is described as the greatest vogin; for, he has overcome the army of Death. Therefore He, the Auspicious Lord, is called Antakāntaka. For the devotees of God. the way to escape from the meshes of Death, said above, lies in the power of worshipping Him-the performance of prescribed duties to God properly and in the right spirit. This is perhaps what is implied by the phrase yajñasya māyayā or by the power of worship.]

Thou art the remover of the offences committed by others connected with us. Hail! Thou art the remover of the offences committed by our relatives. Hail! Thou art the remover of the offences committed during day and night. Hail! Thou art the remover of the offences committed in the state of dream and waking. Hail! Thou art the remover of the offences we have committed in the state of deep sleep and waking. Hail! Thou art the remover of the offences committed consciously and unconsciously. Hail! Thou art the remover of the offences committed by contact with those who are sinners. Hail!

Like the formulas given in Sections 3, 4, 5 and 47 these eleven formulas ending with svāhā are also employed for offering oblations into the consecrated fire meditating upon the Supreme Being in order to remove by means of sacrifice all the sins including those enumerated here. Broadly speaking a human being is liable to offend others and himself in various relations-whether he be conscious of it or not, or whether he is engaged in usual waking activities, or dreaming or sleeping. Flaws in the acts of worship done towards gods and departed ancestors constitute sin against them. One may sin against oneself by voluntarily indulging in unworthy thoughts and deeds. Each person is not only responsible for his own sins of omission and commission, but also for the sins of other persons who belong to him, or with whom he has relationship through blood, or over whose actions he can have legitimate control. He may further offend his own neighbours by harsh words and anti-social deeds. Even the company of a sinner is a source of sin. All these are enumerated here to kindle a person's moral consciousness and to goad him towards purity and perfection. Waking state has been mentioned twice by including it in two formulas with a view to indicate that in the waking condition there is possibility of committing more sins and so one should be specially on one's guard about it. The formulas 1, 2, 3, 4, 10 and 11 are from the Vājasaneyisamhitā VIII. 13.]

1. O Gods, O Vasus, that serious godoffending sin which we have committed by our tongues, by our understanding, and by our actions, place that in those who come near and act in an evil way towards us. Hail! [This mantra originating in Rgveda X. 37. 12 is also referred to at Asvalāyanasrautasūtra VI. 12. 3. The rendering made here is based on the commentary of Sāyaṇa on the Rgveda passage mentioned. Ducchunā is also a mischief-making demon. Often devotees forget that the various gods are but aspects or attributes of the one God and try to compare their relative greatness. In this respect the tongue sins against gods. So Vāyu, the moving god, is entreated to take away the sin thus committed. This is how the passage is interpreted by the anonymous commentator who takes arāvā yo as arā vāyo. The padapāṭha shows splitting thus is wrong.]

नमः नमः salutations (to the gods). कामः Desire अकार्षीत् did. कामः Desire अकार्षीत् did. कामः Desire करोति is doing; अहम् I न not करोमि do. काम: Desire कर्ता agent; न not अहम् I कर्ता agent. काम: Desire कार्यिता the causer of the action; न not अहम् I कार्यिता causer of the action. काम O Desire, ते to thee कामाय who is attractive in form एष: this (oblation). स्वाहा hail.

1. Salutations to the gods. Desire performed the act. Desire did the act. Desire is doing the act, not I. Desire is the agent, not I. Desire causes the doer to act, not I. O Desire, fascinating in form, let this oblation be offered to thee. Hail!

Desire is personified as a deity in the Vedas. The Nāsadīyasūkta announces that Kāma or God's Will in the form of desire to create the world existed at a time when this universe did not come into being. The Manusmrti II. 4 points out that whatever activity is found in a creature, all that is the movement of desire—यद्यद्धि कुरुते जन्तु: तत्तत् कामस्य चेष्टितम् । In the Bhagavadgītā chapter XIII it is pointed out that icchā (desire), pleasure, pain and the rest are the attributes of the ksetra (psycho-physical being) and that the ksetrajña (Spirit or Self) is eternally pure, simple and divine. The traditional codes declare that the five universal elements, the resident deities and one's own heart witness the thoughts and actions of a man even though they are concealed from his neighbour. A worshipper is represented here as offering repeated salutations to the gods who witness the inside of all men and arraign them to the bar of divine justice. He pleads not guilty and deposes that he, the Self in man, did not do any act, is not doing anything, is not an agent, or an abettor: desire, charming to all in appearance, is the agent that did acts and is doing them. Finally in order to propitiate the deity of Desire, so that the worshipper may be left in his pure nature, as a result of the withdrawal of all harmful desires, an oblation is offered into the consecrated fire. The efficiency of a religion depends upon the total and undistracted service which a Society constituted for its ministry is capable of rendering. Priests and monks are therefore left free to serve the community without entering the arena of economic competition. They subsist on voluntary subscriptions and serve God and man by gaining and disseminating knowledge. The hereditary priesthood and the monastic orders were therefore permitted to receive gifts. Vedas contain descriptions of Data (giver of gifts) and Pratigrahītā (acceptor of gifts). A person of outstanding moral and spiritual merits alone can accept free gifts without damage to his spiritual vitality. Even such, according to Manu IV. 186, must not covet, for covetousness destroys spiritual brilliance. Pratigraha is, therefore, a sin and its baneful effect on a person's moral conscience is mitigated only by disclaiming all self-interest. Taittirīyabrāhmana. II. 2. 5 it is stated that Kāma (God's prompting) is at the base of all cosmic activities. It is responsible for the giving and acceptance of gifts. The Pure Self is not affected by that. God, it is that gives and God it is who receives. The passage is significant: क इदं कस्मा अदादित्याह । प्रजापतिर्वे क:। सः प्रजापतये ददाति । कामः कामायेत्याह । कामेन हि ददाति । कामेन प्रतिग्रह्णाति । कामो दाता कामः प्रतिग्रह्णीते । कामो हि दाता । कामः प्रतिग्रह्णीता । कामः समुद्रमाविशेत्याह । समुद्र इव हि कामः । नेव हि कामस्यान्तोऽस्ति । न समुद्रस्य । It is concluded that a person who accepts dakṣiṇā with this attitude, a true knower, is not hurt by the act of acceptance of gifts. In interpreting the third stanza of Nāsadīyasūkta in Taittirīyabrāhmaņa II. 4. 1, Sāyaṇa states that Kāma in this context means īsvarakāma.]

मन्युरकार्षीन्नमो नमः। मन्युरकार्षीन्मन्युः करोति नाहं करोमि मन्युः कर्ता नाहं कर्ता मन्युः कार्यिता नाहं कार्यिता एष ते मन्यो मन्येवे स्वाहा ॥ १ ॥

Salutations to the gods. Anger performed the act. Anger did the act. Anger is doing the act; not I. Anger is the agent; not I. Anger causes the doer to act; not I. O Anger, let this oblation be offered to thee. Hail!

[In many contexts in the Vedas the term Manyu is appropriately rendered by modern scholars as the longing fervour. According to Sāyana, Manyu is rage towards the enemy, internal or external. In Taittirīyabrāhmana II. 4. 1 Manyu is eulogised as Bhaga and Varuna and also supplicated not to damage Tapas by intrusion. Since the term occurs here in connection with Kāma, it is translated as anger personified; for obstructed desire is the source of anger. All those cravings, instincts, propensities, inclinations, desires and needs that express themselves continually in the thoughts and behaviour of men are referred to by the word Kāma; and so obstruction of Kāma in any form evokes responses in the shape of rage or anger which supply the motive force for a wider area of thought and activity covered by human behaviour. Thus anger or dvesa is another trait of the physical and psychological equipment of man from which his true Self stands aloof. Penitent man weeps for his sins and ascribes to desire and anger the sins that are committed by him. See also Bhagavadgītā II. 62-68 and III. 37-43 for further elucidation of this matter. The word-by-word meaning is omitted in this and other Sections below for reasons cited on page 117.1

1. O Supreme Being, I offer oblations of tasty tila (Sesamum indicum) seeds mixed with some flour, into the consecrated fire; may my mind delight in the attributes of the Supreme. Hail! 2. O God, through Thy grace, may I obtain cattle, gold, wealth, food and drink, and all desired objects and beauty and prosperity; for that this oblation be offered to Thee. Hail! 3. May God grant me royal prosperity, the bliss of freedom, health, noble repute, capacity to pay off the debts to gods, departed souls anp sages, the qualities of an ideal brāhmaṇa, many sons, faith, intelligence and grandsons. May this oblation be offered for that. Hail!

The sequel of this Upanisad, according to tradition, deals with the principal and auxiliary ceremonies connected with the last order of Vedic life known as Sannyāsa. A candidate competent for Sannyāsa has to perform various subsidiary rites before he is rendered fit to perform the final act. These preliminary acts are meant for effacing all the past sins. By the performance of appropriate rituals beginning with Bhūtasamskāra and ending in Ajvasamskāra laid down in the Grhyasūtras one's religious fitness is enhanced. This section contains three formulas for offering three oblations in the fire; the substance for the offering is Sesamum seeds. The word Gandhara is declared by the commentator to be an epithet of the Supreme. The seeds selected for offering are sarasa (with flavour) and sapista (mixed with some variety of flour). The last two formulas contain a prayer for other items such as, wealth consisting of cattle, food and drink, and other coveted objects; as also faith, purity and other mental virtues. A person who has enjoyed the possessions of this world and performed the religious duties that can be discharged only with the help of worldly possessions is made fit for Sannvasa through dispassion for the fruits of this world and the next. This is implied by the oblations described here in connection with the Sannyasa rites.

2. O Lord, through Thy grace, may these black Sesamum seeds, white Sesamum seeds, healthful Sesamum seeds and own Sesamum seeds cleanse whatever sin there is connected with me or whatever wrong there is in me. For that I offer oblations. Hail!

[The substance of offering into the consecrated fire here again is quantities of Sesamum seeds which are sometimes black and sometimes white. They are called saumya (healthful) because good variety of these seeds do not cause any illness. They are called vasānuga (owned by one at pleasure) because they are acquired by purchase giving the price in cash from one's own lawful earnings and not got by arbitrary seizure or theft. Through the grace of the Supreme, even lifeless grains can purify a man.]

चोर्म्यात्रं नैवश्चाद्धं ब्रह्महा गुरुत्वल्पगः । गोस्तेयः सुरापानं भ्रूणहत्या तिला शान्तिः शमयन्तु स्वाहा॥२॥ चोरात् प्राप्तस्य अन्नस्य भोजनं एकोद्दिष्टादिनवश्राद्धान्नभोजनं ब्रह्म-हत्या गुरुतल्पगमनं गोस्तेयं सुरापानं भ्रूणहत्या एवमादोनि पापानि तिला: शमयन्तु । मम शान्ति प्रयच्छन्तु । स्वाहा ॥

2. May the Sesamum seeds offered remove my sins, such as partaking of the food supplied by theft, dining at a place where food is served in connection with the funeral rites of a single recently departed soul, slaying of a brāhmaṇa, outraging the preceptor's honour, cattle-lifting, drink and slaying a hero or a foetus. May I have peace. Hail!

[The aim of the worshipper here is to remove all the sins connected with him by a propitiatory act. Since these are formulas made use of by different worshippers at different places and times, it is impossible to suppose that each one confesses that he has committed all the sins names of which are catalogued here. They are mentioned to indicate that what is aimed at is complete taintlessness—elimination and expiation of the sins mentioned here in whomsoever they may exist. Each man is responsible not only for his own flaws and defects but also for those of the whole community of which he is an individual. In fact no individual can reach a moral level in all respects far higher than that of the group to which he belongs.]

श्रीश्च लक्ष्मीश्च पृष्टीश्च कीर्ति चानृण्यताम् । ब्रह्मण्यं बंहुपुत्रताम् । श्रद्धामेधे प्रज्ञा तु जातवेदः संदर्ततु स्वाहा ॥ ३ ॥ [For translation etc. of this passage see Section 63 formula 3 which contains the same passage with little alteration. $Praj\bar{a}$ in that passage is here replaced by $praj\bar{n}\bar{a}$ tu. The resemblance being so close and the sense and the purpose of the passage being the same it is not separately dealt with here. The prayer here is addressed to $J\bar{a}tavedas$, the all-knowing Supreme invoked in fire. Section 44 to 64 found in the longer version are not in the shorter version accepted by Bhaṭṭabhāskara and Sāyaṇa.]

4. By this oblation may the limbs and the parts of my body comprised by the head, hands, feet, sides, back, thighs, belly, shanks, the generative organ, the middle part of the body (or the male and female generative organs) and the anus become purified. I pray that I become the Supreme Light bereft of all obstructing sins and their cause, the passions in me. For this end may this oblation be offered into the consecrated fire. Hail!

5. O thou Divine Person, who is dark blue and brown and who is red in eyes make haste to favour me. Grant me more and more purity. Be a grantor of knowledge and purity to me through the medium of my preceptor. May my thoughts become purified. I pray that I become the Supreme Light bereft of all obstructing sins and their cause, the passions in me. For this end may this oblation be offered into the consecrated fire. Hail!

[The five formulas given above are employed for recitation at the time of offering oblations of clarified butter into the properly consecrated fire by a person who is about to embrace the vows of Sannyāsa. They are believed to have the efficacy of bringing about spiritual purity, or the regeneration of the internal and the external man. They are used in connection with some other rites also meant to signalise a person's initiation into a new way of life. The concluding part of all these mantras form a uniform pattern expressing the longing on the part of the aspirant to become divine—by freeing himself from all blemishes of body and mind. The word retas in the second formula, meaning sperm, implies here the procreative power in man. Two words tvak and carman in the third formula are not overlapping because they denote outer and inner skin. The Word $sn\bar{a}yu$ may denote tendon, muscle or sinew. In the fourth formula sisna and upastha appear side by The former word denotes the male organ of generation and the latter that of the female. This may imply that the pronouncer of the formula may belong to one or the other sex. The second word may also imply the middle part of the body merely. The last forumla of the Section is an address to the Supreme Being by the devotee to grant him purity and knowledge both directly and through the preceptor. Personal description about the colour of the body and the eyes of the Purusa may be compared with such descriptions given in other parts of the Veda. The Supreme Being as Rudra-Mahādeva is Kṛṣṇa·pingala and the Person in the Sun is elsewhere mentioned as having golden eyes. term harita is interpreted also as skilled in removing the sorrows of devotees. The word lohitākṣi becomes lohitāksa in grammatical Sanskrit. Sāyaṇa's reading is हरित लोहित पिंगलाक्षि and the reading accepted by Bhattabhāskara is हरे लोहितपिंगलाधि. Whether the reading is hare or harita the meaning given is he who is skilled in removing obstacles'. According to Bhattabhaskara lohitapingalāksi is one epithet denoting the Person having sun and fire as his eyes. Day and night are then represented by lohita and pingala. Sāyaṇa however takes lohita as a separate word denoting the complexion of the body and pingalākṣa denoting the colour of the eyes.]

7. By this oblation may my Infinite Self become purified. I pray that I become the Supreme Light, bereft of all obstructing sins and their cause, the passions in me. For this end may this oblation be offered into the consecrated fire. Hail!

[Of these seven formulas excepting the first two, the rest are not found in the shorter version noticed by Bhattabhāskara and Sāyaṇa. Part of the ideas covered by them are presented by the formulas contained in the previous Sections and is noted by them. In the fourth formula the predicate is understood as vimuktah (ahamkāraih). In the last three formulas there is no grammatical agreement between subject and predicate, the one being in the singular and the other in the plural. The plural verbs should be, therefore, considered as singular in sense; they have been placed in plural form perhaps following on the scent of the previous formulas in which the subject also was in the plural. A prayer for the purity of the Infinite Self (Paramatman) which is the highest conception of purity may appear ridiculous at the surface. The real meaning underlying the statement is this: Though Paramatman is the one Reality and Ground of existence, the individual Soul is not cognizant of this fact, because of its accidental impurity. When ignorance and impurity are removed from the individual self the Supreme shines as its true nature. We see for instance, the sun and the moon made dim and dark during the periods of eclipses and so they appear to us as if they are covered with impurity. After the temporary period of eclipse people say that these luminaries have now become pure. So Paramatman, the eternally pure, is here spoken of as if impure from the view-point of the ignorant man. One's spiritual purity is no more eclipsed when the removal of his ignorance is complete.]

8. May this oblation be made to the deity of hunger. Hail! May this oblation be made to the conjoined deities of hunger and thirst. Hail! May this oblation be made to the all-pervasive Supreme. Hail! May this oblation be made to the Supreme who is the ordainer of Rk chants. Hail! May this oblation be made to the Supreme who is interested in his creation. Hail! [I am the Truth expressed by praṇava. For the realization of that may this oblation be offered into the consecrated fire. Hail!]

[These six short formulas again are employed for the offering of oblations like the preceding ones. Of these the first three formulas are not found in the shorter version and the last one given here is original to the shorter version and so not found in the longer one. For a person who aspires after the realisation of his own spiritual Reality, a complete mastery over his physical needs and propensities is a sine qua non according to the scriptures. The Vivekacūḍāmaņi verse 17 says that a person becomes fit for an enquiry into Brahman only when he becomes discriminating, dispassionate, calm, self-controlled and possessing faith and concentration. Patience (titikṣā) according to, ib. verse 25 consists in the acceptance of pain and misery without grief and anxiety for evasion. It is further stated at verse 86 that desiring for self-realisation and, at the same time, devoting oneself to the nourishment and enjoyment of one's own body would be like attempting to cross a river using a shark mistaking it for a floating wood. When a person gets himself initiated into the vows of Sannyāsa he makes oblations to the deities of hunger and thirst so that he may no longer be over-powered by them in his new life in which he is firmly settled in the spiritual Truth. Bhattabhāskara reads vivitti in place of vivittyai and gives the following explanation: This word is a disguised form of the second person singular of the root 'visl to spread', actually seen as veveddhi. The grammatical form has been transmuted into vivitti for paroksatva (disguise) as the S'ruti chooses to do so. The meaning then is this: O my Self, hitherto cribbed and limited in the fivefold sheaths, expand now by the access of Divine Light and become infinite to attain the Supreme. While Bhattabhaskara takes it as a finite verb Sayana makes it out to be an abstract noun. The form, he says, is in the dative singular of vivisti (the all-pervasive Supreme), duplication of t being accounted for by the Vedic transformation of s to t. The Brhadāranyakopanisad II. 4. 10 and Brahmasūtra 1. 1. 3 declare that the Vedas are derived from the Supreme and that they are the only source of the knowledge of the Supreme. The term rgvidhana reinforces this idea. According to the traditional interpretation, Sāyana's reading kasotka is analysed as kasa and utka. He supposes that kasa is derived from the root 'kas to do' and hence kasa is the deed of the Supreme Lord in the form of the universe and utka as usual denotes here interest. The reading accepted by Bhattabhāskara is ghasotka and he derives the word ghasa from the root 'ghasl to eat'. Here the sa of ghasa is disguised as sa. The sense of the word then is all-consuming—the Supreme who reabsorbs into Himself the whole universe, or who finds pleasure in attracting all creation toward Himself. The sixth is the mono-syllabic pranava mantra which affirms the identity of the finite self and the Infinite.]

क्षुत्पिपासामेलं ज्येष्ठामलक्ष्मीर्नाश्चाम्यहम् । अर्भूतिमसेमुद्धिं च सर्वात्निर्णुदं मे पाप्मीन् स्वाहा ॥ ९ ॥

9. O Lord, through thy grace I remove from me that uncleanness in the form of hunger and thirst, misfortune and adversity, poverty and lack of progress, and all the like. Efface my sins. Hail!

[This is found as the sixth stanza of the S'rī Sūkta coming in the Rgvedakhila II with slight alteration in the wording. It contains a list of disvalues which a devotee of God seeking puruṣārthas must get over through His Grace. The word Lakşmī is derived from the root 'laks to mark out' and hence $Laksmar{\imath}$ represents beauty, prosperity, charm, nobility of character and other graces which agreeably mark out a person, place or event. Values are appreciated against their contraries: beauty against ugliness, prosperity against adversity, and so forth. Therefore Jyesthā precedes Lakṣmī as night precedes day or as poison heralded the ambrosia when the milky ocean was churned. It is stressed here that a man should make every effort to weed out disvalues and cultivate beauty, prosperity and virtue, through the Grace of God. Such a prayer is not out of place even in the life of a Sannyāsin who lives for the welfare of creatures.]

10. By this oblation may my five-fold self comprised by the sheaths of food, breath, mind, intelligence and bliss become purified. I pray that I become the Supreme Light bereft of all obstructing sins and their cause, the passions in me. For this end may this oblation be offered into the consecrated fire. Hail!

[This mantra by its sense goes along with the preceding formulas of oblation. Here such a prayer is made again for attaining the purity of pañcakos'a-s or the five sheaths which nest the finite individual self.]

The above paragraph contains thirty-six short mantras used in worship and oblation. They are original to the longer version. Of these the first six ending in svāhā are employed for offering oblations connected with the Vais'vadeva rite. In this rite the Supreme Being is worshipped 1. as Fire, 2. as the sum total of deities or All-gods, 3. as the permanent plenitude, 4. as the permanent ground, 5. as the unchanging abode, and 6. as the maker of the right sacrifice. A sacrifice rightly offered is called svista. The one made wrongly through inadvertance is called durista. The deity Fire specially propitiated rectifies the wrong offerings. The Garhapatya Fire is called Svistakrt in the Kalpa works. The words भूम and धुव are omitted in some text and धूमाय स्वाहा is added after भ्रविद्याति. In the next list oblations are offered to धर्म:-- religious duty, अधर्म:—the opposite of it, आप:-waters, ओषधिवनस्पतय:—herbs and trees, रक्षोदेवजना: demons and gods, गृह्या:—household deities, अवसाना: the deities dwelling in the outskirts of the house, अवसानपतय:-the leaders of such deities, सर्वभृता:-all spirits, or the deities of the five primordial elements. काम:—god of love, अन्तरिक्षम्—wind blowing in the sky, नाम-(the Supreme Being is called here nāma because He is expressed by the totality of words in the Veda. Whatever there is in this world moving as insentient [एजित] and whatever that acts as sentient चिष्टति] all that is नाम or आत्मन्), पृथिवी—earth, अन्तरिक्षम spirits dwelling in the sky, द्यौ:-heaven, सूर्य:-sun, चन्द्रमा:—moon, नक्षत्राणि—asterisms, इन्द्र:—the chief of gods, बृहस्पति:—the preceptor of gods, प्रजापति:—the lord of creatures, ब्रह्मा—the four-faced creator, पितर: —departed ancestors, रुद्र: पशुपति:—Rudra the lord of living beings, देवा:—gods, पितर:—manes, मृता:—a variety of gods, मनुष्या:—men, प्रजापति:—the lord of creatures. and प्रमेत्री—the four-faced creator dwelling in Brahmaloka. Wherever the same deity is repeated twice it is implied that two oblations are given to the same deity. It is stated that the entire universe is but a part of the Supreme—Nāmno bhāgaḥ. In Chāndogya VII. 1. 4. Sanatkumāra advises Nārada to worship Nāma as Brahman. Whenever offerings are made to the manes, the deities and men the terms employed for oblations are svadhā, namah and hanta respectively. These special words of address give them pleasure. Gods, like guests, are made happy by sweet words of courtesy. The word pitr denotes two types of superhuman beings—those who are permanent dwellers of the pitrloka and those who are translated to that region from the earth when they depart from the body. The mantras given in this group are used for baliharana or offering worshipful tribute to these deities who form the body of the Supreme. So even irreligious demons, trees and plants find a place in it.]

यथा कूपः शतधीरः सहस्रिधारो अक्षितः । एवा मे अस्तु धान्य सहस्रिधारमक्षितम् ॥ धर्नधान्ये स्वाही॥

यथा just as रातधार: having a hundred springs सहस्र-धार: having a thousand springs अक्षित: perennial कूप: well (मनति becomes) एना (एनम्) analogously अक्षितम् inexhaustible सहस्रधारम् having a thousand sources of continuous supply धान्यम् grain में for me अस्तु let be. धनधान्ये to Dhanadhānī स्वाहा hail!

2. Just as a perennial well is supplied with water by hundreds and thousands of springs, so may I have an inexhaustible supply of grain from a thousand sources. For that end, I offer oblations to the wealth-holding deity. Hail!

[This mantra in the longer version is an invocation addressed to the Supreme through the deity Dhanadhānī, the supplier of man's subsistence. There is a whole group of passages in the Taittirīyasamhitā laying down food rules and praising Annadevatā. Life depends upon food. So nothing is more fundamental than the supply of food which sustains life. On this there is this ancient verse: धर्मार्थकाम-मोक्षाणां प्राणा: संस्थितिहेतवः। तान् निव्रता किं न हतं रक्षता किं न रक्षितम् ॥ The Taittirīyopaniṣad III. 8. 9 also emphasises the necessity of acquiring much food through the worship of Annabrahman and sharing it with the needy.]

ये भूताः प्रचरेनित दिवानक्तं बिटिम्चिन्छन्तो विट्रदेखे प्रेष्याः । तेभ्यो बुछि पृष्टिकामो हराम् मिष्य पृष्टिं पृष्टिपतिर्द्धतु स्वाहां ॥ ३ ॥

ये वितुदस्य रमशानवासिनः भगवतः कालाग्निस्पस्य प्रेष्याः भृताः भृताः बल्लिं इच्छन्तः नक्तंदिवं प्रचरन्ति तेभ्यः पुष्टिकामः सन् अहं बल्लिं अन्नस्पं हरामि भूमौ निक्षिपामि । पुष्टिपतिः पोषणाधिपतिः मथि पुष्टिं स्थापयत् । स्वाहा ॥

ये those वितुदस्य of (Rudra) who causes pain प्रेष्या: servants भूता: spirits बलिम् tribute इच्छन्त: desiring दिवानक्तम् day and night प्रचरन्ति moves about तेभ्य: for them पृष्टिकाम: intending prosperity अहम् I बलिम् offering

(in the form of food) ह्रामि present. पुष्टिपति: the lord of prosperity मिय in me पुष्टिम् prosperity दधाउ place. स्वाहा hail.

3. With the intention of acquiring prosperity, I present offering of food to those spirits who are the servants of Rudra (dwelling in the cremation ground) causing pain to creatures by death and bereavement, and who wander about day and night in search of tribute. May the lord of prosperity grant me all prosperity. Hail!

The Rudranuvaka of the Yajurveda speaks of the various forms of Rudra dwelling in the sky, on the earth, in the firmament, as leaders of creatures, as agencies that hurt men through food and wander about with weapons. Wind, rain and other causes of destruction are also attributed to these agents of Rudra. This prayer here is, therefore, addressed to Rudra, after proper offerings to his destructive emissaries, so that the obstacles in the way to the attainment of prosperity are removed through his grace. The word vituda comes from the root tud to prick or to pierce; and so vituda here is kālāgnirudra who pierces the creatures with various kinds of sorrows caused by the acts of Nature—various diseases, pestilence, inclemencies of weather and climate. According to the lot of each one, the creatures are exposed to them.]

1. Om that is Brahman. Om that is Vāyu. Om that is the finite self. Om that is the Supreme Truth. Om that is all. Om that is the multitude of citadels (the bodies of creatures). Salutations to Him.

Here, in the longer version, this formula and the immediately succeeding one are given for japa to be performed in order to remove all one's sins. In the shorter version this formula is given as a substitute for Gāyatrī together with its subsidiaries given for mental repetition when a person performs prāṇā-yāma. Both Bhaṭṭabhāskara and Sāyaṇa explain the mantra adopting two philosophical view-points. The syllable Om commencing each phrase announces that the passage is meant for magnifying

Paramātman, and also for emphasising His all-pervasive and all-inclusive nature. According to Bhattabhāskara, Brahma here stands for expanding Prakṛti which is but a mode of Brahman; Vavu stands for the power of the Supreme perceptible as universal movement; Atman for the individual self; and the word Sarva stresses the omnific nature of the Supreme. He takes the term puru in the sense of great or strong and explains namah as namana or transformation; and so the phrase puror namah is explained as the transformation of the universe into the shape which is powerful-or as the transformation of the Supreme Reality as Paras'akti into the form of the universe. Sāyaṇa interprets Vāyu as Hiraṇyagarbha or Sutratman embodying the power of knowledge and activity inherent in the universe; and atman as the individual soul—both being derived from the Supreme. He accepts the reading puro namah and explains purah as the nominative plural of puh meaning a walled city to which the gross and subtle body of creatures are often compared in the scriptures. In the view of Sayana, three alternative measures of breath are used in the act of pranayama according to the breathing capacity of individual aspirants. The text is printed here as found in the longer and shorter versions. I have given the translation based on Sāyaṇa whose commentary reads purah namah which is supported by only one manuscript of the text used by the Anandas'rama edition.] " The success of my many only such anomaly."

2. That Supreme Being moves inside the heart of created beings possessing manifold forms. O Supreme, Thou art the sacrifice, Thou art the expression Vaṣaṭ, Thou art Indra, Thou art Rudra, Thou art Brahmā, Thou art Prajāpati, Thou art That, Thou art the water in the rivers and the ocean, Thou art the sun, Thou art flavour, Thou art ambrosia, Thou art the body of the Vedas, Thou art the threefold world and Thou art Om.

[The first line here announces that the Supreme described above is hidden in the hearts of all created beings, in the various shapes and the fauna and flora of the world. In the next, the worshipper directly addresses the Supreme and exclaims, Thou art the sacrifice etc. Words like vaṣaṭ, svāhā, svadhā, and hantā are employed, as specified before, while making offerings to gods, manes and men. Great gods like Brahmā, Viṣṇu and S'iva, the progenitor of mankind, sacrifices and formulas of offering, water and light, and other facts of the world are indiscriminately collected here and asserted to be one with the Supreme. The worshipper thereby thinks that there is nothing other than the Supreme and that everything has its value derived from the Supreme. According to Sāyaṇa, the mantra beginning with Om antas carati is employed for the contemplative worship of the Supreme after gāyatrī-yisarjana connected with the twilight-devotion.]

1. Firm in my religious faith, I offer this oblation of ambrosia into prāṇa with reverence. Firm in my religious faith, I offer this oblation of ambrosia into apāna with reverence. Firm in my religious faith, I offer this oblation of ambrosia into vyāna with reverence. Firm in my religious faith, I offer this oblation of ambrosia into udāna with reverence. Firm in my religious faith, I offer this oblation of ambrosia into samāna with reverence. By these oblations may my Self be united with the Supreme, so that I may attain Immortality.

[Agnihotra is a primary and fundamental rite during the performance of which oblations to the Supreme are offered in the consecrated fire. This rite is usually performed in the external fire in which the Supreme is invoked. At the commencement of dinner a similar worship is offered into the Divine Fire Vais'vanara, dwelling within man and manifesting Itself through the fivefold breath. This is called Prāṇāgnihotra and there is an Upaniṣad entirely devoted to the description of it, by the same name. Every twiceborn religious aspirant, before he lays hand on the food which is set before him, ceremoniously purifies it, reverences it and parcels, with his thumb and two other fingers variously combined, a small quantity of it five times and places in the mouth mentally repeating each one of these formulas. Finally he prays that he might be united to the Supreme by this act of devotion. Thus the food-seeking instinct is given a direction to God before it is satisfied in the natural Life is maintained by the various vital activities in the body subsumed under the five-fold prana which is a manifestation of the Supreme on the physical plane. These offerings are, therefore, really made to God within. Therefore it is amrtahoma which implies not only introduction of tasty food into the mouth but also a symbolic offering of the finite self into the Infinite Supreme Brahman. This is stressed by the concluding words. The text given above is that of the longer version. The shorter version noticed by Bhattabhāskara and Sāyana omits the word sraddhāyām commencing each formula and adds प्राणाय खाहा, अपानाय खाहा, व्यानाय खाहा, उदानाय खाहा, and समानाय स्वाहा, respectively, immediately after the verb juhomi in each formula.]

[This formula is repeated and a small quantity of water is sipped before one starts eating. Anything which one considers precious or valuable is placed in a container and covered. Here the small quantity of water taken in is supposed to be an upastarana or seat on which subsequent morsels are placed. In the shorter version this short mantra is placed before the Prāṇāhuti mantra (Section 69); and that is the place to which it properly belongs. For, after sipping the water oblations are offered. Details of this practice and the philosophical significance of it are given at Chāndogyopaniṣad V. 2. 2.]

अङ्गुष्ठमातः पुरुषोऽङ्गुष्ठं चं समाश्रितः।

अङ्गुष्ठमात्रः अङ्गुष्ठप्रमाणे हृदयाकारो अवस्थितः बुद्ध्यविन्छन्नः जीवरूपः पुरुषः स्वकीयया ज्ञानक्रियाशकत्या पादाङ्गुष्ठं मस्तकं च आश्रितः अर्थात् आपादतलमस्तकं व्यातः तिष्ठति । स एव शरीरानविन्छन्नस्वरूपः सन् सर्वस्य जगतः ईशः नियन्ता विश्वभुक् प्रपञ्चस्य भोक्ता च । तादृशः प्रभुः अनेन मत्कृतेन भोजनेन प्रीणातु ॥

अङ्गुष्टमात्र: having the size of the thumb पुरुष: the Person (dwelling in the body) अङ्गुष्टम् the toe च and (the head) समाश्रित: dwells as support. सर्वस्य of all जगत: universe ईश: ruler विश्वमुक् enjoyer of all प्रमु: Lord प्रीणातु may be gratified.

1. May the Supreme Lord be gratified (by this meal just taken)—Who is the ruler of all the world and the enjoyer of all, Who as the person dwelling in the body, is of the size of the thumb, and Who is the support of the body—imparting to it sentience and activity from the toe to the crown.

[After the dinner and the rinsing of the mouth, and ablution of hand and feet, it is customary to pour some quantity of water on one's right toe symbolically. This anustubh stanza is repeated at that time contemplating on the identity of oneself with the Supreme. When the mind is not distracted by hunger. it is the duty of a person to remind himself that he is not different from the Divine Reality—the one Principle that rules and supports the universe—the real Enjoyer of the food eaten by every creature. Elsewhere in this work it has been stated that the Supreme Person and the Person dwelling in man are not different. The space inside the heart is equal in measure to the size of the thumb, and so the Supreme perceived in the heart as the individual Soul is also spoken of here as having the size of the thumb. Sāyana takes angustham ca as an incomplete phrase and fills out the unexpressed idea by stating 'from pādāngustha (toe) to the crown'. Though the Jīva is supposed to dwell in the heart, it is active and cognizant of sensations in any part of the body. In the longer version prīnāti occurs in the place of prīnātu. This verb, however, expresses a prayer on the part of the person who has finished his food. Man considers that he is only an instrument of God and the satisfaction he has derived by the repast really belongs to God-the enjoyer of the whole universe. It is believed that the Kālāgni Fire which will finally destroy the universe is hidden at the root of the universe. Similarly the fire which consumes the food eaten is also supposed to dwell at the toe, by which man is rooted to the earth. Pouring water on the toe, therefore, is a symbolic act of propitiation. The whole body, by a yogic process, is purified ceremoniously by rousing the energy that is supposed to dwell at the foot or toe.]

1. O Lord, after repast my powers of speech, of breath, of sight, and of hearing, are firm in their respective stations i.e., mouth, nostrils, eyes and ears; so also strength and vitality have returned to my arms and thighs. My subtle body and my gross body with all its limbs are now free from inadequacy. My salutation to Thee. Do not cause any hurt to me and mine.

[This formula is prescribed for reflection after dinner. The religious aspirant here states that the powers of the senses and limbs, which have been reduced by the long period that intervened after the previous meal, have now been restored by the present repast supplied through the grace of the Lord. The first mantra of $\bar{I}s\bar{a}v\bar{a}sya$, according to many commentators, declares: All this is the dominion of the Lord; enjoy whatever is granted you by Him without coveting anything belonging to others.—So the food eaten is supplied by the Divine Providence. The devotee of God offers his thankful reverence to the Creator and beseeches Him not to hurt him and all that belongs to him.]

1. O Rudra, thou art the binding knot of the breaths and the organs of senses functioning in the body. Enter me as the end-maker of sorrows and increase and protect me by that food which I have taken in.

[After the utterance of the previous mantra, this short formula is repeated silently touching the region of one's heart. The various breaths and organs of senses which are the support of man's cognition, intellection and emotion, function for the sake of the ego or ahankāra which as prāṇa-granthi sustains the span of life. Sri Ramakrishna remarked in the course of a conversation that when ahankara disappears, a man becomes a ripe fruit: when the passions and desires subside, he becomes like a ship the rivets, cramps and nails of which are sucked up by magnet submerged in the sea. Hence ahankāra is responsible for the up-keep of life in the ordinary plane. Rudra is the regent of ahankara which is the knot of life. Rudra is therefore the prana-granthi also. Further Rudra in his divine aspect is beseeched to enter the body of the devotee, to remove his sorrows, to nourish him with the food assimilated, and to ward off his mishaps and diseases.]

[This is a mantra prescribed for repetition throughout life in order to save oneself from death. This Yajus may be interpreted either as a salutation to Rudra and Viṣṇu separately, or to both together as one. The latter interpretation is supported by the conclusion of the prayer which gives the singular predicate. The Skandopanişad declares the identity of Siva and Viṣṇu thus: Yathā sivamayo viṣṇur evam viṣṇumayah sivah. There is a considerable literature establishing the unity and identity of Siva and Viṣṇu produced during the course of many centuries.]

It is not placed in the shorter version. The anonymous commentary in the Anandāṣ'rama edition explains it in an arbitrary way. For instance the phrase tvam vanebhyah is explained thus: Thou wanderest about at pleasure in Nandanayana and other forests. The purport of the stanza is stated to be a prayer to the Supreme Being for averting death. From the interpretation of Sāyaṇa it is clear that Agni here is portrayed as sarvātmaka, manifold and ubiquitous.]

Deign to remain with me as the giver of splendour born of Vedic learning. When the sacrifice which I have instituted has been completed prosperously, be with me to confer the fruits of it.

[This passage originally occurs at Taittirīyabrāhmaṇa III. 7. 6. It starts with the words यज्ञ नमस्ते यज्ञ । नमो नमश्च ते यज्ञ। and is an anumantrana before s'amyuvāka. Here it is taken as a prayer addressed to the Supreme Being by a worshipper seeking the fulfilment of his desires. The repetition of salutations and longing for divine proximity express the feeling of devotion for God, welling up in the heart of the worshipper at the close of his devotional practice. The following passage found at the Taittiriyabrāhmaņa II. 8. 8 reproduced below with translation asserts that grace of Brahman must be sought for the perfection of the Yajña: पिता विराजामृषमो रयीणां, अन्तरिक्षं विश्वरूप आविवेश, तमकैंरभ्यर्चन्ति वत्सं, ब्रह्म सन्तं ब्रह्मणावर्धयन्तः, ब्रह्म देवानजनयत्, ब्रह्म विश्वमिदं जगत्, ब्रह्मणः क्षत्रं निर्मितं, ब्रह्म ब्राह्मण आत्मना, अन्तरस्मिन्निमे लोकाः, अन्तर्विश्वमिदं जगत्, ब्रह्मेव भूतानां ज्येष्ठं, तेन कोऽर्हति स्पर्धितं, ब्रह्मन् देवास्त्रयिस्त्रशत्, ब्रह्मनिन्द्रप्रजापती, ब्रह्मन् ह विश्वा भूतानि, नावीवान्तः समाहिता, चतस्र आशाः प्रचरन्त्वमयः, इमं नो यज्ञं नयतु प्रजानन् , घृतं पिन्वन्नजरं सुवीरं, ब्रह्म समिद्भवत्याह्तीनाम् Vena, the Reality described on page 71, is the excellent giver and protector of manifold wealth; he possesses various forms (according to the hours of the day and needs of the seasons) and enters the sky (daily). Brahmanas desirous of the results of their good work worship the Brahman and praise him with laudatory verses (brahma) just as those who are about to milk the cow fondle the calf. That Brahman who is the cause of the Universe created the Gods and this entire world. The order of the Kṣattriyas was fashioned from that Brahman. Brahman manifested in his own form in the Brāhmaṇa (to impart knowledge to others). In him these spheres of created beings and this entire moving world abide. Brahman alone is the first and foremost of all that becomes. Who dares to match with such Brahman? In that Brahman all the thirty-three Gods are included. Indra and Prajāpati are in Brahman. All be- ings are berthed in Brahman safely as if within a boat. May the four sacrificial fires thrive in four directions placed in such Brahman. May Parabrahman—the ground of all—be mindful of this sacrifice of ours and conduct it to proper completion, partaking of this oblation of butter and granting us good heroes. Brahman, in short, is the illuminator of these oblations offered by us.—Passages like this in the Brahmanas clearly show that philosophy and worship in the Vedas are closely united and that dichotomy would lead to the atrophy of both.] न १८ मानूनायः, युर्ज मिन्यवायां सुनीरं, बाधा समित्रामाषुत्रीनाम्-

सत्यम् truthfulness परम् excellent, परम् that which is excellent सत्यम् truthfulness; सत्येन by truthfulness सुवर्गात् (स्वर्गात्) from blissful लोकात् from the world कदाचन at any time न च्यवन्ते do not fall. सत्यम् truthfulness हि for सताम् belongs to good. तस्मात् therefore सत्ये in truthfulness रमन्ते they delight.

1. Truthfulness is excellent. What is excellent is truthfulness only. By truthfulness those who have attained to the state of blissfulness never fall from there. What belongs to sat, namely good people, that is indeed satyam (truthfulness). For this reason seekers of the highest good find delight in truthfulness.

[This Section lays down the principles of sannyāsa. The heart of sannyāsa is tapas, which includes habits, temperaments and traits of character specified in the scriptures. Each moral quality that should necessarily be cultivated by a sannyāsin is also called tapas. Eleven such items are mentioned here. Nyāsa is placed at the head of all of them, for that transcends the rest—that is the unsurpassed means of attaining Self-illumination. A person isrendered fit for sannyasa by the destruction of his sins and blemishes. Worship habitually performed by one who lives the religious pattern of life described in the preceding Sections help to bring about such purity. Thus a candidate who is to be ordained as a sannyāsin becomes firm in the Supreme Truth. The first condition laid down here which gives fitness for sannyāsa is truthfulness. Truthfulness is certainly high. Granting that one who violates this principle gets heaven through the force of some other virtue, it is stated here that he can never be there for long. That man, on the other hand, who is always wedded to veracity does not fall from the blissful state at any time. The word satyam is derived thus: sati sādhuḥ, sate hitam what is right for the good people, what conduces to the good. The word satyam is cognate to sat. This shows that sages (Santah) who tread the right path are always truthful. Truthfulness, therefore, is the unsurpassed means of liberation. Those who have the summum bonum of life in view, therefore, delight in truthfulness always. Swami Vivekananda said: Stand upon truth and you have got God. Follow truth wherever it may lead. Do not be cowardly and hypocritical. 'Those who think that a little sugar coating of untruth will help the spread of truth, are mistaken, and will find in the long run that a single drop of poison poisons the whole mass. ' (Complete Works Vol. VIII.

Page 346). Evidently moral and intellectual truths are allied. The supremacy of truth is thus extolled in the Mahābhārata:—अश्वमेधसहस्रं च सत्यं च तुल्या धृतम्। अश्वमेधसहस्राद्धि सत्यमेवात्यरेचयत्॥

तप: austerity इति thus (some opine). अनशनात् than fast परम् superior तप: austerity न not. यत् what is described हि indeed परम् superior तप: austerity तत् that दुर्घर्भम् hard to be practised तत् that दुराघर्भम् not capable of approach (by others); तस्मात् therefore तपसि in austerity रमन्ते they delight.

2. Some hold the opinion that austerity is the means of liberation and that there is no austerity higher than religious fast. This excellent austerity is hard to be practised. A person who practises it becomes invincible (or such austerity is unthinkable for the commonalty). Therefore seekers of the highest good delight in austerity.

[After truthfulness austerity comes in the list. It consists in religious fasts described at length in the scriptures. For a normal man, abstention from food for a long period even on religious ground is a hard practice. Here austerity implies also other forms of hardships which one has to encounter in the execution of one's religious duties enjoined by the scriptures. Since self-denial in this shape helps purity of mind and fitness for liberation, pious people find delight in it. This declaration of the superiority of religious fast does not, however, detract from the value of self-control, pilgrimage, japa, oblation and the like, which are also considered forms of austerity.]

5. All creatures praise selfless gift as supreme; for there is nothing more difficult to perform than giving selfless gift. Therefore seekers of the highest good delight in giving selfless gift.

The fifth attribute prescribed as a means of liberation is $d\bar{a}na$. The word $d\bar{a}na$ is very wide in its application. The four recognised methods of subduing a foe, according to ancient text books of politics, are sāma, dāna, bheda and danda. term dana in this quadrad has a political motive and therefore is foreign to the field of religion. A gift, to be religious, must be entirely free from visible or invisible strings of self-interest. It is, therefore, defined technically as complete severence of one's influence and interest in, or proprietorship in any form over, the gift given, and making it the property of the donee completely and forever. Gifts are never given by the religious man for establishing domination over the receiver as it happens in the case of political subsidies. The true religious man does not expect even gratitude and thanks in return for the gift he has made, for he has done an act of utter selflessness merely as a religious duty. Giving of gifts in such a manner is considered extremely hard for practice. Do we not find men ready to buy wealth at the cost of their lives? Property is really externalised will and hardly we find one ready to abdicate one's own will. Wealth is power and the instinctive craving for power in all men stands as the main block in the way of merging their will with that of God. Hence follow the difficulty and value of religious gift. The word duskaram in the shorter version is replaced by duscaram in the longer version. The sense in both the cases is identical.

Dharma now gets the honour of being mentioned as the most excellent means of liberation. According to Bhattabhaskara dharma denotes the regular, occasional and optional duties taught by the s'ruti and the smrti. Sāyana interprets here dharma as social service, such as construction of wells, tanks and reservoirs, in which kings and ministers are interested. By these works service is done to all creatures. The context does not warrant this restriction of the meaning in a special manner. Religious righteousness in general is denoted by the word dharma. Duties ordained by ancient scriptures, customary practice, exemplary deeds of respected elders, pronouncements of sages, behaviour approved by good people,—all these help to eliminate selfish feelings and passions from the mind of man and confirm him to a life in harmany with his fellow beings and incline him to discharge his duties towards God. All these come under the term dharma. Certainly it is difficult for the natural man to practise it.

प्रजन इति भूयी १ सस्तम्मात् भूयिष्ठाः प्रजीयन्ते तस्मात् भूयिष्ठाः प्रजनेने रमन्ते ॥ ७ ॥ प्रजनः अपत्योत्पादनम् । तदेव मोक्षं प्रति उत्तमसाधनत्वात् परमं तप इति प्रजोत्पत्तौ व्यापृतानां पक्षः । तस्मात् भूयांसः प्रजनरूपं तपः कुर्वन्ति । ततः लोके बहवः पुत्रपौत्रादिरूपेण प्रजायन्ते । तस्मात् गार्हस्थ्ये प्रजाश्रद्धया भूयिष्ठाः अतिबहवः प्रजोत्पादने रमन्ते ॥

प्रजन: procreation इति thus भूयांस: a very large number of people (मन्यन्ते think). तस्मात् therefore भूयिष्ठा: the largest number प्रजायन्ते are born. तस्मात् therefore भूयिष्ठा: the largest number प्रजनने in procreation रमन्ते take delight.

7. The largest number of people consider that procreation is the means of liberation. For that reason the largest number of offsprings are born. Because procreation is deemed such a means, therefore the largest number of people delight in procreation.

[Rich and poor, good and bad, learned and ignorant, all believe that the biological continuity through their own lines of sons and grandsons is the means of immortality. Reproduction, therefore, is a form of tapas. As a consequence of this faith, the largest number of people find pleasure in the procreatory act and the largest number of children are born.]

अश्रय इत्योह तसाद्मय आधीतव्याः ॥ ८ ॥

अम्रयः परं तपः अर्थात् उत्तमो मुक्तिहेतुः इति वेदनिष्ठाः मन्यन्ते । तस्मात् सर्वेः अम्रयः आधातन्याः ॥ असय: Fires consecrated for Vedic worship इति thus आह one says. तसात् therefore असय: Fires आधातव्या: must be consecrated.

8. Some one devoted to the Vedic religion says that the Vedic Fires are the means of liberation. Therefore the Vedic Fires must be consecrated.

The concrete part of the Vedic religion centres round worship of the Vedic deities through oblations offered into duly consecrated Fires. According to the Vedas there are five mahagni-s (specially consecrated Fires) called Gārhapatya, Anvāhāryapacana or Daksināgni, Agnīdhrīya, Āvasathya and Āhavanīya. These Fires are to be kept alive always, according to the ajasrapaksa view; and according to the uddharanapaksa view, excepting the Garhapatya, the rest are kindled, by transference from the Garhapatya, only when necessity arises for particular rites. Vedic forms of worship beginning with Agnihotra and ending in Dars'apūrņamāsa—with all the varieties and elaborations—are to be made with the help of these five Fires. The Vedas declare: पञ्च वा एते आत्म-निष्ठाः आत्मानं क्षेमं नयन्ति—devoted to these five, man elevates himself to safety. It is the faith of the Vedic worshipper that these sacrificial duties will ultimately lead him to liberation. Fire worship, therefore, must be kept up by all competent aspirants who seek their own highest good.]

अग्निहोत्रमित्यांहु तस्मादग्निहोत्ने रंमन्ते ॥ ९ ॥

अप्रिहोत्नं परमं तप: अर्थात् उत्तमं मोक्षसाधनं इत्यपर: आह। तस्मात् केचित् श्रेयोर्थिन: अप्रिहोत्ने रमन्ते॥

अग्निहोत्रम् the Agnihotra sacrifice इति thus आह (another) says. तसात् therefore अग्निहोत्ने in the Agnihotra sacrifice रमन्ते (some people) delight.

9. Another person devoted to the Vedic religion says that Agnihotra is the means of liberation. Therefore some seekers of the highest good delight in the Agnihotra sacrifice.

[According to the scriptural injunction yāvaj jīvam agnihotram juhuyāt—one should perform Agnihotra till the end—a competent person, after consecration of the Fire, must offer daily morning and evening oblations called Agnihotra without fail. Some say this is the means of liberation.]

युज्ञ इति युज्ञेन हि देवा दिवं गुतास्तसा गुज्ञे रमन्ते ॥१०॥

यज्ञः ज्योतिष्टोमादिकः परमं तपः उत्तमं मोक्षसाधनमिति अपरे मन्यन्ते । देवाः पूर्वानुष्ठितेन यज्ञेन स्वर्गलोकं गताः । तस्मात् कारणात् केचन वेदनिष्ठाः यज्ञे रमन्ते ॥

यज्ञ: sacrifice इति thus. यज्ञेन by sacrifice हि verily देवा: gods दिवम् heaven गता: have reached. तस्मात् therefore यज्ञे in sacrifice रमन्ते they delight.

10. Others devoted to the Vedic religion say that sacrifice is the means of liberation. Verily gods have attained heaven by their own prior deeds of sacrifice. Therefore seekers of the highest good delight in the performance of sacrifice.

[A sacrifice instituted according to the Vedic rules with all the necessary ingredients and approved order of actions is called a yajña. The main varieties of vajñas are three, as determined by the substance of offering—havih, soma and pas'u. A yajña is originated by a Vedicinjunction. Some sacrifices are called primary. They supply the model for others that are developed by addition and omission of details. By this process of inserting and dropping the ingredients the varieties of sacrifices become very large, and they may extend from a single day to several years. A single-day sacrifice is called Ahīna. A sacrificial session extending over many days, sometimes years, is called a sattra. Both are entitled to the name vajña. Dars'apūrņamāsa and Jyotistoma are the two well-known archetypes of sacrifices which give rise to a variety of yajñas called by various names. It is believed that the present denizens of heaven have worked their way to that exalted place through the influence of yajñas which they performed when they lived on the earth as human beings. Bhattabhāskara reads yajño hi devānām after the first two words. This means that the worship through yajña is really liked by the gods. Those good people who worship gods on the earth by yajña are as good as gods in heaven. Sāyaṇa's reading यज्ञेन हि देवा: दिवं गता: is replaced in the longer version by the short clause यज्ञो हि देवा: only, which lacks clarity. Sāyaṇa's text is, therefore, adopted above in this edition.]

मानुसमिति विद्वारस्तरमाहिद्वारतं एव मानुसे रमन्ते ॥११॥

मानसं मनसैव निष्पाद्यं उपासनं अथवा मानसिकः विषयत्याग एव परमं तपः उत्तमं मोक्षसाधनमिति केचन विद्वासः मन्यन्ते । तस्मात् विद्वासः मानसे एव उपासने रमन्ते अथवा मनसा विषयत्यागं कुर्वन्ति ।

मानसम् inward (worship) इति thus विद्वांस: wise people; तस्मात् therefore विद्वांस: wise people मानसे in inward worship एवं alone रमन्ते delight.

11. Some wise people consider that inward worship is the means of liberation. Therefore wise people delight only in inward worship.

[From the beginning of this Section, it may be observed that one item or other is considered as the highest means of attaining liberation, and that any particular item elevated to that position was declared to be tapas. The term tapas is thus used here in its general sense—the means of attaining the highest good. As the eleventh of the series inward worship is now prescribed. The term mānasa is interpreted by Sāyaṇa as inward worship or contemplation upon the Supreme and His divine excellences. There is a general division of the subject matter of the Vedas into karma, upāsanā and jnāna. Upāsanā means a conscious mental effort which sustains an unbroken current of thought centring on a deity, some divine quality or an object of adoration as prescribed in the scripture and instructed by the preceptor. Such upasanas are found in the Brāhmaņas, Āranyakas and Upanisads. According to the ancient teachers, upāsanā may be performed as part of the sacrificial performance in co-ordination with it, or as an alternative of yajñakarma. The Upanisadic philosophy has stemmed out of those upāsanās that were prescribed as a substitute for the performance of karma. Speaking from the view-point of religious evolution we may say that (a) singleness of purpose, (b) subjugation of lower passions and (c) devotion to duty are cultivated by the religious seeker through the meticulous performance of overt sacrificial acts continuously for a long time. When a stage of maturity is reached through this devotion to action, the worshipper delights in meditation co-ordinated with action, technically called jñāna-karma-samuccaya. We find references in the Vedas to a still higher stage when karma is substituted by upāsanā, in which case all external religious acts are suppressed by the inner urge of the contemplative mind. A person who has grown into this state of spiritual maturity is called an Ātmayājin, in the Brāhmaņas and the Āranyakas. Having described the superiority of Agnyadhana, Agnihotra and Yajña in their natural sequence, the purely contemplative worship of the Ātmayājin is extolled in this passage. A person who has reached this stage can really find pleasure only in inward worship (mānasa eva). Bhaṭṭabhāskara takes the word mānasa in a limited sense and explains that it stands here only for mental rejection of pleasure which one feels in attractive external objects.]

न्यास: sannyāsa इति thus ब्रह्मा Hiraṇyagarbha (thinks). ब्रह्मा Hiraṇyagarbha हि verily पर: the supreme. पर: the supreme हि alone ब्रह्मा Hiraṇyagarbha. तानि those वे certainly एतानि these तपांसि austerities अवराणि inferior. न्यास: sannyāsa एव alone अत्यरेचयत् surpassed. यः he who एवम् thus वेद understands इति thus उपनिषत् secret knowledge.

12 Brahmā Hiraṇyagarbha considers that sannyāsa is the means of liberation. Hiraṇyagarbha is indeed the Supreme. The Supreme alone is Hiraṇyagarbha (although he is a personality). Certainly these austerities set forth above are inferior. Sannyāsa alone surpassed all. To him who thus knows the alltranscending excellence of sannyāsa precious knowledge (has been imparted).

[This passage contains the climax reached by the trend of opinions expressed by this whole Section. It is the twelfth and last view. Bhaṭṭabhāskara interprets that nyāsa is sarvakarmaphalatyāga and that it deserves to be honoured as Brahman. The status of tapas cannot be denied to any of the eleven categories mentioned prior to this passage, because all of them contribute to buman welfare. But they have value only when they are genuinely rooted in nyāsa or surrender of their fruit to God. According to Sāyaṇa, however, nyāsa is here the same as sannyāsa-yoga mentioned on page 168. According to Āruņi, Jābāla and other Sannyāsa Upanisads, nyāsa means the renunciation of all the work including what is commanded by the Vedas. Such denial of work is accepted as one's duty, only when it is necessitated by a whole-hearted devotion to jñāna. Even then, in fact, only those karmas which are prohibited by the scriptures or induced by one's own desires are given up. A Sannyāsin is one who confirms himself to the code of conduct prescribed for him by the scriptures specifically, and one who is constantly in the condition of spiritual and moral perfection denoted by that term. S'rī S'ankarācārya at Brahmasūtra III. 4.20 refers to this passage as the conclusive authority behind the practice of sannyāsa. The illustrious ācārya is the most outstanding prototype of a Sannyasin. His example and teachings on sannyasa are considered by millions in India who honour the monastic tradition as the pattern of sannyasa to be followed by others entering the path. A very large section of Hindus believe that sannyasa represents the perfection in religious life which is attained through the gradual progress in spirituality achieved by fulfilment of the condition laid down for the other three stations of life. Sayana states that while the qualities and practices of different aspirants described in the eleven clauses from the beginning of the Section were made by human beings—learned and wise though they might be—the transcendence of sannyāsa over all of them is a pronouncement made by Brahmā himself—the first-born—and so it is secretly guarded precious knowledge—upanişad.] मध्येन बायुरावारी वृत्येनशिहको सेनान दिनि सन्तं नुम्पः

1. Āruņi, the son of Prajāpati and Suparņā approached his father Prajāpati—thus we have heard—and questioned him, what is that which revered teachers declare as the supreme means of liberation? To him Prajāpati thus replied:—

सृत्येन वायुराविति सृत्येनिद्तियो रीचते दिवि सृत्यं वाचः प्रितिष्ठा सृत्ये सुर्वे प्रतिष्ठितं तस्मीत्सृत्यं पर्मं वदिन्त ॥ २ ॥ यः अयं वायुः अस्पत्प्रत्यक्षं अन्तिरक्षे वाति सः पुरा मनुष्यः सन् सत्येन सत्यनिष्ठया मानुषं रूपं उत्पृज्य वायुदेवतात्वं प्राप्य अधुना लोकानु- ग्रहाय स्वकर्मणि निरतो वर्तते । एवं आदित्यः अपि पूर्वानुष्ठितेन सत्येन मनुष्यभावमुत्पृज्य आदित्यरूपेण इदानीं युलोके रोचते प्रकाशते । यदेतत् सत्यं तत् वागिन्द्रियस्य स्थिरावस्थानम् । यतः अनृतं उक्तमपि परैः निराक्रियते इति हेतोः तत् वाचः प्रतिष्ठा न भवति। एवंमहिमशालित्वात् सत्ये सत्यभाषणे सर्वं प्रामाणिकव्यवहारज्ञतं प्रतिष्ठितम् । तस्मात् सत्यमेव परमं मोक्षसाधनमिति केचित् सत्यनिष्ठाः वदन्ति ॥

2. By truth the wind blows. By truth the sun shines in the sky. Truth is the foundation of speech. Everything in practical life depends on truth. Therefore they say truth is the supreme (means of liberation).

[According to Sāyaṇa, the Wind-god attained the exalted office of regulating the movements of air in the atmosphere by virtue of truthfulness practised by him as a human being in a previous life. So also it must be a man who was firmly devoted to truth—on his departure from this world—that is appointed to the office of the sun in the sky because of truthfulness practised by him as a man. Life is extremely difficult, if not impossible, for a habitual liar, simply for the reason that his utterances will not be trusted by anybody. The words of a prevaricator are change-Therefore they cannot be the foundation for action. The quibbler also will be rejected as unreli-Every exaggeration, every falsification, and every deception tends to undermine mutual trust, block communication, disrupt social cooperation and thus paves the way for frustration, bringing unhappiness to the individual, and the society and the nation. This being so, any intelligent man can plainly see that all regulation of human relations must depend on true statements. Therefore truth is given the first place of importance. The legend of the virtuous man regulating cosmic functions such as those exercised by the sun and the wind, under the rigorous law of self-devotion, points out that truthfulness and other virtues are not only rewarded here but also that they pay splendidly hereafter.]

3. By tapas performed in the beginning gods attained godhood. By tapas seers attained to heaven gradually. By tapas we get rid of our enemies who stand in the way of our acquisitions. Everything is founded in tapas. Therefore they say tapas is the supreme (means of liberation).

[This passage is partly the same as $Taittir\bar{\imath}yabr\bar{a}h$ -mana III. 12. 3. 1. Tapas here may be religious fast or painstaking performance of religious duties. Godhood and Rṣihood are the result of religious penance.
Even welfare in the world is not possible without forbearance and painful exertion. The word $ar\bar{a}t\bar{i}$ is derived from the root ' $r\bar{a}$ to give'. The opposite of $r\bar{a}t\bar{i}$ (one who gives) is $ar\bar{a}t\bar{i}$ (one who does not concede to others or give even their dues). Such are the enemies of a person whom he seeks to get rid of from his path either by praying away or overcoming by self-effort.]

4. Persons who practise sense-control shake off their sin by that. Perfect ascetics reached heaven gradually through sense-control. Sense-control is inaccessible to ordinary creatures. Everything is founded in sense-control. Therefore they say sense-control is the supreme (means of liberation).

[The Kathopanisad II. 1. 1 informs us that the senses are placed in man by the Supreme as an outgoing current, and so man is usually an extrovert. Rarely we find one who can call back the senses from external attractions and contemplate the reality of his own Self. For the natural man, conscious practice of sense-control is almost unthinkable. A man without sense-control is like a river without banks. For, all his thoughts and activities run to waste. Hence all success depends upon sense-control. Therefore dama is here praised as the supreme means of liberation.]

therefore रामम् calmness of mind प्रमम् supreme वदन्ति they say.

5. Those who are of a tranquil disposition do good merely by calmness. Sages have attained to heaven through calmness of mind. Calmness of mind is inaccessible for the ordinary creatures. Everything is founded on calmness of mind. Therefore they say that calmness of mind is the supreme means of liberation.

[S'ama is the calm disposition of mind brought about by the absence of passions. A person who has cultivated a habitual disposition of calmness can do good to others, because of the atmosphere of tranquillity which he creates around himself. This virtue is the characteristic mark of a muni or sage, and by it he reaches a state where there is no sorrow. Literally the word nāka means a state in which there is no want of happiness.]

6. Giving of gift in the shape of dakṣinā is the secure abode of the sacrifices. In the world all creatures subsist on a giver. People remove by gifts those who are envious and malignant towards them. By gift the unfriendly become friendly. Everything is established in gift. Therefore they say that the gift is the supreme means of liberation.

[Any single word like reward, fee, gift or present in English cannot be an equivalent for the word dakṣiṇā. Dakiṣṇā is the gifts given to the Rtviks and competent witnesses of a sacrifice at the conclusion of it by the institutor of the sacrifice out of his free will and according to the terms of engagement. Often it exceeds the terms, giving greater satisfaction to the participants and the witnesses. On such free gifts received depended the teaching and learning of the Vedas as well as the conservation and propagation of Vedic religion unfettered by any external pressure. Therefore dakṣiṇā is considered to be the home of a sacrifice. By this it is meant that the religion of the Vedas would die out without dakṣiṇā, just as a family will lanquish without a shelter. In the Rgveda the term arāti denotes spirits who frustrate good intentions and disturb the happiness of men. These are dispelled by gifts. Proverbially friends are made by gifts.]

धर्म: religious righteousness विश्वस्य of all जगत: the universe प्रतिष्ठा support. लोके in the world धर्मिष्ठम् to him who is fully devoted to religious righteousness प्रजा: subjects उपसर्पन्ति approach. धर्मेण by dharma पापम् sin अपनुदति chases away. धर्मे in dharma सर्वम् all प्रतिष्ठितम् is supported. तस्मात् therefore धर्मम् dharma परमम् supreme वदन्ति they say.

7. Dharma, religious righteousness, is the support of the whole universe. All people draw near a person who is fully devoted to dharma. Through dharma a person chases away sin. All are supported by dharma. Therefore they say that dharma is the supreme means of liberation.

[The word dharma translated as religious righteousness or religious law is extolled here as the foundation of humanity—nay of all living beings.
When the stronger oppress the weak, for the latter the only protection is an appeal to dharma. In a society such an appeal becomes successful only when the dharma of that society is guarded by a sovereign who is himself dharmistha. Again dharma, in the form of prāyas citta or expiation, cleanses the transgressor of the moral law; and in the shape of danda or punishment it purifies the guilty who violate the social law. So dharma is here praised as the support of all. Here dharma comes close to justice.]

प्रजनेनं वै प्रतिष्ठा छोके साधु प्रजायास्तन्तुं तन्वानः पितृ-णामनणो भवति ; तदेव तस्यानृणुं तस्मात प्रजनेनं पर्मं वदंन्ति ॥ ८ ॥

प्रजननमपत्यं यदस्ति तदेव प्रतिष्ठा लोके वंशस्य स्थितिहेतु:। साधु समीचीनं यथा भवति तथा शास्त्रीयेण विधिना प्रजाया: तन्तुं सन्तानं अथवा अविच्छेदं तन्वानः विस्तारयन् पितॄणां आरृण्यं गतः भवति ।
पुत्रिणः तदेव हि प्रजननं ऋणापाकरणहेतुः भवति । तस्मात् प्रजननं
अपत्योत्पादनं परमं मोक्षसाधनमिति वदन्ति ॥

प्रजननम् procreation व indeed लोके in the world प्रतिष्ठा foundation of the race. साधु well प्रजाया: of progeny तन्तुम् unbroken succession तन्वान: he who extends पितृणाम् of departed ancestors अनृण: one who has discharged the debt भवति becomes. तत् that एव alone तस्य of that man (who owes the debt of progeny to his ancestors) अनृणम् clearance of debt. तसात् therefore प्रजननम् procreation प्रमम् supreme वदन्ति they say.

8. In this world procreation is certainly the foundation of the race. A person who extends the continuity of progeny in the right way by rearing offsprings, according to the scriptural rules, discharges his debt towards his departed ancestors. That alone is the way for him to pay off his debts towards his ancestors. Therefore they say that procreation is the supreme means of liberation.

[The Taittirīyasamhitā (VI. 3. 10) contains the famous statement that a man is born with a congenital burden of a threefold debt—towards the gods, the departed ancestors and the seers—जायमानो ह वै पुरुष: तिमि: ऋणवां जायते। This idea is elaborated later in the traditional codes at length. Manu says that a man should plan to get out of the round of birth and death only after paying off the debts he has contracted naturally by his being born as a link in the chain of worldly existence maintained by biological heredity. The scripture prescribes three ways of discharging the debt to the three creators mentioned above. Man's existence on the earth is at the mercy of gods who guide and control the processes of Nature. Life is impossible without sun and rain and wind and plants and the like. In return to such favours received from gods for the sustenance of life, man ought to worship gods and get his freedom from indebtedness to them. The entire human culture proceeds step by step by the momentum of knowledge gained, preserved and transmitted by seers of the past. Each man owes a burden of intellectual indebtedness to past knowledge which is always much more than he is conscious of or ready to admit. The ancient seers will always feel happy and will consider their debts discharged, if the successive generations preserve and enlarge the knowledge which a latter generation has inherited from a past generation, and transmit the same to coming generations. A man can, therefore, pay back the debt he owes to the seers only by learning the wisdom which they have transmitted to their children by devolution. One's link in the chain of spiritual and intellectual heredity preserved through the line of teachers and students is kept up only in this way. Everyone owes a third debt to the biological ancestors culminating in their own parents. The sacrifices which a good father makes in order to raise and rear worthy children are impressively portrayed in legend, fiction. poetry and history. A worthy son is exonerated from his debt of having received the protection and care of his sire only when he confers the same to his offsprings. It is, therefore, stated here that procreation is the foundation of society and that only a person who rears children rightly in the way approved by the scriptures and who allows no break in the continuity of his race is absolved from this kind of debt. The importance of procreation is thus set forth. The adverb sādhu in the text implies that those who are fit only for parentage, and not for parenthood approved by the scriptures, hardly fulfils the condition.

9. The great sacrificial Fires are indeed the three-fold knowledge and the path leading to godhood. Of them, the Gārhapatya Fire is Rgveda, the earth and the Rathantara sāman chant; Anvāhāryapacana is Yajurveda midregion and the Vāmadevya sāman chant; Āhavanīya is the Sāmaveda, the heavenly worlds and the Brhat sāman chant. Therefore they say that the sacrificial Fires are the supreme means of liberation.

[This is a eulogy of the three well-known sacrificial fires mentioned here by name. The Fires are said to be the Vedas, because without them religious work taught in them cannot be accomplished. They are the path to godhood because yajña performed with their help leads to godhood.]

अग्निहोत्तर सीयं प्रातर्गृहाणां निष्कितिः स्विष्टर सहुतं यैज्ञकतूनां प्रायणर सुवर्गस्य छोकस्य ज्योतिस्तस्मीदिमहोत्रं पर्मं वदन्ति ॥ १० ॥

सायं प्रातः च अनुष्ठितं अग्निहोतं ग्रहाणां निष्कृतिः अर्थात् ग्रह-संबन्धिनां पापानां शोधनम् । किञ्च अग्निहोत्रं स्विष्टं सुहुतं च, अर्थात् यागहोमयोः शोभनत्वहेतुः । यज्ञानां कत्नां च प्रायणं प्रारंभकम् । अत एव स्वर्गस्य लोकस्य ज्योतिः प्रदीपवत् प्रकाशकम् । तस्मादिग्निहोतं परमं मोक्षसाधनं इति वदन्ति ॥

सायं प्रात: (च) in the evening and in the morning अमिहोत्रम् oblation into the fire known by that name यहाणाम् incidental to housekeeping (पापानाम् sins) निष्कृति: expiation; स्वष्टम् good yāga सुहुतम् good homa यसकत्नाम् of yajñas and kratus प्रायणम् commencement; सुवर्गस्य (स्वर्गस्य) of heaven लोकस्य of world ज्योति: beacon. तसात् therefore अमिहोत्रम् Agnihotra प्रमम् supreme वदन्ति they say.

10. The performance of Agnihotra at dawn and sunset is an expiation for sins incidental to housekeeping. It is a good yāga and a good homa and also it is the commencement of all yajña-s and kratu-s. It is a beacon to the heavenly world. Therefore they say Agnihotra is the supreme means of liberation.

[In the first clause the understood word pāpānām after arhānām is to be supplied. Bhattabhāskara says that sins incidental to housekeeping such as hurt caused to living beings while carrying on cultivation, transportation and preparation of food are removed by the regular performance of Agnihotra. Sāyana takes the view that failure to perform it will enrage the fire which may consume the house. The untranslated technical words need explanation. 1. Yaga—offering of suitable substances to deities without any binding string. 2. Homa-oblation of those substances into the properly consecrated Fire. 3. Yaiña—the seven sacrifices in which offerings are made to the deities in the fire. These are called अग्न्याधेय. अप्रिहोत्र, दर्शपूर्णमास, आग्रयण, चातुर्मास्य, निरूढपशुबन्ध and सोत्रामणि । 4. Kratu—a somayāga in which a Yūpa (sacrificial post) is installed. The seven kratus or somasamsthas are अमिष्टोम, अत्यमिष्टोम, उक्थ्य, बोड्यो, वाजपेय, अतिरात्र and अप्तोर्याम | Both these types of sacrifices must be commenced with Agnihotra. The word juotis literally means light and here a mounted light or beacon acting as a guide.]

यज्ञ: ज्योतिष्टोमादिकं परमं तप: उत्तमं मोक्षसाधनसिति अपरे मन्यन्ते। यज्ञो हि देवानां त्रिय:। ते हि देवा: पूर्वानुष्ठितेन यज्ञेन दिवं गता:। यज्ञेन एव ते तदा तदा असुरान् अपानुदन्त विनाशितवन्तः। यज्ञेन द्विपन्तः शलवः मित्राणि भवन्ति। यज्ञे सर्वे प्रतिष्ठितम्। तस्मात् यज्ञं परमं मोक्षसाधनं वदन्ति॥

यज्ञ: sacrifice इति thus. यज्ञ: sacrifice हि indeed देवानाम् for gods (प्रिय: dear). यज्ञेन by sacrifice हि verily देवा: gods दिवम् heaven गता: reached. यज्ञेन by sacrifice असुरान् demons अपानुदन्त drove away. यज्ञेन by sacrifice द्विपन्त: those who are hostile मित्रा (मित्राणि) friends भवन्ति become. यज्ञे in sacrifice सर्वम् all प्रतिष्ठितम् is supported. तस्मात् therefore यज्ञम् sacrifice प्रमम् supreme वदन्ति they say.

11. Others devoted to the Vedic religion say that sacrifice is the means of liberation. Sacrifice is indeed dear to gods. Verily gods have attained to heaven by their previous deeds of sacrifice. They have driven away demons by sacrifice. By sacrifice those who are hostile become friendly. Everything is supported by sacrifice. Therefore they say sacrifice is the supreme means of liberation.

[The Brāhmaṇa portion of the Vedas declare that demons are destroyed by gods through the power of sacrifice. It is believed that a sacrifice like Jyotiṣṭoma will fulfil any desire entertained by its institution, and that by its power anyone who disliked him may be transformed into a friend of his.]

मान् सं वै प्राजापृत्यं पिवत्रं मान्सेन मनेसा साधु पैश्यति मन्सा ऋषयः प्रजा अस्मिन्त मान्से सर्वे प्रतिष्ठितं तस्मीन्मान् सं पेर्मं वद्नित ॥ १२ ॥

मनसा उत्पाद्यं यत् मानसं उपासनं अस्ति तदेव १ जापते: स्वभूतं, अत एव अतिशयेन पवित्रं च, अथवा प्रजापतिपदप्राप्तिसाधनं चित्तशुद्धिहेतु: । मानसेन उपासनेन युक्तं मनः यदस्ति तेन मनसा योगी साधु पश्यिति सम्यक् साक्षात्करोति । मनसा एकाग्रमनोयुक्ताः ऋत्रयः विश्वामित्रादयः सङ्कल्पमालेण प्रजाः असृजन्त । मानसे सर्वं भ्रतिष्ठितम् । तस्मात् मानसं परमं मोक्षसाधनं वदन्ति ॥

मानसम् inward concentration वै indeed प्राजापत्यम् belonging to Prajāpati पवित्रम् holy. मानसेन मनसा by the mind possessing inward concentration साधु good प्रयति sees. मनसा through concentration of mental powers ऋषयः seers प्रजाः progeny असृजन्त created. मानसे in inward concentration सर्वम् all प्रतिष्ठितम् is supported. तस्मात् therefore मानसम् mental concentration प्रमम् supreme वदन्ति they say.

12. Inward worship or mental concentration is indeed the means of attaining to the state of Prajāpati and so that is holy. Those who possess a mind endowed with the power of inward concentration see and realise what is good. Through mental concentration, seers like Visvāmitra created subjects by mere wish. All depends upon this power of the mind. Therefore they say that the power of inward concentration is the supreme means of liberation.

[Bhaṭṭabhāskara takes the word mānasa here as tapas in the form of vairāgya engendered in the mind of a person. This belongs to Prajāpati and in the absence of it distractions divert the mind from the goal. Sāyaṇa takes mānasa in the sense of inward concentration and worship. The sermon given by Prajāpati to his son Sauparṇeya Āruṇi, reported here in this Section in the form of an anecdote, is meant to test, one by one, the twelve sādhanas given in the previous section with glorifications appropriate to each. When each item was described as supreme, perhaps Āruṇi was not convinced that it was so; and therefore Prajāpati went on presenting these items one after another in succession until he came to the last one called Nyāsa.]

13. Wise seers declare that sannyāsa mentioned as the supreme means of liberation is Brahman, and that Brahman is the Universal Spirit, is supremely blissful, is self-born, is the protector of created beings, is the soul of time, and so forth.

[The transcendence of sannyāsa as a means of liberation over the other eleven items is here emphasised by stating it to be non-different from Brahmā, the self-born Universal Being. The word katama, according to Bhaṭṭabhāskara, is He who is indeterminable; samvatsara is analysed by him as He by whom creatures are properly settled—samyag vasanti anena bhūtāni iti. Taking this meaning, samvatsara is identified with the sun; because it is the sun that gives light and rain, and help creatures to live.]

संवत्सरोऽसावीदित्यो य एष अदित्ये पुरुषः स परमेष्ठी ब्रह्मात्मा ॥ १४ ॥

कालात्मकः संवत्सरः असौ आदित्यः एव, आदित्यस्य गतागतेन तस्य निर्वर्त्यमानत्वात् । य एष आदित्यमण्डले पुरुषः स एव परमेष्ठी हिरण्यगर्भः, स एव सर्वजगत्कारणं ब्रह्म, सर्वजगदात्मभूतश्च ॥ संवत्सर: year असौ yonder आदित्य: sun. आदित्ये in the sun य: he who एष: this पुरुष: person स: he परमेष्ठी Hiranyagarbha Brahmā ब्रह्म Brahman आत्मा Ātman.

14. The year is the yonder sun. That Person who is in the sun is Hiranyagarbha; He is Paramesthin (the protector of the universe) and Brahmātman—Supreme Reality that is the innermost Self of all creatures.

[Here again sannyāsa is praised through association with higher realities. The word samvatsara stands for duration of time which determines the origin, continuation and disappearance of objects in the universe. Time is measured by diurnal movement of the sun and the seasons which make the civil year. Time is identified with the sun because we become cognizant of time by the change brought about in Nature through the influence of the sun and by the demarcation made by his rising and setting. The sun again is not merely the visible orb in the sky, but the divine Person contemplated there—the divine Person who is the same as the Supreme in his transcendent and immanent aspects.]

(एवं भ्रत्वा becoming thus) योनि: cause (of the universe) ब्रह्म Brahman (भवति becomes.)

15. Those rays by which the sun gives heat, the same rays transform water into rain-cloud which showers the rain. By the rain-cloud herbs and trees come into existence. From herbs and trees food is produced. By the use of food the breaths and senses are nourished. When the lifebreath is nourished one gets bodily strength. Bodily strength gives the capacity to practise tapas (in the shape of self-control, religious fast, and so forth). As the result of such tapas, faith in scriptural truths springs into existence. By faith mental power comes. By mental power sense-control is made possible. By sense-control reflection is engendered. From reflection calmness of mind results. Conclusive experience of Truth follows calmness. By conclusive experience of Truth remembrance of It is en-Remembrance produces continuous gendered. remembrance. From continuous remembrance results unbroken direct realisation of Truth. By such realisation a person knows the Atman. For this reason, he who gives food gives all these. For, it is found that the vital breaths and the senses of creatures are from food. that reflection functions with the vital breath and the senses, that unbroken direct realisation comes from reflection and that bliss comes from unbroken direct realisation of Truth. Thus having attained bliss one becomes the Supreme which is the source of the universe.

[This passage is called Annastuti (praise of food). The translation is based on Sāyaṇa. According to Bhaṭṭabhāskara, sānti means atadvyāvṛtti or svābhimatālambanapratiṣṭham manaḥ i.e., exclusion of all thoughts from the mind other than what is at the focus of attention, or firmly fixing the mind on the object of concentration. He takes the last two words as compounded and explains brahmayoni as brahmaprāptihetuḥ.]

16. He by whom all this universe is pervaded-the earth and the mid-region, the heaven and the quarters and the subquarters—that Person is fivefold and is constituted of five substances. He who has attained supreme knowledge through sannyāsa is, indeed, this Person. He is all that is perceptible at present, was in the past and will be in the future. Though apparently human, his true nature is that which is settled by the enquiry into the Vedas and what is attained by his new birth in right knowledge. He is firmly established in the richness of knowledge imparted by his guru, as also in his faith and in Truth. He has become the self-resplendent. Being such a one he remains beyond the darkness of ignorance. Āruni, having become one possessed of knowledge by realising Him, the Supreme, through sannyāsa, and with your mind fixed in the heart, do not again fall a prey to death. Because sannyāsa is thus the supreme means of realisation, therefore wise men declare that to be above all other means of liberation.

[Here in this passage again the person who has attained supreme knowledge is described with a view to praise sannyāsa. A man of Self-realisation identifies himself with the Supreme Person who is the whole universe past, present and future. The fivefold knowledge of the senses, the five attributes of the elements, the five primordial elements, the five faculties of knowledge, the five faculties of action, the five breaths, and the five sheaths are meant here by the fivefoldness of the Purusa. The terms jijnāsaklpta, rtajā and ravisthā are not in common usage and so they are paraphrased according to Sāyaṇa's interpretation. The expression tamasoparistat is substituted by tapaso varisthat in the longer version. Bhattabhaskara takes it to be tamasah uparistāt which makes the meaning easy although the sandhi becomes arbitrary. Sāyana takes tamasā as an incomplete statement filled out by adding viyuktah. The concluding clause is taken to be an exhortation made by Prajapati to his son, Aruni, to go beyond death by realising the Supreme, adopting sannyasa as the means of it. The last clause affirms the conclusion as already hinted at, namely, that sannyasa transcends all other means of liberation. According to Bhaṭṭabhāskara, from jijñāsaklpta to upayāhi vidvān is a single stanza in the tristubh, and mṛtyw means want of zeal for spiritual practice and death.]

Thou art taken in the upayāma vessel as soma juice for oblation. We worship Thee the Supreme who art such for the manifestation of Light.

[After sannyāsa the seeker of the Supreme practises contemplation taking praṇava as the aid for focussing his thoughts. Unbroken thought of the Supreme is beset with many hindrances. To remove them the Supreme Being is entreated. Vasuraņva is a rare word explained here according to Sāyaṇa's interpretation. Bhaṭṭabhāskara reads Vasuraṇya and explains, वद्धन: वरिष्ठज्ञानस्य ब्रह्मभावलक्षणस्य रणयिता गमयिता. Each individual Self is united by the Sūtrātman, here called prāṇa whose background is Brahman. The reading visvasṛk in the place of visvasṛt is accepted by Bhaṭṭabhāskara. The meaning of the word is: the creator of the universe. The light of the various luminaries are a loan from the Supreme and the Supreme is said to be present even in the soma oblation. This is a stanza in atijagatī ṣaṭpadā metre ending in Yajus.]

18. (The sannyāsin having meditated upon the Supreme) should concentrate his thoughts on Him uttering the syllable Om. This, the syllable Om, verily is the substance of many great Upanisads and a secret guarded by the gods without imparting to the unfit. He who practises meditation on the Supreme thus with the aid of praṇava after sannyāsa attains to the unlimited greatness of the Supreme. By that he attains to the greatness of Brahman. Thus the secret knowledge has been imparted.

[Here the Sannyāsin is first enjoined to worship God as the Antaryāmin and Creator to remove the obstacles in the spiritual path and then commanded to focus his inward attention on the Supreme Reality through the symbol and the sound form of praṇava. Praṇava is then praised as the essence of all Upaniṣads and the secret which gods do not divulge to incompetent aspirants. Of course praṇava stands for the Supreme Truth. The Sannyāsin thus attains to the greatness of the Supreme Reality, the goal of his life. Mahopaniṣadam is also interpreted as Mahatī prasastā vidyā upaniṣādati ābhya upaniṣadbhya iti. The suffix 'a' is possessive.]

1. The institutor of the sacrifice, in the case of the sacrifice offered by a Sannyāsin who has attained supreme knowledge in the manner already described, is his own Self. His faith is his wife; his body is his sacrificial fuel; his chest is his altar; his hairs are his holy grass; the Veda he has learnt is his tuft of hair; his heart is his sacrificial post; his desire is his clarified butter; his anger is his animal to be immolated; his austerity is his fire; his sensecontrol is his immolator; his gifts are his dakṣinā; his speech is his Hotr priest; his breath is his Udgātr priest; his sight is his Adhvaryu priest; his mind is his Brahman priest; his hearing is his Agnīd priest; the span of his life is his preparatory rite; what he eats that is his oblation; what he drinks that is his drinking of soma juice; when he delights himself that is his Upasad rite; when he walks, sits and stands that is his Pravargya rite; that which is his mouth that is his Ahavanīya Fire; that which is his utterance that is his offering of oblation; that which is his knowledge that is his Homa sacrifices; when he eats in the afternoon and forenoon that is his Samidhoma (oblation of fuel in the fire); the three divisions of the day—forenoon, midday and evening—relating to him are his savanas; the day and night are his Darsapūrņamāsa sacrifices; the half months and the months are his Cāturmāsya sacrifice; the seasons are his Pasubandha sacrifice; the samvatsaras and the parivatsaras are his Ahargana sacrifice; the total sacrifice is, indeed, his Sattra; death is the Avabhrtha or completion of his sacrifice. That person who knows this, namely, the conduct of a Sannyāsin—covering all the duties from Agnihotra to Sattra and terminating in death overcome by old age-and who dies during the period of the sun's movement to the north attains to the overlordship of gods like Indra and then reaches identity or companionship with the sun. On the other hand he who dies during the period when the sun moves to the south gets only the greatness of the manes and then attains to the identity or companionship with the moon. A brāhmaṇa who knows separately the greatness of the sun and the moon realises these two; but he who has become a knower of Hiranyagarbha wins further. that knowledge which was acquired in the world of Hiranyagarbha, he attains to the greatness of Brahman, the Supreme who is Existence-Knowledge-Bliss, at the dissolution of the world of Hiranyagarbha. Thus the secret knowledge here, and in this Upanisad, is concluded.

[This Section is allied to the Puruṣavidyā, reference to which is made in the Brahmasūtras III. 3. 24.

Those who are ultra-loyal to the operating religion of the Vedas hold the opinion that the entire Veda is meant for laying down commands that govern the life of religious aspirants. If this thesis is accepted, even a Sannyāsin, who has become liberatedin-life by adopting the supreme means of liberation. namely sannyāsa, described in the Sections above, is under obligation to engage himself in sacrificial duties. According to the Uttaramīmāmsā this position is not tenable. What the Sannyasin performs is called atmayajña, which is not the usual form of mental, physical and social operations. It is Yajña only in allegory. Through an extended simile the Yajña of the Sannyāsin is described here. The conventional sacrifice has various ingredients: Persons, place, time, substances, commencement, completion, order, varieties. All these are brought into this picture here. The description. of the sacrifice starts with the Yajamāna or the institutor of the sacrifice along with his Patnī, the Either of these by demise or withdrawal brings wife. a sacrifice to an abrupt end. In the allegory here, the individual Self acting as the Witness of the functions of the body and the senses is the Yajamāna, because all the functions of the body and the mind are for his sake. A Sannyāsin's life is rooted in an unswerving faith in the truth taught by the scriptures and by his preceptor; he never strays away from that faith; and so this faith takes the place of the wife who must be present in the real Yajña. His body will be finally consigned into the holy fire as a corpse and so it is his fuel. The necessaries of a sacrifice are stocked in the altar, so also the thoughts connected with the sacrifice are kept within one's chest. On the spread out holy grass (Kusa) Gods are in-The hair on the chest within which lies the heart in which the Sannyasin meditates-stands for such a grass seat. Knowledge of the Veda must be always supporting the life of the Sannyasin and the Yajamana and so that is compared to the tuft of hair called sikha which should not be removed, except for a vow from the head of a Brāhmana. The heart of the Sannyāsin is said to be the Yūpa (the sacrificial post) on which the animals (anger and the like) are tied and slaughtered. Clarified butter offered into the consecrated Fire indicates that desires are kindled when they are stimulated and that they are extinguished by fulfilment. So also ajya enkindles or puts out the fire. In the Somayaga victims are immolated. Similarly anger and other passions are to be slayed by the Sannyasin in his mystic sacrifice. Without the consecrated Fire no sacrifice is possible. For the Sannyasin, that fire is tapas in the form of sense-control and calmness. Some books read dharma in the place of dama or calmness. Whether the word be dharma or dama it represents here the immolator. The word dana is taken to be understood before the term daksinā. In the case of the Sannyasin, giving of knowledge or the performance of duties proper to his station is the daksinā. A sacrifice has many participants when it is in progress. They are ग्रहपति:, ब्रह्मा, पत्नी, उद्राता. प्रस्तोता, प्रतिहर्ता, उपगाता, सदस्याः, होता, मैत्रावरुणः, ब्राह्मणा-च्छंसी. नेष्टा. पोता, अच्छावाक:, अमीत् , मावस्तुत् , उन्नेता, सुब्रह्मण्यः, अध्वर्यः. प्रतिप्रस्थाता, विशास्ता, ध्रवगोपः, हविष्येषी, इध्मवाहः and शमिता। Of these, eight are mentioned here as the Self, faith, sense-control, speech, life-breath, sight, mind and hearing of the Sannyāsin. $D\bar{\imath}k\bar{s}\bar{a}$ is the period of the Yajamāna's vow. In the case of the Sannyāsin that is his whole life or his period of fast. He eats and drinks in the same way as the Rtvik offers oblations into the consecrated Fire or as he drinks the soma juice ceremoniously. The Sannyasin finds pleasure in meditating on the Supreme within him-That takes the place of the Upasad sacrifice. Upasad is the name of one Isti to be performed three days in the Jyotistoma and other sacrifices after dīkṣā and before the soma day. In this way प्रवर्ग्य, दर्शपूर्णमास, चातुर्मीस्य, पशुबन्ध and अहर्गण are also to be understood as names of important sacrifices which are materially performed outside. Here correspondence with them and some aspects of a Sannyāsin's life is pointed out. The word savana literally means the pressing of the soma juice for a somayaga in the morning, in the noon and in the evening. Sometimes the three baths during these three times which a Sannyāsin takes are also noted by it. The cycle of sixty years is divided into twelve units of five years, each unit being called a yuga. The five groups of years which make the yuga are called संवत्सर, परिवत्सर, इदावत्सर, इदावत्सर and इद्वत्सर in the Taittirīyabrāhmana III. 10. 3. Of these two are mentioned here implying the rest also. The word sarvavedasa means a sacrifice in which all possessions set apart for it are given away without residue as dakṣiṇā. Here every part of the body of the Sannyāsin is sacrificed in the fire of tapas and therefore the whole duration of his life is called a sattra or a sacrificial session. According to Bhaṭṭa-bhāskara S'amayitā is the person who cooks food for offering and the term Brāhmaṇa at the close of the text stands for all persons.

Next follows the description of kramamukti or gradual liberation via Brahmaloka. Death during uttarayana or the period denoted by the sun's apparent movement away from the southern solstitial point is praised as superior to death in daksinayana or the period denoted by the sun's apparent movement away from the northern solstitial point. The word jarāmaryam in the text is explained as jarayā vayohānyā mriyate iti. This implies that a man as a rule has no religious sanction to commit suicide. The Sannyasin who lives his prescribed life until death, is performing internally the perpetual Agnihotra. And such a Sannyasin attains to mukti through Hiranyagarbhaloka, even though he has not attained to Brahmabhāva and sadyomukti during his life on earth. Thus the whole Section describes Atmayajña which is the highest of all sacrifices. This Upanisad which started with the description of the Supreme Being as Prajāpati is completed with the account of sannyāsa eulogised as the Supreme. A complete circuit is portrayed in this great text: Prajāpati's entering into the womb as the Jīva, the spiritual evolution of the Jīva through karma, upāsanā and the performance of other religious duties; and, finally, the Jīva's attainment of the Supreme Bliss or realisation of the Self through sannyāsa.]
